Introduction

In the Western world Armenian studies are seriously hampered by the inaccessibility of many primary and secondary source materials.

Especially materials from Armenia as well as from pre- and post-revolutionary Russia are often very hard to trace and to use.

The titles offered here are intended to provide a partial remedy for this situation. The books mentioned in the catalogue have been selected from the rich resources of the Helsinki University Library. The Armenian collection of this library comprises mainly Russian printings of pre-revolutionary times. A short description of the origin of this collection and its contents is to be found in T.-E. Eriksson, Die Armenische Büchersammlung der Universitätsbibliothek zu Helsinki (published in the Studia Orientalia 18, 1955, 3-85 and also in the Publications of the University Library at Helsinki, Vol. 24). The selection offered here was made from a handwritten catalogue prepared by the same author, which is kept in the Helsinki University Library. Classical works, source material, and philological literature are amply represented in this selection. Little attention has been given to modern literary works with the exception of folk poetry and folklore (such as works on the epic David of Sassun), which contain valuable dialect materials. Journals have been selected on the basis of completeness.

The abbreviation HHG (after titles up to 1800) refers to the corresponding entries in Hay hnatip grk'i matenagitakan ts'uts'ak (Erevan 1963), offered under No. BAR-401; the abbreviation D (for works from 1801 to 1850) refers to the corresponding entries in H. Davt'ian, Hay girk'ë 1801-1850 t'vakannerin. Matenagitut'yun (Erevan 1967).

Selected articles by Brosset and Langlois which first appeared in the publications of the Russian Academy of Sciences, have been added. Some other reprinted titles are reproduced from a private source.

According to present plans, additions will be made in the years to come, and thus a representative collection of Armenological publications will gradually be built up.

The transcription is based on the Library of Congress system.

A transliteration table is available on request. Our heartfelt thanks are hereby expressed to the staff of the University Library of Helsinki for their generous cooperation, without which this project would have been impossible. We also thank all those whose comments, criticism, and encouragement have contributed to the selection presented here.
