ANNUAL REPORT
1961 - - - 1962

The Judge Advocate General's School

FOREWORD

It is with great pleasure and much satisfaction that I present the Commandant's Annual Report for Fiscal Year 1962. Although this represents the first report of this type published by The Judge Advocate General's School, it is intended that it become an integral feature in chronicling the continuing development of the Army's military law center.

The report has a three-fold purpose:

1. To summarize the operations of the School during the past fiscal year.
2. To preserve in printed form a record of the School, its staff and faculty, students, and enlisted personnel.
3. To describe the various courses of instruction offered at The Judge Advocate General's School.

This report reflects continued progress on the part of The Judge Advocate General's School. The value of any educational institution, however, is measured by how well it prepares its student body for the roles which await them upon graduation. Accordingly, our goal, as in the past, is to increase and make more effective our services to the Army by thorough preparation of officers for service in the Judge Advocate General's Corps.

THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL'S SCHOOL TODAY

MISSION

The Army lawyer of today is a carefully selected and highly trained specialist in military law. Not merely a lawyer, he receives intensive training on a graduate law school level in many aspects of military law before he begins his military law practice. Training the modern Army lawyer is the function of The Judge Advocate General's School, located at Charlottesville, Virginia.

The Judge Advocate General's School, located on the Grounds of the University of Virginia opposite the Law School, is the Army's military law center. It is an approved law school rated by the American Bar Association inspectors as offering the highest quality specialized graduate program in law to be found in America, and provides a graduate law school atmosphere where the modern Army lawyer is professionally trained in the many aspects of military law. The School's function is to orient the Army lawyer in the fundamentals of military law, to keep his training current, and to give him specialized legal training on an advanced level. As a military law center, it attaches considerable importance to its research and publications, including texts and case books, as well as several legal periodicals.

The Judge Advocate General's School operates on a year-round basis. Over 6,000 students have graduated from courses offered at the School in its 11 years of operation; during Fiscal Year 1962, 803 students were graduated from courses offered at the School. Classes are held in the University of Virginia Law School, where many of the JAG School faculty maintain their offices. There, in the Law School, the JAG students can avail themselves of the largest law library in the South.

All newly commissioned officers in the Judge Advocate General's Corps receive an introductory course at the JAG School. This 10-weeks' course is designed to train these newly commissioned lawyers in the fundamentals of military law and prepare them to advise the commander and his staff on legal problems, to perform the duties of trial and defense counsel before general courts-martial, to review reports of investigations and cases tried before summary and special courts-martial, and to give legal assistance to servicemen.

The course includes instruction on military justice, military administrative law, claims, procurement law, military science, civil and international law, and staff judge advocate operations.

Two such courses are held each year, one in the fall and one in the spring.

These students come from all over the United States, and even from allied nations. They bring to their classes their varied experiences as citizens and lawyers, and the training of many different law schools. Upon their graduation, they are assigned to military posts throughout the United States, to such places as San Francisco, Chicago, San Antonio, New York City, Washington, and to nations in such foreign countries as France, Korea, Iran, and Ethiopia.

Outstanding career military lawyers return to the JAG School for a 34-week course in military law. This course is similar to the law schools' masters programs. The student is thoroughly immersed in the many subjects of import to the military: legal history, jurisprudence, admiralty, military justice, military administrative law, procurement law, international law, comparative law, claims, civil affairs, legal assistance, military reservations, military training, and counterinsurgency. In addition, each career class student is required to present a thesis on a significant problem area in military law. These students also participate in a logistical field exercise with career course students from other service schools.

The School also conducts several 1-3 week courses for judge advocates and for civilian attorneys employed by the armed services and federal government whose work lies within a specialty. Military justice, procurement law, contract termination, international law, civil affairs law, civil law, and military affairs are among those courses offered.

Reservists not on active duty may also attend a two-week refresher course in the summer, which course emphasizes current trends and developments.

For persons not in residence, a number of legal training programs are offered by the School. Judge advocates in the field continue their military legal training by taking extension courses utilizing the "home study" method. Reservists not on active duty attend one of the many branch reserve military legal training schools located in population centers throughout the country, where, in 24 two-hour sessions, they are kept informed on current military legal trends and developments.

The Judge Advocate General's School uniquely contributes as a military law center in maintaining the high standard of professional excellence of the military lawyer. This well trained and well prepared modern Army lawyer who wears the insignia of the quill, sword and wreath is a credit to the legal profession and serves his country well.

HISTORY

Although judge advocates have served the United States Army since 1775, no effort was made to provide them with formal training in military law until the opening days of World War II. In preceding years, newly appointed judge advocates were trained empirically, but the Army's swift expansion soon emphasized the need for instructing attorneys entering the Corps in the manifold aspects of their new specialty.

In February 1942, as the uniformed lawyer's burden increased in complexity, specialized and refresher training courses for active duty personnel were commenced at the National University Law School, Washington, D. C. In August 1942, operations were transferred to the new Judge Advocate General's School, physically located at the University of Michigan Law School, Ann Arbor, Michigan, and commanded by Colonel Edward H. Young, JAGC. In the following months, hundreds of officers were trained at Ann Arbor. Indeed, by June 1944 over two-thirds of the active duty strength of the Judge Advocate General's Corps were graduates of the School. The end of the war, however, substantially reduced the need for trained military lawyers, and in 1946 the School, which had been initiated only on a temporary basis, was discontinued.

Nevertheless, plans were soon being devised in the Office of the Judge Advocate General to implement the recommendation of a committee, appointed in 1946 to study the administration of military justice, that provision be made for the training of Army lawyers in military law. The passage of the Uniform Code of Military Justice and the coming of the Korean conflict accentuated the need for judge advocate training facilities. As a consequence, another temporary training facility was established at Fort Myer, Virginia, again under the guidance of Colonel Young. Approximately 200 officers attended several five-week courses in basic military law taught by five officer-instructors.

By this time, the decision had been made to establish a permanent branch service school. Although the advisability of locating the School within 200 miles of Washington was recognized, sites as far away as Fort Crockett, Texas, and Fort Rodman, Massachusetts, were considered. In the spring of 1951, a survey was made of the facilities offered by the University of Virginia, and on 2 August 1951 the present Judge Advocate General's School was established. Major General Charles L. Decker, USA, the present Judge Advocate General, was the first Commandant of the School.

ORGANIZATION OF THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL'S SCHOOL

In order to properly accomplish its mission, The Judge Advocate General's School is divided into three departments and the Office of the School Secretary, all of which are directly subordinate to the School Commandant. (See Appendix I for an organizational chart of the School; Appendix II for an organizational roster of the School as of 30 June 1962; Appendix III for a list of changes in officer personnel during FY 1962; and Appendix IV for biographical background statements of all officer personnel of the Staff and Faculty.)

The Academic Department. This department conducts resident instruction for all active Army and reserve judge advocates and prepares texts for resident instruction. Resident courses include the Judge Advocate General (Special) Course and the Judge Advocate Officer Career Course, which cover the entire field of military law. The department also conducts several specialized courses including courses in military justice, procurement law, contract termination, international law, civil law, military affairs, civil affairs law, a combination resident and nonresident course, and refresher courses for reserve component officers. The department is comprised of the Civil and International Law, Military Affairs, Military Justice, Military Training, and Procurement Law Divisions.

The Nonresident Training Department. This department is responsible for developing nonresident training programs to insure the continued high level of professional legal competence required of military lawyers. In this connection, the department administers the judge advocate portion of the Army extension course program and maintains liaison through periodic staff visits with the USAR School of the judge advocate branch departments to which it distributes the instructional materials prepared by the School. Additionally, this department furnishes training material and allocates training time for the Judge Advocate General Service Organization (JAGSO) Detachments. A new function of the department is the preparation and writing of nonresident training material for use in extension courses, JAGSO teams, and in USAR Schools.

The Research and Publications Department. This department is responsible for the conduct and coordination of centralized research in the military legal field; prompt dissemination of the results of such research to members of the Judge Advocate General's Corps; formulation of policies and procedures to aid in maintaining a superior level of staff work by judge advocates; special project activities; the preparation of permanent and periodical military legal publications; the development and preparation of common course legal and quasi-legal instructional material including training films; and the planning and execution of an annual logistical exercise.

The Office of the School Secretary. This department formulates policies and, upon approval, executes policies concerning personnel, administration, security, management, and logistics. These responsibilities include the proper allocation and use of personnel, effective and efficient use of physical facilities, budget preparation and review, and analysis and control of fiscal matters.

Board of Visitors. To insure that the high standards of the School are maintained and to assist in the determination of areas requiring improvement, an annual inspection is made by the Board of Visitors. The Board, composed of five senior reserve officers who are leading practitioners and legal educators, inspects the manifold operations of the School and sums up its findings, with criticisms and recommendations, in a report submitted at the end of its inspection.

The present Board of Visitors is:

ACADEMIC ACTIVITIES

During Fiscal Year 1962, 16 resident courses were conducted with 803 students in attendance. (See Appendix V for a FY 1962 course cycle chart.) Attending these courses were 585 Army commissioned officers, 19 Navy and Marine Corps officers, 39 Air Force officers, and 154 civilians. In addition, six allied officers from Burma, Thailand, Vietnam, Korea, and Nicaragua attended courses at the School. (See Appendix VI for a breakdown of students in residence at the School during FY 1962.) Government agencies outside of the Department of Defense represented at the School during Fiscal Year 1962 included the Departments of Agriculture, Interior, Justice, and the Post Office; the General Services, National Aeronautics and Space, and Small Business Administrations; the Federal Aviation and National Security Agencies; the Atomic Energy and Federal Trade Commissions; the Bureau of Public Roads; and the General Accounting Office. Of the 585 Army officers attending courses, 357 were active duty personnel while the remaining 228 were reserve component officers.

Courses conducted during Fiscal Year 1962 were: Judge Advocate Officer Career Course; Judge Advocate General (Special) Course—2 cycles; Judge Advocate Officer Refresher (Reserve Component) Course—2 cycles; Contract Termination Course; Procurement Law Course—5 cycles; Military Justice Course; International Law Course—2 cycles; Civil Affairs Law Course—Phase I; and Civil Law Course.

Courses to be conducted during Fiscal Year 1963 are set forth in a chart in Appendix VII.

The official source of information concerning courses of instruction offered at Army service schools, including The Judge Advocate General's School, is the Army School Catalog (Department of the Army Pamphlet 20-21). That catalog provides detailed information for staff officers, commanders, and personnel officers who are concerned with the selection of individuals for school attendance; for officers and enlisted personnel who are interested in attending particular courses; and for others who wish to acquaint themselves with the Army's training opportunities. In addition, Army regulations govern related matters such as attendance by military personnel from foreign countries. These authorities should always be consulted for the latest official information. Particular inquiries concerning this School may also be addressed to the Commandant, The Judge Advocate General's School, United States Army, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Judge Advocate Officer Career Course. In this course, selected judge advocates are educated for leadership in the broad fields of military law. Branch training, to provide a thorough foundation in the duties and responsibilities appropriate to field grade judge advocates, is provided. The course offers advanced military law education designed to prepare the officer student to render legal services to higher commanders under varying conditions of present and future military operations and organization and provides the opportunity to contribute significantly to the development of military law through the thesis program.

This 34-week course (September-May) includes such subjects as: legal history, jurisprudence, admiralty, military justice, military administrative law, procurement law, international law, comparative law, claims, civil affairs, legal assistance, military reservations, military training, and counterinsurgency.

In the belief that it is of paramount importance for all Army judge advocates to be aware of those factors that shape our national and international policies, the guest speaker program was expanded last year to include several outstanding speakers in non-legal fields as well as in the traditional legal fields. A list of all guest lecturers and guest speakers who addressed classes during Fiscal Year 1962 may be found in Appendix VIII.

Awards were made on a continuing basis as follows:

a. A certificate for Professional Merit from the American Bar Association to the student with the highest overall academic standing.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL
JOSEPH P. RAMSAY
Director, Academic Department

CAPTAIN
ELIZABETH R. SMITH, JR.
Assistant to the Director

b. A book prize from the Lawyers Cooperative Publishing Company to the student with the highest overall scholastic record.

c. A certificate from the Judge Advocates Association to the outstanding student in military justice subjects.
A list of the award winners in the Tenth Career Course may be found in Appendix IX.

A field trip to the Engineering School, Fort Belvoir, Virginia, was successfully coordinated with a trip to the United States Supreme Court. At Fort Belvoir, the Career Class received instruction in nuclear weapons systems, demolition munitions effects, atomic demolition munitions, and mine warfare. Thirteen members of the Career Class were admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court on the motion of Brigadier General Nathan J. Roberts, Assistant Judge Advocate General for Civil Law.

Career Course students again participated in LOGEX, a controlled logistical exercise conducted annually at Fort Lee, Virginia. The exercise stresses the immense complexities of the administrative and logistical requirements for the support of a theater of operations. Inter-staff coordination and cross-service cooperation are required for successful play. Problems requiring judge advocate play illustrate the importance of legal services to the success of such operations. Play is arranged to teach this lesson not only to judge advocate players but to players in other staff sections as well.

The preparation of a thesis of graduate level quality is regarded as the heart of the Career Course. Members of the Tenth Career Course were given more than 300 scheduled hours to prepare and present their theses, and these grades were weighted at 25% of the student's final grade. Topics and scope notes for theses written by members of the Tenth Career Course may be found in Appendix X. Several of these papers will eventually be published in the Military Law Review.

The Career Course student must be a commissioned officer of the active Army, whose branch is the Judge Advocate General's Corps. He must have three to eight years of commissioned service and either a minimum of four years as a Judge Advocate General's Corps officer, or have credit for the Judge Advocate General (Special) Course and at least one year of subsequent experience, or the equivalent.

Judge Advocate General (Special) Course. This 10-week course is designed to train commissioned officers in the fundamentals of military law and prepare them to advise the commander and his staff concerning legal matters, to perform the duties of trial and defense counsel before general courts-martial, to review reports of investigations and cases tried before summary and special courts-martial, and to give legal assistance to servicemen.

The course includes instruction on military justice, military administrative law, claims, procurement law, military science, civil and international law, and staff judge advocate operations.

JAGEX, a command post exercise begun in 1960, was conducted again this year for both special classes. Play of the exercise requires one and one-half days. Students are divided into small groups and organize themselves into a typical Post Judge Advocate Section. An instructor is assigned to each group as the Staff Judge Advocate and Controller to supervise and pace the play, introduce problems in the play, furnish advice, play the role of any staff officer or commander from whom the player should obtain additional facts for solution of the problem, and review player solutions for accuracy, completeness, and practicality. Problems typical of those encountered in the day-to-day operations of a Post Judge Advocate Office were prepared by the four law-teaching divisions of the department. Several "live" problems were presented using additional staff and faculty personnel as actors.

A continuing feature of the instruction given Special Course students is the moot court program, an integral part of the instruction in military justice. Designed to give newly commissioned judge advocate officers practical experience in military trial work, the moot courts are simulated general courts-martial based on factual situations prepared by faculty members. The positions of trial and defense counsel, members of the court, and witnesses are filled by members of the Special Course on a rotating basis, while the law officer's part is taken by a member of the staff and faculty.

As in the Career Course, Special Course instruction was supplemented by a broad range of guest speakers and lecturers who addressed the classes on both legal and non-legal subjects. (See Appendix VIII for a complete list of guest speakers.)

Awards were made on a continuing basis as follows:

a. A Certificate for Professional Merit from the American Bar Association to the student with the highest overall academic standing.

b. A book prize from the Lawyers Cooperative Publishing Company to the student with the highest overall scholastic record.

c. A certificate from the Judge Advocates Association to the outstanding student in military justice subjects.

d. A certificate from the Foundation of the Federal Bar Association to the outstanding student in procurement law subjects.

e. "The Judge Paul W. Brosman Award," a certificate from the Institute of Military Law, to the outstanding student in military affairs subjects.

f. A plaque from the Association of the United States Army to the outstanding student in military science subjects while attending a Combat Arms Officer Orientation Course before attending the Special Course at The Judge Advocate General's School.

A list of recipients of these awards during the preceding year may be found in Appendix IX.

The student attending the Special Course must be a commissioned officer below the grade of colonel whose actual or anticipated assignment is to the Judge Advocate General's Corps and must have completed the Infantry Officer Orientation Course or its equivalent. This year, for the first time, there were Special Course students at both the Armor Officer Orientation Course at Fort Knox and the Infantry Course at Fort Benning.

Procurement Law Course. This three-week course, given five times in Fiscal Year 1962, is concentrated on the legal aspects of government procurement, including procurement of supplies and services, interpreting and administering government contracts, and utilizing and disposing of government property. Among specific subjects covered are: general principles of government contract law; legal principles pertaining to appropriated funds; procurement policies; types of contracts; procurement by formal advertising and by negotiation; mistakes in bids; modifications of contracts; cost principles; subcontracts; price revision; disputes, claims, and remedies; termination of contracts for default or for convenience; taxation; labor law; utilization of government property; and property disposal.

This course enjoys an outstanding reputation throughout the Government. Although some of the other short resident courses also utilize guest lecturers, one of the distinctive features of the procurement law course is the extensive use of guest speakers who are in key positions in government procurement and can thus speak with added authority as specialists in their fields. Over one-half of the students attending these courses in FY 1962 were civilian employees of the various departments of the Department of Defense and other departments and agencies of the Government. Most of the remainder were active Army, Navy and Air Force officers. Approximately 10% were Army reserve judge advocates on active duty training.

The course is open to lawyers who are civilian employees of the Government engaged in or about to be assigned to procurement duties and to commissioned officers of the active Army or reserve component who are lawyers. Military Justice Course. This two-week course is designed to prepare lawyers to perform duties involving the application and interpretation of military criminal law. Subjects include evidence; substantive crimes, defenses and instructions; procedure; jurisdiction of courts-martial; and appellate review of courts-martial records.

The course is open to lawyers who are civilian employees of the government engaged in or about to be assigned to duties requiring a knowledge of military criminal law and to commissioned officers of the active Army or reserve component officers who are lawyers. Army reserve judge advocates enrolled in the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course may attend this course in satisfaction of the requirements of that course for the study of military justice. The student body attending this course in FY 1962 was predominantly composed of Army reserve judge advocates on active duty training.

International Law Course. This is a two-week resident course concerning the interpretation and application of international law. Coverage is more or less equally divided between subjects which acquaint the student with the fundamental principles of international law governing the peaceful relations between nations and subjects which provide instruction in the aspects of the international law of war.

The course is open to civilian employees of the Government and commissioned officers of the active Army or a reserve component with an actual or anticipated assignment to duties requiring knowledge of international law. The course is given once or twice a year. Army reserve judge advocates enrolled in the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course may attend this course in satisfaction of the requirements of that course for the study of international law. The student body attending this course in FY 1962 was predominantly composed of Army reserve judge advocates on active duty training.

Civil Law Course. This is a two-week resident course concerned with claims, litigation, domestic emergencies, legal assistance, and military reservations.

The course is open to lawyers who are civilian employees of the Government engaged in or about to be assigned to duties requiring such knowledge and to commissioned officers in the active Army or a reserve component who are lawyers. Army reserve judge advocates enrolled in the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course may attend this course in satisfaction of the requirements of that course for the study of these subjects. The student body who attended this course in Fiscal Year 1962 was composed of about one-half active Army judge advocates and one-half Army reserve judge advocates on active duty for training.

Civil Affairs Law Course. This is a four-week resident course providing such instruction in military law, international law, comparative law, legislation, and the legal aspects of civil affairs activities, as pertains to the duties of a Civil Affairs legal functional specialist. The course is divided into two phases of two weeks each. Phase I is not a prerequisite to Phase II. The phases are given in alternate years.

The course is open to lawyers who are commissioned officers assigned to civil affairs units as legal functional specialists or who have demonstrated aptitude for such assignment, who also have credit for the Civil Affairs Officer and Civil Affairs Officer Advanced Courses, or their equivalent. However, to permit Army reserve judge advocates to complete essential judge advocate training at this School, the Commandant has followed the general policy of waiving these requirements. The course is also open to lawyers who are civilian employees of the Government whose duties require a knowledge of international law, comparative law, and the legal aspects of civil affairs operations. The student body attending Phase I of this course in FY 1962 was predominantly composed of Army reserve judge advocates on active duty for training.

Military Affairs Course. This two-week course provides instruction and training in military administrative law. Specific subjects include Department of Defense and Army organization, delegation of authority, personnel law, boards, prohibited activities, pay and allowances, disability and death benefits, and legal problems concerning deceased persons.

This course is open to lawyers who are civilian employees of the Government engaged in or about to be assigned to duties requiring knowledge of military administrative law, and to commissioned officers of the active Army or a reserve component who are lawyers. Army reserve judge advocates enrolled in the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course may attend this course in satisfaction of requirements of that course for nearly all military affairs subjects.

This course is being conducted for the first time in July 1962.

Contract Termination Law Course. This five-day course provides instruction in the legal aspects of terminating contracts in accordance with pertinent statutes, regulations, and contract clauses, for default of the contractor or for the convenience of the Government. Among problems considered in connection with termination for convenience are presenting termination claims, termination of subcontracts, cost principles, termination inventory, and termination settlements. The course is given once a year and does not duplicate any other resident or nonresident course and is not part of the reserve training program.

The course is open to lawyers who are civilian employees of the Government or commissioned officers of the Army engaged in or about to be assigned to contract termination duties. Active Army officers who attend incur an obligation to remain on active duty for one year from the date the course ends. The course is attended principally by civilian employees of the various departments of the Department of Defense.

Law Officer Seminar. This two-week seminar provides instruction concerning recent developments in the military justice field, with emphasis on administration of trials, pretrial procedure, evidence, motions, defenses, guilty pleas, instructions, and punishments. Round table seminar discussions are a prominent portion of the program.

This course is limited to lawyers who are commissioned officers of the Army or Navy assigned to law officer duties or Army reserve judge advocates who are mobilization designees to the Army Field Judiciary. The student input is controlled by The Judge Advocate General. This seminar is not listed in the Army School Catalog.

Judge Advocate Officer Refresher (Reserve Component) Course. This two-week survey course was given two times in FY 1962. It provides refresher training in military law with emphasis on current trends and developments. It is part of the program of continuing legal education for reserve component officers. It is attended by reserve component officers of both the Army and the Air Force. Air Force reserve component officers comprised 25% of the student body in FY 1962.

This course is not a credit course for branch qualification of reserve officers. No attempt is made to cover subjects in depth. The content of the curriculum is subject to continuous revision and provides substantially new instructional material each two years. This year both the program of instruction and all instructional materials were revised. Four volumes of instructional materials, one prepared by each law-teaching division of the department, were issued to students for their retention.

Guest Speaker Program. During the course of the school year, guest speakers present lectures of interest to the faculty and student body. Eminent officers and officials of the Department of Defense and the armed services have given lectures on such subjects as procurement law, admiralty law, organization for national defense, international aspects of planning for a unit of the strategic reserve, patents, federal income tax,

Army intelligence, role of CBR weapons in warfare, problems in forensic medicine and forensic pathology, and psychiatry in the law. Speakers prominent in their chosen field have addressed the School personnel on such vital subjects as jurisprudence, private international law, United States economic and political systems, the Soviet social order, the Soviet view of international law, the Eichmann trial, judicial philosophy and practice, and trial technique.

In each case the speaker is selected for the experience he has accumulated, his recognized status as an authority in his field, and the importance of his subject as it bears upon the field of military law. Among the individuals who addressed various courses at The Judge Advocate General's School during the past year were: Professor Edwin W. Patterson, Scholar in Residence, University of Virginia Law School; Dr. Alfred H. Kelly, Professor and Chairman, Department of History, Wayne State University; Professor Lewis M. Hacker, Professor of Economics, Columbia University; Professor William Y. Elliott, Professor of History and Political Science, Harvard University; Brigadier General Bruce Palmer, Jr., Assistant Division Commander, 82d Airborne Division; Professor Oliver J. Lissitzyn, Associate Professor of Public Law, Columbia University; Mr. Robert F. Keller, General Counsel, United States General Accounting Office; and the Honorable Alexander Holtzoff, United States District Judge, District Court for the District of Columbia.

A list of all guest lecturers and guest speakers who addressed any of the courses conducted at the School during the preceding year may be found in Appendix VIII.

Text Preparation Program. Long range plans were formulated and work begun in Fiscal Year 1961 upon an ambitious program to prepare a series of text books for publication as Department of the Army pamphlets covering every subject taught by this School. It was recognized at the outset that the task would be a formidable one requiring many months to complete and that it would absorb a very substantial part of the total intellectual energies of every member of the resident faculty. The task of revision and expansion of these texts will never be complete at any one time. These volumes will be the foundation for both resident and nonresident instruction. Consolidation of the substance of military law into a series of definitive text books is vital to efficient instruction—even more so for subject matter that is not readily available from any other source.

A list of the 19 text books, indicating the present stage of their development, is at Appendix XI. Only two of them, procurement law and evidence, had been completed by the end of Fiscal Year 1961. The evidence text was completely revised and republished this year. Revision of the procurement law text is in progress. Seven more texts were completed in Fiscal Year 1962. The remaining ten pamphlets are in various stages of preparation. Several are substantially complete. All of them should be completed by the end of Fiscal Year 1963.

NONRESIDENT LEGAL TRAINING PROGRAMS

In general. The School is responsible for the development of plans and policies and the preparation of materials for the training of judge advocate reserve officers, with a view toward preparing them to fill assignments upon mobilization. The Nonresident Training Department of the School prepares most of the instructional material (other than Department of the Army pamphlets) used to support the three nonresident legal scholastic programs designed to branch qualify judge advocate reservists: the four-year USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course, the Judge Advocate Officer Career Extension Course, and the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course. Additionally, staff training material is prepared for judge advocate reserve officers assigned to TOE and TD units and to the Judge Advocate General Service Organization (JAGSO) Detachments.

The Nonresident Training Department also warehouses and ships all instructional and reference materials required by USAR School Judge Advocate branch departments, the various judge advocate sections of units, and the twelve JAGSO detachments. Further, the Department conducts a large number of liaison visits each year to USAR schools as well as to CONUS Army and U. S. Army Corps Headquarters, in order to monitor the effectiveness of training material and coordinate Judge Advocate reserve training plans generally.

The Nonresident Training Department is also responsible for the administration of the Judge Advocate extension course program, consisting of subcourses designed to provide branch training and specialized military legal education for those who require such knowledge in the performance of their duties.

Finally, a Reserve Records File is maintained on all Judge Advocate reserve officers. A file on each reservist is kept current so as to provide information regarding his military-legal education, civilian background and experience and other pertinent biographical data. An adjunct of this file is the Directory of Army Reserve Troop Program Units which facilitates the location of reserve troop program units having Judge Advocate positions and the identification of personnel assigned therein.

Training Programs Available to Judge Advocate Reservists. There are three nonresident scholastic programs available to judge advocate reserve officers enabling them to complete their branch training: the four-year USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course, the 511-hour Judge Advocate Officer

MAJOR GENERAL CHARLES I. DECKER, Judge Advocate General, presents an award to a JAG Reserve unit commander, as officials from School and unit look on.

Career Extension Course, and the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course. The Nonresident Training Department is responsible for the preparation of instructional materials for all three courses. Additionally, it actually administers the Extension and Reserve Component Courses and has considerable responsibility for monitoring the USAR School Career Course. Each of these three programs is designed to parallel the Judge Advocate Officer Career Course offered in residence at the School. In addition, the USAR School Judge Advocate Reserve New Developments Course provides training to graduates of one of the Career Courses. Finally, selected training materials are prepared and distributed to the twelve Judge Advocate General Service Organization (JAGSO) Detachments, and to the judge advocate sections of other Army Reserve units.

USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course. The preferred way for a judge advocate reserve officer to complete his branch training is the USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course. This course is conducted in the judge advocate branch departments of the United States Army Reserve schools which are located in population centers throughout the country. These schools provide a program of progressive and readily accessible training for officers of the Army's reserve components not on extended active duty. The USAR schools are modeled on active Army service schools, although all staff and faculty positions are filled by reserve officers not on active duty. The USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course is four years in length and parallels the resident Judge Advocate Officer Career Course.

The USAR school year begins on 1 September each year and continues through 31 August of the following year. The reserve duty training period usually extends into June. Instruction in that period is conducted at 24 training assemblies of two hours each. During each summer, the year of instruction is completed by a two-week active duty for training period.

Judge Advocate Officer Career Extension Course. The second vehicle for branch training of judge advocate reservists is composed entirely of extension course material, and is 511 credit hours in length. However, completion of certain resident courses at the School authorizes specific subcourse exemptions. To maintain branch qualification, a minimum of 70 credit hours must be completed during each enrollment year, at least 30 of which must be completed by extension subcourses; the remaining 40 may be acquired by completing extension subcourses or resident course parallels.

Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course. This third program of branch training is a modification of the Judge Advocate Officer Career Extension Course. It consists of seven phases which must be completed within four years. Though it is basically an extension course, a student completes at least three of the phases by resident courses at the School. To maintain satisfactory progress for branch qualification, two resident phases must be completed by the end of the third year, and at least one phase must be completed each year.

USAR School Judge Advocate Reserve New Developments Course. This course was redesignated from the "Graduate" Course prepared in September and October of 1961. It was designed to cover new trends and developments in various aspects of military law and to provide a training vehicle for reserve judge advocates who have actual or constructive credit for the USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course or its equivalent. The 1961-62 winter phase called for instruction to be conducted by USAR Schools on procurement law, military justice, and civil affairs law. The 1962-63 winter phase will include instruction on military affairs, procurement law, military justice, and civil and international law. The 1963 summer active duty phase permits attendance at any one of six resident courses: Procurement Law, Military Justice, Civil Affairs Law, Civil Law, Military Affairs, International Law.

The Judge Advocate Army Extension Course Program. The Army Extension Course Program utilizes the medium of "home study" to provide nonresident instruction for Army personnel to whom resident instruction at the School or at USAR schools is not available.

The School offers a broad extension course program consisting of the following courses:

- a. The Judge Advocate Career Extension Course.
- b. The Special Course—Military Law for Commanding Officers.
- c. The Special Course—Legal Administrative Assistant, MOS 2601.
- d. The Special Course—Legal Clerk, MOS 713.
- e. The Special Course: USAR School—Instructors and Students.
- f. The Special Studies for Senior JAGC Officers.
- g. The Judge Advocate Orientation Course.

During Fiscal Year 1962, the steady increase in student participation in the Judge Advocate Extension Course Program continued. The number of lessons processed was up from 6834 during the last half of Fiscal Year 1961 to 9131 for the last half of Fiscal Year 1962. The number of subcourses completed increased from 842 to 1182 for the same two periods. Student enrollment at the end of each period was almost identical, 1137 on 30 June 1961 and 1157 on 30 June 1962.

New enrollments continued to arrive at the average of 15 a week, and cancellations of enrollment, for all reasons, averaged 12 a week during Fiscal Year 1962. The steady increase in all phases of the Judge Advocate Extension Course Program is expected to continue during Fiscal Year 1963.

In the Judge Advocate Extension Course Program, the breakdown of students enrolled, as of 30 June 1962, was as follows:

By Component	By Course			Total
	JAOCEC (18-A-E24)	JAOC(RC)C (18-A-C24)	Misc.
Active Army	37	0	252	289
USAR	469	17	124	610
National Guard	39	1	21	61
US Air Force	4	0	122	126
USN & USMC	8	0	19	27
Civilians	0	0	44	44

Preparation and Distribution of Training Materials. Visits to USAR summer camps indicated a need for a continuing education pattern designed for the judge advocate reservist, and The Judge Advocate General has approved, in concept, a 25-year program of continuing legal education developed by the School. Responsibility for this program was assigned to the Nonresident Training Department. In broad outline, the education pattern beyond the Career Course level will cover judge advocate relationships to the Army staff, provide for a degree of specialization in selected military fields, instruction in Civil Defense, Joint, Allied, and Combined Commands, and furnish extensive advanced work in the practical problems of the staff judge advocate. As supplements to this broad program, study in two highly specialized areas will be provided for selected officers: foreign area legal studies and a thesis program. A New Developments Course will be available throughout the reservist's career to keep him abreast of current military law generally.

By the close of the fiscal year, the USAR School New Developments Course had been completed and was ready to be sent to the printer. It is expected this course will be presented in more than 15 USAR Schools beginning in the fall of calendar year 1962. Extensive work has been completed on the Legal Area Specialist Program and the thesis program.

Preliminary studies have been made in other fields within the continuing legal education program, and, as textual materials become available, courses will be prepared for release.

In November 1961, responsibility for the preparation of Judge Advocate Extension Subcourses and the USAR School Career Course was transferred from the Academic Department to the Nonresident Training Department, and the Nonresident Materials Division was organized to perform the new mission.

Liaison Visits. Staff liaison visits to the USAR schools, U. S. Army Corps and CONUS Army headquarters were particularly important during this report period. This was because the four-year Judge Advocate Officer Career Course was inaugurated in over seventy USAR schools. Members of the Department visited 61 USAR schools and traveled about 60,000 miles. Two important discoveries were made during the course of these visits: the need for a program of continuing legal education and the apparent breakdown in channels of supply for student study material from sources other than TJAGSA. As a result, the 25-Year Program of Continuing Legal Education was inaugurated and plans were initiated to warehouse and ship all training material to the USAR schools and the JAGSO detachments.

Career Management.

(1) Reserve Affairs Conference. An executive officer for reserve affairs is located in the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate of each ZI Army to give assistance to judge advocate reserve officers. He is equipped to give advice on reserve matters concerning transfer, promotion, obtaining troop program spaces, branch qualification and education. Because most of these executive officers were newly assigned and inexperienced in reserve matters, the Nonresident Training Department conducted an instructional type of Reserve Affairs Conference for them on 1-2 February 1962. In addition to the six executive officers, the conference was attended by the Assistant Executive for Reserve Affairs, Office of the Judge Advocate General, and the Command Staff Judge Advocate, United States Continental Army Command.

(2) Reserve Issue of Judge Advocate Legal Service. The Nonresident Training Department has obtained authority to set aside one issue of the Judge Advocate Legal Service each year to be devoted exclusively to judge advocate reserve matters and designed to advise and inform judge advocate reserve component officers of matters which affect their careers. The first such issue was published in January of 1962 and included:

a. Items of general interest to all judge advocate reserve officers;

b. Matters pertaining to the judge advocate extension course program; and

c. Miscellaneous items of particular interest to reservists with individual training problems.

This pamphlet proved to be extremely successful in disseminating information to, and stimulating inquiries from, judge advocate reserve officers.

(3) Mobilization Preparation Course. Pursuant to the direction of The Judge Advocate General, a two-hour course on Mobilization Preparation was prepared and given to each of the two resident Judge Advocate Officer Refresher (Reserve Component) Courses conducted during the past year. The impetus for this course was provided by the experiences afforded many judge advocate reserve officers by the partial mobilization of 1961. The course is designed to alert JAGC reservists to the many problems which are encountered upon any kind of mobilization, and to suggest means by which some of these problems may be at least partially solved by adequate pre-alert and pre-mobilization planning. This course is scheduled to be incorporated into a nonresident training course available to all troop program units.

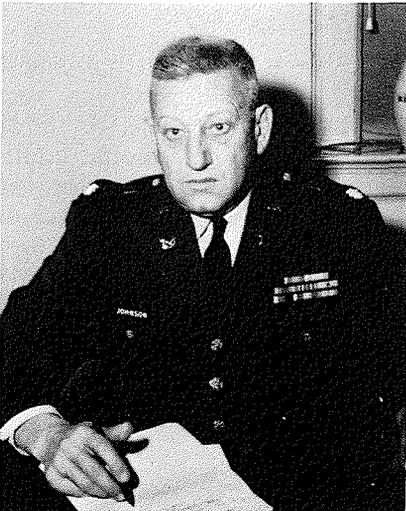

(4) Constructive Credit. During July and August 1961 the Director of the Nonresident Training Department accompanied The Judge Advocate General on visits to the summer training sites for all ZI Armies. Following these visits The Judge Advocate General gave the School and this Department the mission of modifying existing regulations in such a fashion that The Judge Advocate General would have authority to grant constructive credit to selected deserving judge advocate reservists who were seeking branch qualification. This was done through the publication of paragraph 6b, AR 135-316. Although authority to grant constructive credit is vested in The Judge Advocate General, applications are channeled through the Nonresident Training Department for a records check and appropriate recommendations. Constructive credit has been granted to judge advocate reserve officers possessing "unique professional qualifications or experience," which has been interpreted to mean the performance of judge advocate duties in a theater of operations during World War II or Korea. Additionally, credit has been given to officers who were called to active duty during the partial mobilization of 1961.

RESEARCH AND PUBLICATIONS

In general. One of the primary responsibilities and missions of the School is the conducting and coordinating of research in the military legal field and providing the means for the dissemination of the knowledge thus acquired to the Judge Advocate General's Corps and the Army as a whole for its use and guidance. Moreover, the School has a responsibility, as a military law center, in aiding in the development of military law.

To fulfill these functions, the School engages in extensive research and prepares and publishes various military legal publications. Permanent pamphlets designed to assist personnel engaged in the administration and the operation of military law are prepared. Texts and casebooks on all the academic subjects taught at the School are being prepared for use in both resident and nonresident instruction (see Appendix XI). Various periodicals are published at regular intervals throughout the year. Training films are produced to be used throughout the Army in acquainting all military personnel with the function and operation of the military legal system and with the services the Judge Advocate General's Corps provides.

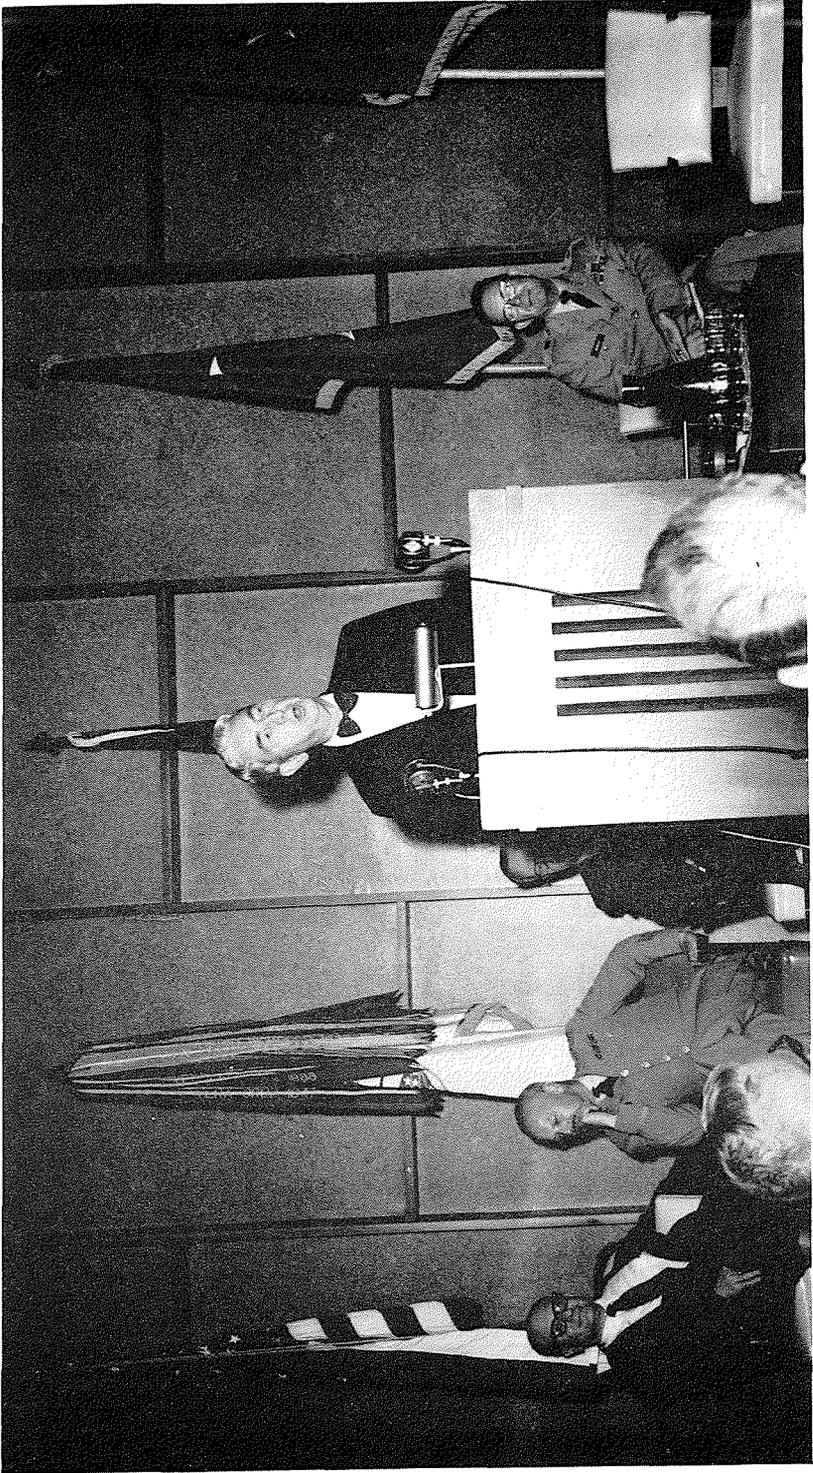

Additionally, the School prepares an integrated course of instruction in military legal subjects for use in Army service schools, supervises the instruction in military law given ROTC students, plans and conducts the annual world-wide conference of judge advocates and other smaller specialized conferences for senior judge advocates, and coordinates the judge advocate phase of the annual LOGEX logistical exercise.

Publications.

(1) The Judge Advocate Legal Service. The Judge Advocate Legal Service is a Department of the Army pamphlet series designed to rapidly disseminate to active Army judge advocates new developments in military law and allied subjects, as found in the decisions of the various military and civilian tribunals; administrative opinions of The Judge Advocate

U.S. SUPREME COURT JUSTICE TOM C. CLARK addresses the Judge Advocate General's Conference, held annually at the JAG School.

General and Comptroller General; departmental policy letters; Army regulations; and similar materials. It also serves as a medium to keep reserve judge advocate personnel informed of new developments and supplements their inactive duty training in this regard.

During the period 30 July 1961 to 30 June 1962, 25 issues of the Judge Advocate Legal Service were published and distributed. Among the more important issues were two dealing exclusively with reserve matters; one containing Presidential Executive Order Number 11009, implementing Article 123(a), UCMJ, in a form that could be fitted in the Manual; an issue containing an explanation of the provisions of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act; and one containing a list of Army regulations of particular interest to judge advocates.

(2) Procurement Legal Service. This is a publication which provides prompt information on current developments in government contract law to legal personnel of the armed forces engaged in procurement activities. It includes digests of opinions of The Judge Advocate General of the Army, decisions of the Comptroller General of the United States, decisions of the Armed Services Board of Contract Appeals, and decisions of the Federal courts.

(3) Military Law Review. This is a Department of the Army pamphlet series issued quarterly. The Review is distributed to all active Army and Ready Reserve judge advocate officers and is sold by the Superintendent of Documents to interested civilian agencies and individuals.

Although published as a Department of the Army pamphlet, the format is identical to that of the usual civilian law review. Articles in the Review treat subjects of military law in its broadest sense. An annual index is published. Contributions are received from legal officers of all three armed services, foreign officers and attorneys, members of the staff and faculty, law school professors, and judge advocate reserve officers.

(4) The Trial Counsel and the Defense Counsel Handbook. This handbook is designed to assist trial counsel, defense counsel and pretrial investigation counsel in the performance of their duties. The duties of counsel which he is to perform prior to, during the progress of, and after trial are described and discussed. Workable solutions for many specific problems which may arise both before and at trial are suggested. Revision of this pamphlet was completed during the past year and publication is expected during Fiscal Year 1963.

(5) The Law Officer Pamphlet. This handbook is intended primarily to serve as a practical guide for the law officer of a general court-martial. The duties of a law officer are described and discussed, and workable solutions to specific problems are suggested. It is also designed to aid the law officer in the preparation of his instructions to the members of the court and many sample instructions are set out.

(6) Cumulative Pocket Part, Manual for Courts-Martial. The School prepares a periodical supplement to the Manual for Courts-Martial. This supplement provides an efficient method of locating current material relating to provisions of the Manual.

During Fiscal Year 1962 the School made a study to determine the desired content and scope of a revised supplement to the Manual for Courts-Martial and considered the possibility of the adoption of a comprehensive one volume loose-leaf military justice service, similar in format to the commercial loose-leaf tax services, on a tri-service basis.

(7) Staff Judge Advocate Handbook. This handbook is designed to aid the judge advocate in the field in the practical aspects of his duties and to serve as a text for resident and non-resident courses in judge advocate activities. Successive chapters will describe the field operations of the staff judge advocate and cover the organization and functions of his section and his responsibilities as a working member of the staff; and the relationships he should attain and maintain with his commander, the Chief of Staff, other members of the general staff, subordinate commanders, The Judge Advocate General, superior, subordinate, adjacent staff judge advocates, and the civilian community. The handbook also covers relationships with other non-military agencies; operations in overseas areas; the organization and operations of the Army Judiciary; and offers practical considerations for the most efficient operation of a staff judge advocate section. The first edition of this pamphlet is scheduled for completion during Fiscal Year 1963.

Training films. In addition to the films which have already been produced and are available for showing throughout the Army, two new films have been prepared during Fiscal Year 1962. "Evidentiary Problems and Trial Techniques," with a running time of 66 minutes, has been completed and is currently being processed for release. The film is designed to instruct line officers detailed as counsel, members of inferior courts-martial, and officers newly commissioned in the Judge Advocate General's Corps in courts-martial procedure. Numerous procedural points, such as how to introduce a document, how to lay a foundation for the admissibility of a statement of an accused, and how to qualify expert witnesses, are covered.

"The Legal Assistance Program," designed to acquaint personnel of the Army with the services available through the legal assistance officer, is being staffed. It is anticipated that the film will be released about 1 January 1963.

Instruction in the Army Service Schools. In 1961 and 1962, the School studied the adequacy of training in the common subject courses for which the School has monitoring responsibility (military justice and congressional relations). It was concluded that, at present, training in these courses in service schools was inadequate and unrealistic. To meet this deficiency, the School has recommended the initiation of a comprehensive program of training in military law for line officers as a part of the curriculum of Army service schools.

LT. COLONEL WILLIAM G. BARRY
Chief, Research

LT. COLONEL RICHARD C. ASHBY

Included in these courses will be instruction in the following subjects: international law, legal aspects of counterinsurgency, congressional relations, claims, military administrative law, and military justice.

Special Activities.

(1) Army Judge Advocates Conference. The 1961 Army Judge Advocate General's Conference was conducted during the period 25-28 September 1961 in the American National Red Cross Training Center in Charlottesville. Over 150 senior officers of the Judge Advocate General's Corps heard such notable speakers as Justice Tom C. Clark, Associate Justice, United States Supreme Court; Honorable Elvis J. Stahr, Jr., Secretary of the Army; General Clyde D. Eddleman, Vice Chief of Staff, United States Army; and Mr. Roy N. Freed, Attorney at Law, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. In addition, selected speakers from the Office of the Judge Advocate General and from major continental and overseas commands addressed the conferees on military legal subjects of importance.

(2) Law Officer Conference. The first annual conference of officers assigned to the Army Field Judiciary was held in Charlottesville immediately prior to the annual Army Judge Advocates Conference. This conference is designed to bring together the Army's law officers for the purposes of discussing significant legal issues which have arisen in the operation of the Army Field Judiciary. Members of the Army's boards of review also attended this conference.

(3) LOGEX. The School was charged with the responsibility of planning and supervising the judge advocate play of LOGEX 1962. LOGEX 1962 was divided into two phases. In Phase I, only reserve personnel participated. This group consisted of 6 volunteer officers, 21 officers of reserve units, and 21 enlisted men. Members of The Judge Advocate General's School's Staff and Faculty gave 16 hours of pre-LOGEX instruction to the group. In Phase II, 18 Career Class students and 13 junior officer students of the Special Class participated. A "Judge Advocate Handbook" was published and distributed to all LOGEX 1962 players. It served as an instructional tool for LOGEX and provided format and procedural guides for future use.

(4) The Judge Advocate General's Corps Exhibit. An enlarged Judge Advocate General's Corps exhibit, consisting of panels depicting various activities and functions of the Corps, was displayed at Georgetown University on their Military Day, Fort Bragg, North Carolina on Armed Forces Day, and at the Tennessee Bar Association Convention in Nashville. The exhibit is scheduled to be displayed at the American Bar Association Convention in August 1962. The exhibit attracts considerable attention at meetings and conventions and aids materially in informing the public of the functions of the Corps. It will be enlarged and displayed at selected functions, within budgetary limitations, in the future.

THE JAG CORPS EXHIBIT, displayed at bar conventions and other meetings, includes a panel on the JAG School.

ADMINISTRATION

In general. The Office of the School Secretary, working under the direction and guidance of the Commandant, is responsible for all matters pertaining to administration, personnel, finance, billeting, transportation, logistics, and security, insofar as facilities and personnel permit.

This office also administers the following programs: records administration, reports control, voting, and command management.

It handles the official correspondence of the School, controls classified material, maintains personnel records and record files, prepares training aids, and reproduces materials published by the School.

Finally, the office is responsible for coordinating supply activities, preparing all budget and fiscal matters, operating the School reading rooms, and coordinating with the University of Virginia administration in arranging suitable classroom facilities.

Facilities of the School.

(1) The Judge Advocate General's School Building. This structure, dedicated on 26 September 1956, is a three-story red brick building of Georgian architecture. It contains 27 offices and 43 furnished rooms which are used as living quarters for personnel on temporary duty at the School. There is also a supply room, a bookstore, an enlisted men's dayroom, and a suite which is made available for visitors to the School. The Judge Advocate General's School Officers' Open Mess consists of a lounge and an outdoor patio on the fourth floor of the building. Two rooms on the second floor of the building are set aside for reading and study purposes. These rooms contain a selected collection of military law books and periodicals as well as cognate materials in the fields of military history, military tactics, leadership and discipline, and international law.

Among the offices located in The Judge Advocate General's School Building are Office of the Commandant; Office of the School Secretary; the Research and Publications Department; the Nonresident Training Department; and several offices of the Academic Department.

(2) Clark Hall. Located directly opposite the JAG School Building, Clark Memorial Hall houses the University of Virginia Law School. Most of the classes of the JAG School meet in this building. Additionally, certain offices of the Academic Department are located in Clark Hall. The classrooms utilized by the JAG School are air-conditioned and are equipped with adequate book cases for student use. They are available for study purposes whenever classes are not in session.

THE OFFICERS' OPEN MESS OF THE JAG SCHOOL IS LOCATED ON THE TOP FLOOR OF THE JAG SCHOOL BUILDING.

(3) Libraries. The School generally furnishes each student with the basic textbooks and other classroom materials which he will need during a course. However, where additional references are required, and for general research purposes, students attending The Judge Advocate General's School are permitted and are encouraged to utilize both the Law Library of the University of Virginia and Alderman Library, the general library of the University.

Housed in Clark Hill, the Law Library of the University of Virginia contains approximately 140,000 volumes. It has an extensive collection of published reports of the American Federal and state courts, the reports of the courts of the United Kingdom, treatises, digests, encyclopedias, and indices and citator services. It also contains the statutes of the United States, of the several states, and of Great Britain. The Library receives every current legal periodical of general interest printed in the English language. The program of The Judge Advocate General's School requires frequent recourse to the Library; the use of the Library is subject to regulations, copies of which are available at the circulation desk.

The Alderman Library has about 1,360,000 volumes and a particularly fine collection of official government publications. It has been designated by the United States Government as a depository for public documents.

Quarters. Bachelor officers' quarters are available in The Judge Advocate General's School Building. Assignment of rooms may be effected through the School Secretary. Linens, towels, maid service, and other conveniences are provided.

There are no government quarters available for those officers who plan to bring their dependents to Charlottesville. Accordingly, inasmuch as rental housing is scarce, it is recommended that officers with dependents visit Charlottesville as early as possible to look for housing. The School Secretary and the University Housing Division maintain lists of available apartments and houses in the Charlottesville area.

Messing. Government messing facilities are not available at The Judge Advocate General's School. However, there is a snack bar in the Officers' Open Mess serving breakfast and light lunches. There are also available a number of dining halls and snack bars operated by the University of Virginia, as well as many convenient commercial restaurants.

Officers' Open Mess. The top floor of The Judge Advocate General's School Building, consisting of two large rooms and an open-air patio, is set aside as the Officers' Open Mess. The rooms are tastefully furnished with large comfortable chairs and sofas of the Jeffersonian style, writing tables, a television set, piano, radio and record player, and other accessories. These rooms are open daily for use of all members. In the evening hours, refreshments and snacks are available.

During the year, the Mess sponsors a full program of activities and social events for the benefit of its members, including dances, picnics, class receptions, social hours, and bridge nights.

Bookstore. A small bookstore is operated in the west end of the JAG School Building on the first floor. Various drug items, uniform equipment, stationery supplies, cigarettes and tobacco, souvenir items, gifts, and books are available for purchase. Uniforms may be ordered through the Bookstore. Various catalogues are also available for ordering particular items at a discount.

Logistical Support. Government storage facilities are not available nor is there a transportation officer assigned to the School. However, the Chief of Logistics can provide necessary assistance and advice in arranging for shipment and/or storage of household goods, concurrent travel, and other items of logistical support, subject to available time and facilities.

Adjutant and Personnel Offices. The Adjutant's Office is responsible for the processing of all incoming and outgoing personnel. Billeting arrangements and assistance are also handled by this office. The School Mail Room is operated by the Adjutant.

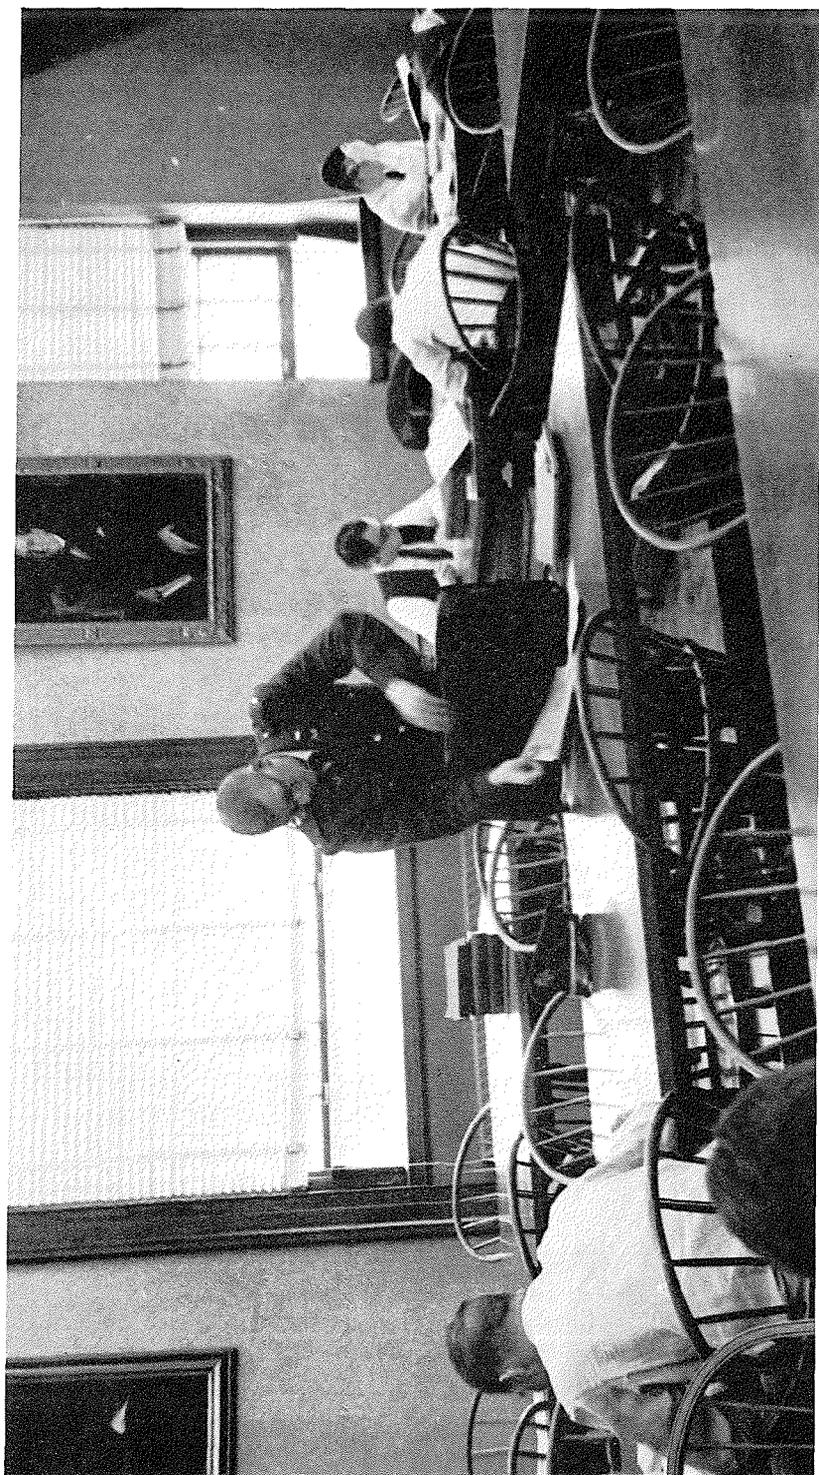

The School has no finance officer. However, the Personnel Officer is available to provide necessary assistance and advice in matters relating to pay and allowances. This office also maintains the School's personnel and health records and prepares travel and per diem vouchers for students.

Medical and Dental Facilities. The Judge Advocate General's School is satellited on Fort Lee, Virginia, for medical and dental care, where a complete Army hospital is located. Locally, a contract surgeon located in the Student Health Center of the University of Virginia provides out-patient services for military personnel and for dependents. Finally, because of the distance from a U. S. Army hospital, dependents of military personnel stationed at the JAG School are entitled to full coverage of all benefits provided under Medicare.

Dental care and eye examinations for military personnel are available from any local dentist and eye doctor on an individual contract basis. However, there are no provisions for such care for dependents.

Drugs are generally available from the stocks maintained at the Student Health Center and by means of a mail service with the Fort Lee Hospital Pharmacy.

Athletic Facilities. Assigned and attached military personnel and all students are permitted to use all athletic facilities of the University of Virginia, including the tennis courts, bowling alleys, swimming pools, and all the indoor facilities at the University's Memorial Gymnasium. Both the School and the Intramural Department of the University have a limited amount of athletic equipment for the use of students and the staff and faculty, and lockers in the University Gymnasium may be rented on a limited basis by personnel attached to the JAG School. Additional golf, tennis, bowling and swimming facilities are also available in the Charlottesville area.

THESIS TOPICS OF TENTH CAREER CLASS

AUTHOR

Major Paul E. Beckman

SUBJECT AND SCOPE

Water Rights on Military Reservations

A study of the problems arising from the appropriation, use and distribution of water within military reservations of the western states, to include a consideration of the power of a state to determine water rights and to regulate its use incident to lands within the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the Federal Government and to lands reserved from the public domain.

Captain Robert E. Boyer

Legality of Orders

A study to determine what factors tend to make illegal, orders affecting the personal rights of individuals. An analysis and survey of military cases to determine what tests have been used to declare orders illegal. A discussion of various trial and appellate problems relating to cases involving the legality of orders, including raising the defense of illegality and submitting the issue to the court members.

Captain
Francis R. Buckley

Intoxication As an Offense and Defense in Military Law

A study of intoxication in military justice to include an analysis and comparison of the legal definition of intoxication both as an offense and as a defense to a criminal charge; methods of proof and sufficiency of the evidence to raise an issue requiring instructions to the court-martial by the law officer.

Major Joe P. Casey

Dishonorable Failure to Pay Debts

A study of the historical development of the offense of dishonorable failure to pay debts with a determination of its elements, modes of proof, defenses, a comparison of the treatment of such conduct in the civilian community, and an analysis of administrative methods available to commanders to accomplish the desired end without resort to criminal prosecution.

Captain Peter H. Cook

Military Jurisdiction over Non-Military Type Offenses

A study of the gradual Congressional expansion of the jurisdiction of courts-martial to include substantive crimes of a purely civil nature, its impact upon the public concern with the fairness of courts-martial proceedings, and an evaluation of the desirability of retaining such jurisdiction.

SUBJECT AND SCOPE

Major Jack H. Crouchet

Bribery and Graft

A comprehensive survey of the present state of law concerning the offenses of bribery and graft; a critical appraisal of the legislative and judicial treatment given these offenses; an analysis of the reasons for the conflicts in military law and the lack of understanding of the offenses by convening authorities; a precise definition of the separate military offenses; and a suggestion to eliminate future misunderstanding.

Captain
Victor A. DeFiori

The Prosecutor's Dilemma: Partisan Advocate or Proponent of the Truth?

An inquiry into the ethical duties and responsibilities of trial counsel; the nature of a criminal trial; the prosecutor's dilemma; the historical development of the role of trial counsel; his authority and standard of conduct; ethical problems encountered by trial counsel in the performance of his duties; conclusions and recommendations.

Captain
Ross M. Goddard, Jr.

Constructive and Fraudulent Enlistment

A study of constructive and fraudulent enlistment in the Regular Army of the United States, consisting of an analysis of the legal requirements to establish the fact of irregular entry, the various entitlements flowing from attempted irregular entry, and the extent of military jurisdiction created by irregular entry or attempted irregular entry.

Captain Alton H. Harvey

The Control of Prisoners of War

A study of the conduct and activities of Communist prisoners of war during the Korean conflict, with an analysis of the control measures taken by the United Nations Command and their adequacy or inadequacy; a determination of some measures that are permissible under the law of war and may be utilized more effectively in the future to control the conduct of Communist prisoners of war.

Captain Eugene J. Murphy

Powers and Duties of Sentencing and Sentence Reviewing Authorities

A study of the powers and duties of the court-martial, convening authority, board of review and the Court of Military Appeals with respect to the sentence; consideration of the power of each to mitigate, suspend, remit or commute various portions of the sentence; powers of The Judge Advocate General and administrative authorities; a consideration of the advisability of reducing the number of authorities acting on a sentence and establishing an agency composed of professionally qualified individuals to review each sentence; changes in the Code and Manual necessary to effect such a program.

SUBJECT AND SCOPE

Major Albert S. Rakas

The Quest for Sanity

A study of the test for criminal irresponsibility under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, including a comparison of the various tests presently used or proposed for use in other federal courts with that used in the military judicial system and a proposed new test that would eliminate those factors tending to create confusion and misunderstanding in the application of existing tests.

Major Brunn W. Roysden

Discovery in Federal Criminal Cases: What Must the Government Reveal?

An analysis of the right of the accused to require the Government to open its files to him; a determination of what matters the Government may properly keep from an accused or at what stage and upon what showing must the Government disclose matters to the defense; a comparison of the serviceman's right of discovery with that of his civilian counterpart in a federal court.

Captain Donald B. Smith

The Enforcement of Foreign Judgments in American Courts

A study of the enforcement of foreign judgments in the various federal and state jurisdictions of the United States, to include consideration of tort and contract law judgments; and, the possible collateral consequences to military personnel under the Uniform Code of Military Justice and applicable service regulations for the non-satisfaction of foreign judgments.

Major Charles H. Taylor

Trial and Defense Counsel Program for General Courts-Martial

A critical examination of the existing counsel organization for general courts-martial, to include a consideration of the existing relationship between the Staff Judge Advocate and appointed counsel, with analysis of the legal, ethical and practicable problems which arise from the staff judge advocate's dual role as the legal advisor to the convening authority and the military supervisor of appointed counsel; to include also a determination of the need and legal and administrative feasibility of establishing a different organization for counsel similar to the Army law officer program.

Major Sein Tun

Article 32 Investigation Under the Uniform Code of Military Justice and Summary of Evidence Under the Defense Services Act of Burma

A comparative study of Article 32 investigation under the Uniform Code of Military Justice and the Summary of Evidence under the Defense Service Act of Burma in regard to the purpose, procedure and major problem area.
