The Judge Advocate General's School, U.S. Army, Charlottesville, Virginia

THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL'S SCHOOL TODAY

MISSION

The Army lawyer of today is a carefully selected and highly trained specialist in military law. Not merely a lawyer, he receives intensive training on a graduate law school level in many aspects of military law before he begins his military law practice. Training the modern Army lawyer is the function of The Judge Advocate General's School, located at Charlottesville, Virginia.

The Judge Advocate General's School, located on the Grounds of the University of Virginia opposite the Law School, is the Army's military law center. It is an approved law school rated by the American Bar Association inspectors as offering the highest quality specialized graduate program in law to be found in America, and provides a graduate law school atmosphere where the modern Army lawyer is professionally trained in the many aspects of military law. The School's function is to orient the Army lawyer in the fundamentals of military law, to keep his training current, and to give him specialized legal training on an advanced level. As a military law center, it attaches considerable importance to its research and publications, including texts and case books, as well as several legal periodicals.

The Judge Advocate General's School operates on a year-round basis. Over 6,700 students have graduated from courses offered at the School in its 12 years of operation; during Fiscal Year 1963, 760 students were graduated from courses offered at the School. Classes are held in the University of Virginia Law School, where many of the JAG School faculty maintain their offices. There, in the Law School, the JAG students can avail themselves of the largest law library in the South.

All newly commissioned officers in the Judge Advocate General's Corps receive an introductory course at the JAG School. This 10-weeks' course is designed to train these newly commissioned lawyers in the fundamentals of military law and prepare them to advise the commander and his staff on legal problems, to perform the duties of trial and defense counsel before general courts-martial, to review reports of investigations and cases tried before summary and special courts-martial, and to give legal assistance to servicemen.

The course includes instruction on military justice, military administrative law, claims, procurement law, military science, civil and international law, and staff judge advocate operations. Two such courses are held each year, one in the fall and one in the spring.

These students come from all over the United States, and from allied nations. They bring to their classes their varied experiences as citizens and lawyers, and the training of many different law schools. Upon their graduation, they are assigned to military posts throughout the United States, to such places as San Francisco, Chicago, San Antonio, New York City, Washington, and to stations in such foreign countries as France, Korea, Iran, and Ethiopia.

Outstanding career military lawyers return to the JAG School for a nine-month course in military law. This course is similar to the law schools' master programs. The student is thoroughly immersed in the many subjects of import to the military: legal history, jurisprudence, admiralty, military justice, military administrative law, procurement law, international law, comparative law, claims, civil affairs, legal assistance, military reservations, military training, and counterinsurgency. In addition, each career class student is required to present a thesis on a significant problem area in military law. These students also participate in a logistical field exercise with career course students from other service schools.

The School also conducts several 1-3 week courses for judge advocates and for civilian attorneys employed by the armed services and federal government whose work lies within a specialty. Military justice, procurement law, contract termination, international law, civil affairs law, civil law, and military affairs are among those courses offered.

Reservists not on active duty may also attend a two-week continuing legal education course in the summer, which course emphasizes current trends and developments.

For persons not in residence, a number of legal training programs are offered by the School. Judge advocates in the field continue their military training by taking extension courses utilizing the "home study" method. Reservists not on active duty attend one of the many branch reserve military legal training schools located in population centers throughout the country, where, in 24 two-hour sessions, they are kept informed on current military legal trends and developments.

The Judge Advocate General's School uniquely contributes as a military law center in maintaining the high standard of professional excellence of the military lawyer. This well trained and well prepared modern Army lawyer who wears the insignia of the quill, sword and wreath is a credit to the legal profession and serves his country well.

HISTORY

Although judge advocates have served the United States Army since 1775, no effort was made to provide them with formal training in military law until the opening days of World War II. In preceding years, newly appointed judge advocates were trained empirically, but the Army's swift expansion soon emphasized the need for instructing attorneys entering the Corps in the manifold aspects of their new specialty.

In February 1942, as the uniformed lawyer's burden increased in complexity, specialized and refresher training courses for active duty personnel were commenced at the National University Law School, Washington, D. C. In August 1942, operations were transferred to the new Judge Advocate General's School, physically located at the University of Michigan Law School, Ann Arbor, Michigan, and commanded by Colonel Edward H. Young, JAGC. In the following months, hundreds of officers were trained at Ann Arbor. Indeed, by June 1944 over two-thirds of the active duty strength of the Judge Advocate General's Corps were graduates of the School. The end of the war, however, substantially reduced the need for trained military lawyers, and in 1946 the School, which had been initiated only on a temporary basis, was discontinued.

Nevertheless, plans were soon being devised in the Office of The Judge Advocate General to implement the recommendation of a committee, appointed in 1946 to study the administration of military justice, that provision be made for the training of Army lawyers in military law. The passage of the Uniform Code of Military Justice and the coming of the Korean conflict accentuated the need for judge advocate training facilities. As a consequence, another temporary training facility was established at Fort Myer, Virginia, again under the guidance of Colonel Young. Approximately 200 officers attended several five-week courses in basic military law taught by five officer-instructors.

By this time, the decision had been made to establish a permanent branch service school. Although the advisability of locating the School within 200 miles of Washington was recognized, sites as far away as Fort Crockett, Texas, and Fort Rodman, Massachusetts, were considered. In the spring of 1951, a survey was made of the facilities offered by the University of Virginia, and on 2 August 1951 the present Judge Advocate General's School was established. Major General Charles L. Decker, USA, the present Judge Advocate General, was the first Commandant of the School.

ORGANIZATION OF THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL'S SCHOOL

In order to accomplish its mission properly, The Judge Advocate General's School is divided into three departments and the Office of the School Secretary, all of which are directly subordinate to the School Commandant. (See Appendix I for an organizational chart of the School; Appendix II for an organizational roster of the School as of 30 June 1963; Appendix III for a list of changes in officer personnel during FY 1963; and Appendix IV for biographical background statements of all officer personnel of the Staff and Faculty.)

The Academic Department. This department conducts resident instruction for all active Army and reserve judge advocates and prepares texts for resident instruction. Resident courses include the Judge Advocate General (Special) Course and the Judge Advocate Officer Career Course, which cover the entire field of military law. The department also conducts several specialized courses including courses in military justice, procurement law, contract termination, international law, civil law, military affairs, civil affairs law, a combination resident and nonresident course, and refresher courses for reserve component officers. The department is comprised of the Civil and International Law, Military Affairs, Military Justice, Military Training, and Procurement Law Divisions.

The Nonresident Training Department. This department is responsible for developing nonresident training programs to insure the continued high level of professional legal competence required of military lawyers. In this connection, the department administers the Judge Advocate portion of the Army extension course program and maintains liaison through periodic staff visits with the USAR School Judge Advocate Branch Departments to which it distributes the instructional materials prepared by the School. The department prepares and distributes the Judge Advocate nonresident training material used in extension courses and USAR schools as well as the staff training material used by the Judge Advocate General Service Organization (JAGSO) Detachments and the Judge Advocate Sections of USAR and Army National Guard Divisions and other units.

The Plans and Publications Department. This department is responsible for the conduct and coordination of centralized research in the military legal field; prompt dissemination of the results of such research to members of the Judge Advocate General's Corps; formulation of policies and procedures to aid in maintaining a superior level of staff work by judge advocates; special project activities; the preparation of permanent and periodical military legal publications; the development and preparation of common course legal and quasi-legal instructional material including training films; and the planning and execution of an annual logistical exercise.

The Office of the School Secretary. This department formulates policies and, upon approval, executes policies concerning personnel, administration, security, management, and logistics. These responsibilities include the proper allocation and use of personnel, effective and efficient use of physical facilities, budget preparation and review, and analysis and control of fiscal matters.

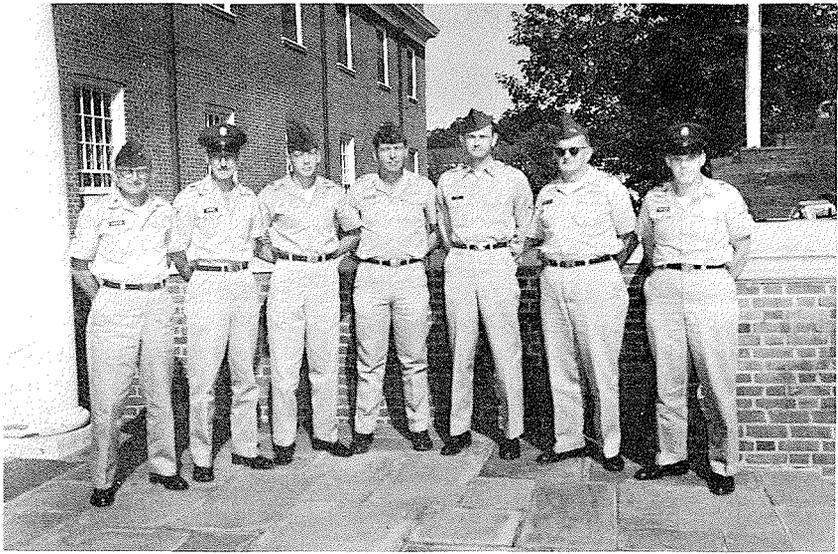

Board of Visitors. To insure that the high standards of the School are maintained and to assist in the determination of areas requiring improvement, an annual inspection is made by the Board of Visitors. The Board, composed of five senior reserve officers who are leading practitioners and legal educators, inspects the manifold operations of the School and sums up its findings, with criticisms and recommendations, in a report submitted at the end of its inspection.

ACADEMIC ACTIVITIES

During Fiscal Year 1963, 14 resident courses were conducted with 760 students in attendance. (See Appendix V for the FY 1963 schedule of courses.) Attending these courses were 610 Army commissioned officers, 16 Navy and Marine Corps officers, 35 Air Force officers, 91 civilians, and 7 allied officers from Canada, Thailand, Turkey, Vietnam, Korea, and the Republic of China. (See Appendix VI for a breakdown of students in residence at the School during FY 1963.) Civilian personnel from Government agencies outside of the Department of Defense represented at the School during Fiscal Year 1963 included the Agency for International Development, the Department of Justice, the Post Office Department, Federal Aviation Agency, the Small Business Administration, the General Services Administration, the National Aeronautics and Space Agency, the National Academy of Sciences, the General Accounting Office, the Federal Maritime Commission, and the Federal Trade Commission. Of the 610 Army officers attending courses, 312 were active duty personnel while the remaining 298 were Reserve component officers.

Courses conducted during Fiscal Year 1963 included the nine-month Judge Advocate Officer Career Course (18-A-C22); two cycles of the ten-week Judge Advocate General (Special) Course (18-A-8101); the two-week Judge Advocate Officer Refresher (Reserve Component) Course (18-A-C9); the one-week Contract Termination Course (18-G-F1); three cycles of the three-week Procurement Law Course (18-G-F2); the two-week Military Justice Course (18-G-F3); the two-week International Law Course (18-G-F7); the two-week Civil Affairs Law Course (Phase I) (18-G-F10); the two-week Civil Law Course (18-G-F11); the two-week Military Affairs Course (18-G-F12); and a two-week Law Officer Seminar. Courses scheduled to be conducted during Fiscal Year 1964 are set forth in a chart in Appendix VII.

The official source of information concerning courses of instruction offered at all Army service schools, including The Judge Advocate General's School, is the Army School Catalog (Department of the Army Pamphlet 20-21). That catalog provides detailed information for staff officers, commanders, and personnel officers who are concerned with the selection of individuals for school attendance; for commissioned officers, both Active and Reserve, of the Armed Forces and civilian employees of the Government who are interested in attending particular courses; and for others who may wish to acquaint themselves with the Army's training opportunities. In addition, Army regulations govern related matters such as attendance by military personnel from foreign countries. These authorities should always be consulted for the latest official information. Particular inquiries concerning this School may also be addressed to the Commandant, The Judge Advocate General's School, United States Army, Charlottesville, Virginia.

*Judge Advocate Officer Career. In this course, selected judge advocates are educated for leadership in the broad fields of military law. This course offers a year of graduate legal study in all areas of law relevant to military legal practice. It is approved by the Association of American Law Schools and fully accredited by the American Bar Association as meeting the highest standards required for a graduate legal study program. It is open to highly qualified and carefully selected career judge advocates or legal specialists of the Armed Forces of the United States and allied nations. The course is intended to deepen and broaden a philosophical appreciation of the role of law in its application to all phases of military life through recognition of the continual impact of legal principles and standards at all levels of command, and thus to prepare the officer student to render legal services to higher commanders under varying conditions of present and future military operations and organizations.

The curriculum of this thirty-four week course (September-May) includes the study of military criminal law and practice, the philosophy of penology, public contract law, statutory and regulatory controls and directives for procurement, labor relations, overseas procurement, patents, taxation, military administrative law concerning military and civilian personnel, investigative powers, administrative board procedures, administration of military reservations, nonappropriated fund activities, property, claims, litigation, individual legal assistance, admiralty, civil affairs, domestic emergencies, international law, the legal aspects of counterinsurgency, comparative law, selected foreign legal systems, and jurisprudence.

In addition, successful completion of the course requires the submission of a thesis of graduate level quality that makes a substantial contribution to military legal scholarship. This requirement is regarded as the heart of the Career Course. Members of the Eleventh Career Course were given more than 300 scheduled hours to prepare and present their theses. Topics and scope notes for theses written by members of the Eleventh Career Course may be found in Appendix VIII. Several will be published in forthcoming issues of the Military Law Review.

This year for the first time an elective seminar program was initiated for the Career Class. Sixteen seminars were offered by the four law-teaching divisions of the Academic Department: Military Affairs, Military Justice, Procurement Law, and Civil and International Law Divisions. Each student selected a total of three seminars, but no more than one conducted by the same division. Seminars were limited to a minimum of four and a maximum of eight participants. Each seminar met eight times for a two-hour period. For each seminar meeting a different student was assigned to be the discussion leader for that meeting. He was responsible for the preparation of an assigned topic and for the conduct of that seminar meeting. His colleagues were given reading assignments as selected by the discussion leader. Out of the sixteen seminar topics offered, the following seminars were actually organized and conducted: Two separate sections on Selected Problems of Installation Administration and Military Affairs Problems of Commanders; The effect of Sovereignty on Government Contracts; Government Contract Administration; The Right to Counsel; Wire-Tapping and Electronic Eavesdropping; Contemporary Problems in International Law; and Civil and International Law Practice.

A field trip to the Army Engineers School, Fort Belvoir, Virginia, was coordinated with a trip to the United States Supreme Court. At Fort Belvoir, the Career Class received instruction in nuclear weapons systems and mine warfare. Eight members of the Career Class were admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court on the motion of Lieutenant Colonel Ralph Herrod, Chief, Defense Appellate Division, Office of The Judge Advocate General.

Career Course students again participated in LOGEX, a controlled logistical exercise conducted annually at Fort Lee, Virginia. The exercise stresses the immense complexities of the administrative and logistical requirements for the support of a theater of operations. Inter-staff coordination and cross-service cooperation are required for successful play. Problems requiring judge advocate play illustrate the importance of legal services to the success of such operations. Play is arranged to teach this lesson not only to judge advocate players but to players in other staff sections as well.

Awards to members of this year's Eleventh Career Course were made as follows:

- a. A certificate for Professional Merit from the American Bar Association to that student with the highest over-all academic standing.
- b. A Book Award from the Lawyers Cooperative Publishing Company to that student with the highest over-all academic standing.
- c. A Certificate of Achievement and a Book Award from the Commandant to that student with the second highest over-all academic standing in his class.
- d. A Certificate of Achievement from the Judge Advocates Association to the outstanding student in military justice subjects.

e. A Certificate of Achievement from the Federal Bar Association to the outstanding student in procurement law subjects.

f. "The Judge Paul W. Brosman Award," a Certificate of Achievement from the Institute of Military Law, to the outstanding student in military affairs law subjects.

g. A Certificate of Achievement from the Commandant to the outstanding student in international law subjects.

h. A Certificate of Achievement and Book Award to the outstanding student in the subject of jurisprudence.

i. A Certificate of Achievement from the Commandant to the student who writes the most outstanding thesis.

(See Appendix IX for the names of the recipients of these awards.)

Judge Advocate General (Special) Course. In this 10-week course, conducted twice a year primarily for officers newly commissioned in or transferred to the Judge Advocate General's Corps, officers are trained in the fundamentals of military law. The content of the course stresses those areas of military practice with which newly appointed judge advocates are most likely to be concerned in their first duty assignments. Accordingly, the course is devoted primarily to the fundamentals of military criminal law and practice in order to equip the graduate with a working knowledge of the duties of trial and defense counsel before general courts-martial. Instruction is also given on the provisions of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act, problems of domicile as affected by military status, domestic relations, immigration, adoption, wills, insurance, personal taxation, family financial problems, debt counseling, suits for and against servicemen, and the mechanics of the Army's legal assistance program. The course also includes those laws and regulations concerning many aspects of the military personnel process, including appointment, enlistment, promotion, reduction, retirement, discharge, pay, death and disability benefits, and matters of practice and procedure before administrative boards concerned with such matters. Special attention is also given to the problems of the administration of military reservations, including the powers and duties of a post commander to regulate traffic, make arrests, regulate ingress and egress, deal with property both public and private, and manage and control the operation of such nonappropriated fund activities as post exchanges, commissaries, clubs, and other associations. A substantial block of instruction is also given on those laws and regulations covering claims for and against the Government. However, the course includes only an introductory coverage of the law of public contracts, civil affairs, and international law. A graduate of the Special Course is expected to return to the School at a later time for instruction on these subjects by attendance at an appropriate short course, as described below, should his duties so require.

Since most of the students who attend the Special Course have had no prior military experience, attendance at a nine-week Combat Arms Officer Orientation Course at either The Infantry School or

The Armor School is a prerequisite to attendance at the Judge Advocate Special Course. The primary purpose of this requirement is to increase the newly commissioned officer's appreciation of those problems of military command that affect the disciplinary decisions of a military commander, provide him with a working knowledge of the basic command and staff concepts followed in all Army organizations, and with some appreciation of military customs, courtesies and traditions. It is believed that the better a lawyer understands his client's business, the better he can serve that client and the greater the client's respect and confidence will be in his lawyer's advice and judgment.

JAGEX, a command post exercise begun in 1960, was conducted again this year for the Thirty-Seventh Special Class. Play of that exercise requires one and one-half days. Students are divided into small groups and organize themselves into typical Post Judge Advocate Offices. An instructor assigned to each group acts both as the Staff Judge Advocate and as the group controller to supervise and pace the play, introduce problems into play, furnish advice, play the role of any staff officer or commander from whom the player should obtain additional facts for solution of a particular problem, and to review and critique player solutions for accuracy, completeness, and practicality. Problems typical of those encountered in the day-to-day operations of a Post Judge Advocate Office were prepared by the four law-teaching divisions of the department. Realism was further heightened by the introduction of several "live" problems using additional staff and faculty personnel as actors.

Classes are supplemented by training films, seminars, moot courts, and practical exercises.

This year for the first time the entire Thirty-Eighth Special Class participated in LOGEX with the Career Class in lieu of JAGEX. It is believed that Special Class students gained comparable training and experience in staff judge advocate operations from their participation in LOGEX.

A continuing feature of the instruction given Special Course students is the moot court program. This program is designed to give newly commissioned judge advocate officers practical experience in military trial practice and procedure. Moot courts are simulated general courts-martial based on factual situations prepared by faculty members. The positions of trial and defense counsel, members of the court, and witnesses are filled by members of the Special Course. Each student has at least one opportunity to act as trial or defense counsel. The Law Officer's part is played by a member of the staff and faculty.

Awards were made to members of the Thirty-Seventh and Thirty-Eighth Special Classes as follows: (See Appendix IX for the names of the recipients of these awards.)

a. A Certificate for Professional Merit from the American Bar Association to that student with the highest over-all academic standing

b. A Book Award from the Lawyers Cooperative Publishing Company to that student with the highest over-all academic standing.

c. A Certificate of Achievement and Book Award from the Commandant to that student with the second highest over-all academic standing in his class.

d. A Certificate of Achievement from the Judge Advocates Association to the outstanding student in military justice subjects.

e. A Certificate of Achievement from the Foundation of the Federal Bar Association to the outstanding student in procurement law subjects.

f. "The Judge Paul W. Brosman Award," a Certificate of Achievement from the Institute of Military Law, to the outstanding student in military affairs law subjects.

g. A Certificate of Achievement from the Commandant to the outstanding student in international law subjects.

h. A plaque from the Association of the United States Army to the outstanding student in military science subjects attending a Combat Arms Officer Orientation Course before attending the Special Course at The Judge Advocate General's School.

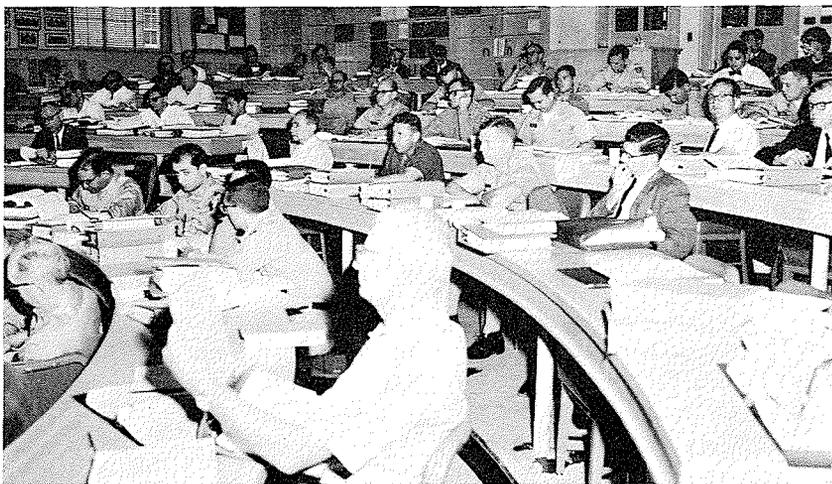

Procurement Law Course. This three-week course was given three times in Fiscal Year 1963. This course concentrates on the legal aspects of government procurement. These include a study of the general principles of government contract law, legal principles pertaining to appropriated funds, procurement policies, types of contracts, procurement by formal advertising and by competitive negotiation, mistakes in bids, modifications of contracts, cost principles, sub-contracts, price revision, disputes, claims, remedies, termination for default or convenience, taxation, labor law, and the utilization and disposition of government property.

This course enjoys an outstanding reputation throughout the Government. Although some of the other short resident courses also utilize guest lecturers, one of the distinctive features of this course is its extensive use of guest speakers who are in key positions in government procurement and can thus speak with added authority as specialists in their fields. Over one-half of the students attending these courses in FY 1963 were civilian attorneys employed by the various departments of the Department of Defense and other departments and agencies of the Government. Approximately 21% were Army Reserve judge advocates on active duty training. The remainder were Active Army, Navy, or Air Force officers.

This course is open to lawyers who are civilian employees of the Government engaged in or about to be assigned to procurement duties and to commissioned officers of the Active Armed Forces or a Reserve component who are lawyers. Although they are encouraged to attend the entire three weeks, Army Reserve judge advocates enrolled in the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component)

Short courses offered at the School cover a wide range of legal subjects and problems.

Course are permitted to attend the first two weeks of this course in satisfaction of the requirements of that course for the study of procurement law. Active Army officers who attend incur an obligation to remain on active duty for one year from the date the course ends.

Military Justice Course. This two-week course is designed to prepare lawyers to perform duties involving the application and interpretation of military criminal law. The curriculum includes the study of the law of evidence, substantive crimes, defenses and instructions, procedure, the jurisdiction of courts-martial, punishments, and appellate review of court-martial records.

This course is open to lawyers who are civilian employees of the government engaged in or about to be assigned to duties requiring a knowledge of military criminal law and practice, and to commissioned officers of the Active Armed Forces or a Reserve component who are lawyers. Army Reserve judge advocates enrolled in the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course may attend this course in satisfaction of the requirements of that course for the study of military justice. In FY 1963, the student body attending this course was predominantly composed of Army Reserve judge advocates on active duty training.

International Law Course. This two-week course is concerned with the interpretation and application of international law. Coverage is more or less equally divided between the study of those fundamental principles of international law that govern the peaceful relations between nations and those concerning the international law of war.

This course is open both to lawyers and non-lawyers who are civilian employees of the Government or commissioned officers of the Active Armed Forces or a Reserve component whose actual or anticipated assignment is to duties requiring a knowledge of international law. Army Reserve judge advocates enrolled in the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course may attend this course in satisfaction of the requirements of that course for the study of international law. In FY 1963, the student body attending this course was predominantly composed of Army Reserve judge advocates on active duty training.

Civil Law Course. This two-week resident course is concerned with claims, litigation, domestic emergencies, legal assistance, and the administration of military reservations.

This course is open to lawyers who are civilian employees of the Government engaged in or about to be assigned to duties requiring such knowledge and to commissioned officers in the Active Armed Forces or a Reserve component who are lawyers. Army Reserve judge advocates enrolled in the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course may attend this course in satisfaction of the requirements of that course for the study of these subjects. In FY 1963, the student body attending this course was predominantly composed of Army Reserve judge advocates on active duty training.

Civil Affairs Law Course. This four-week resident course provides instruction in the aspects of international law, comparative law, and the legal aspects of civil affairs activities that pertain to the duties of a Civil Affairs legal functional specialist. The course is divided into two phases of two weeks each. Phase I is not a prerequisite to Phase II. The phases are given in alternate years.

This course is primarily designed to provide instruction for lawyers who are commissioned officers of the Active Armed Forces or a Reserve component assigned to Civil Affairs units as legal functional specialists or who have demonstrated aptitude for such assignment, who also have credit for the Civil Affairs Officer and Civil Affairs Officer Advance Courses, or their equivalent. However, to permit Army Reserve judge advocates to complete essential judge advocate training at this School, these requirements are frequently waived. The course is also open to lawyers who are civilian employees of the Government whose duties may require a knowledge of international law, comparative law, and the legal aspects of civil affairs operations. In FY 1963, the student body attending Phase II of this course was predominantly composed of Army Reserve judge advocates on active duty for training the organization of the United States for national security, delegation of authority, administrative due process, and the laws and regulations governing the many aspects of the personnel process, including appointment, enlistment, promotion, reduction, discharge, pay, death and disability benefits, and matters of practice and procedure before administrative boards concerned with such matters.

This course is open to lawyers who are civilian employees of the Government engaged in or about to be assigned to duties requiring knowledge of military administrative law, and to commissioned officers of the Active Armed Forces or a Reserve component who are lawyers. Army Reserve judge advocates enrolled in the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course may attend this course in satisfaction of requirements of that course for such subjects.

In FY 1963, the student body attending this course was predominantly composed of Army Reserve judge advocates on active duty for training.

Contract Termination Law Course. This highly specialized one-week course provides instruction in the legal aspects of the termination of public contracts for default or for the convenience of the Government. Included is the study of termination claims, the termination of subcontracts, cost principles, termination inventory, and termination settlements. This course is not part of the Reserve training program.

duties. Active Army officers who attend this course incur an obligation to remain on active duty for one year from the date the course ends. The course is attended principally by civilian employees of the various departments of the Department of Defense.

Law Officer Seminar. This two-week seminar is concerned with the study of recent developments in the military justice field. Emphasis is placed on the role of the Law Officer in the administration of trials, pretrial procedure, evidence, motions, defenses, guilty pleas, instructions, and punishments. Round table seminar discussions are a prominent portion of the program.

Participation in this seminar is limited to judge advocates or legal specialists of the Active Armed Forces assigned or about to be assigned to law officer duties and to Army Reserve judge advocates who are mobilization designees to the Army Field Judiciary. Attendance is controlled by The Judge Advocate General of the Army. This seminar is not one of the courses listed in the Army School Catalog.

Judge Advocate Officer Refresher (Reserve Component) Course. This two-week survey course provides refresher training in all areas of law pertinent to military legal practice. Emphasis is placed on current trends and developments. It is part of the program of continuing legal education for Reserve component officers. It is attended only by Reserve component officers of the Armed Forces. In FY 1963, Air Force Reserve component officers comprised 35% of the student body.

This course is not a credit course for branch qualification of Reserve officers. No attempt is made to cover subjects in depth. The content of the curriculum is subject to continuous revision. Substantially new instructional material is provided at least every two years. Four volumes of instructional materials, one prepared by each law-teaching division of the department, were issued to students for their retention. These materials also provide the foundation for the USAR School New Developments Course.

Guest Speaker Program. During the course of each academic year, a large number of eminent guest speakers present lectures of interest to the faculty and student body. The subjects of their addresses cover such widely diverse topics as admiralty, patents, federal income tax, guerrilla warfare, insurgency, Army intelligence, role of CBR weapons in warfare, electronic warfare, air defense of the CONUS, psychiatry and the law, medico-legal problems in military practice, jurisprudence, private international law, the Eichmann trial, judicial philosophy and practice, law and public order in space, and the ethics of the defense lawyer.

Each speaker is selected for the experience he has accumulated, his recognized status as an authority in his field, and the importance of his subject as it bears upon the practice of military law. Among those who addressed various courses at The Judge Advocate General's School during FY 1963 were: Professor Edwin W. Patterson, Scholar in Residence, University of Virginia Law School; Professor Myres McDougal, Yale University School of Law; Lieutenant General Dwight E. Beach, Chief of Research and Development, Department of the Army; Professor Percy E. Corbett, Woodrow Wilson School of Foreign Affairs, University of Virginia; Professor William J. Curran, Boston University Law-Medicine Institute; Dr. William V. O'Brien, Chairman of the Institute of World Polity, School of Foreign Service and Graduate School, Georgetown University; and the Honorable Alexander Holtzoff, United States District Judge, District Court for the District of Columbia.

A complete list of the 71 guest speakers who addressed various courses conducted at the School during FY 1963 is contained in Appendix X.

Text Preparation Program. Long range plans were formulated and work begun in FY 1961 upon an ambitious program to prepare a series of textbooks for publication as Department of the Army pamphlets covering every subject in the curriculum of this School. It was recognized at the outset that the task would be a formidable one requiring many months to complete and that it would absorb a very substantial part of the total intellectual energies of every member of the resident faculty. The task of revision and expansion of these texts will never be complete at any one time. These volumes are the foundation for both resident and nonresident instruction. Consolidation of the substance of military law into this series of definitive text books is vital to efficient instruction—even more so for subject matter not readily available from other sources.

A list of the 23 textbooks, indicating the present stage of their development, is at Appendix XI. Only two, Procurement Law and Evidence, were completed in FY 1961; the evidence text was revised and republished in FY 1962 and seven more texts were completed that year; two more were completed in FY 1963; and the remaining twelve are still in various stages of preparation. Several of these, however, are now substantially complete. Six of them are scheduled for completion in the next six months and all but three of them by the close of FY 1964.

NONRESIDENT LEGAL TRAINING PROGRAMS

In general. The School is responsible for the development of plans and policies and the preparation of materials for the training of judge advocate reserve officers, with a view toward preparing them to fill assignments upon mobilization. The Nonresident Training Department of the School has primary responsibility for preparation and distribution of all nonresident instructional materials used to support the three nonresident training programs designed to branch qualify Judge Advocate reservists; i.e., the four-year USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course, the Judge Advocate Officer Career Extension Course, and the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course, and to support the required staff training of Judge Advocate reserve officers assigned to troop program units and to the twelve Judge Advocate General Service Organization (JAGSO) Detachments. The staff training material consists of 250 practical legal problems of the type which unit commanders may expect to encounter during various phases of the unit's operations from preparation for mobilization through accelerated training, combat, occupation, and demobilization. This new approach to provide "total legal service" has been welcomed by the unit commanders as well as their judge advocates.

The Nonresident Training Department also warehouses and ships all instructional and reference materials required by USAR School Judge Advocate branch departments, the various judge advocate sections of units, and the twelve JAGSO detachments. Further, the department conducts a large number of liaison visits each year to USAR schools as well as to CONUS Armies and U. S. Army Corps Headquarters, in order to monitor the effectiveness of training material and coordinate judge advocate reserve training plans generally.

The Nonresident Training Department is also responsible for the administration of the judge advocate extension course program, consisting of sub-courses designed to provide branch training and specialized military legal education for those who require such knowledge in the performance of their duties.

Finally, a Reserve Records File is maintained on all Judge Advocate reserve officers. A file on each reservist is kept current so as to provide information regarding his military-legal education, civilian background and experience and other pertinent biographical data. An adjunct of this file is the Directory of Army Reserve Troop Program Units which facilitates the location of reserve troop program units having judge advocate positions and the identification of personnel assigned therein.

Training Programs Available to Judge Advocate Reservists. There are three nonresident scholastic programs available to judge advocate reserve officers enabling them to complete their branch training: the four-year USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course, the 511-hour Judge Advocate Officer Career Extension Course, and the Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course. Each of these three programs is designed to parallel the Judge Advocate Officer Career Course offered in residence at the School. In addition, the USAR School Judge Advocate Reserve New Developments Course provides training to graduates of one of the Career Courses. Finally, selected training materials are prepared and distributed to the twelve Judge Advocate General Service Organization (JAGSO) Detachments, and to the judge advocate sections of other Army Reserve units.

USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course. The preferred way for a judge advocate reserve officer to complete his branch training is the USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course. This course is conducted in the judge advocate branch departments of the United States Army Reserve schools which are located in population centers throughout the country. These schools provide a program of progressive and readily accessible training for officers of the Army's reserve components not on extended active duty. The USAR schools are modeled on active Army service schools, although all staff and faculty positions are filled by reserve officers not on active duty. The USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course is four years in length and parallels the resident Judge Advocate Officer Career Course.

The USAR school year begins on 1 September each year and continues through 31 August of the following year. The reserve duty training period usually extends into June. Instruction in that period is conducted at 24 training assemblies of two hours each. During each summer, the year of instruction is completed by a two-week active duty for training period.

entirely of extension course material, and is 511 credit hours in length. However, completion of certain resident courses at the School authorizes specific subcourse exemptions. To maintain branch qualification, a minimum of 70 credit hours must be completed during each enrollment year, at least 30 of which must be completed by extension subcourses; the remaining 40 may be acquired by completing extension subcourses or resident course parallels.

Judge Advocate Officer Career (Reserve Component) Course. This third program of branch training is a modification of the Judge Advocate Officer Career Extension Course. It consists of seven phases which must be completed within four years. Though it is basically an extension course, a student completes at least three of the phases by resident courses at the School. To maintain satisfactory progress for branch qualification, two resident phases must be completed by the end of the third year, and at least one phase must be completed each year.

USAR School Judge Advocate Reserve New Developments Course. This course is designed to cover new trends and developments in various aspects of military law and to provide a training vehicle for reserve judge advocates who have actual or constructive credit for the USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course, or its equivalent. The 1962-63 reserve duty phase includes instruction on military affairs, procurement law, military justice, and civil and international law. The 1963 active duty phase contemplates attendance at one of the following resident courses: Procurement Law, Military Justice, Civil Affairs Law, Civil Law, Military Affairs, and International Law.

The Judge Advocate Army Extension Course Program. The Army Extension Course Program utilizes the medium of "home study" to provide nonresident instruction for Army personnel to whom resident instruction at the School or at USAR schools is not available.

The School offers a broad extension course program consisting of the following courses:

- a. The Judge Advocate Career Extension Course.
- b. The Special Course—Military Law for Commanding Officers.
- c. The Special Course—Legal Administrative Technician, MOS 713A.
- d. The Special Course—Legal Clerk, MOS 713.
- e. The Special Course—USAR School Students.
- f. The Special Studies for Senior JAGC Officers.
- g. The Judge Advocate Officer Basic Indoctrination Extension Course.
- h. Individual Income Tax Law Course (prepared by the Internal Revenue Service).

During Fiscal Year 1963, the steady increase in student participation in the Judge Advocate Extension Course Program continued. The number of lessons processed was up from 16,199 during Fiscal Year 1962 to 17,250 during Fiscal Year 1963. The number of sub-courses completed increased from 2,001 to 2,388 during the same period. Student enrollment also increased. On 30 June 1962 there were 1,157 students enrolled, and on 30 June 1963 there were 1,450 students enrolled.

New enrollments continued to arrive at the average of 15 per week, and cancellations of enrollment, for all reasons, averaged 12 per week during Fiscal Year 1963. During the twelve-year period beginning in 1951, there has been a steady increase in all phases of the extension course program. This steady increase in the Judge Advocate Extension Course Program is expected to continue during Fiscal Year 1964.

In the Judge Advocate Extension Course Program, the breakdown of students enrolled, as of 9 April 1963, was as follows:

By Component	By Course		Misc.	Total
	JAOCEC (18-A-E24)	JAOC(RC)C (18-A-C24)
Active Army	45	0	322	367
USAR	494	33	124	651
National Guard	57	6	22	85
U. S. Air Force	13	0	115	128
USN & USMC	7	0	39	46
Civilians	0	0	129	129

Continuing Legal Education. In addition to the USAR School Judge Advocate Reserve New Developments Course, a program of continuing legal education is available as an educational pattern for reservists beyond the Career Course level. This program includes specialization courses in International Law, Procurement Law, Military Justice, and Military Affairs, in which the student is furnished selected reference materials and is required to take an examination or prepare a treatise based on his analysis of the material. A Legal Area Specialist Program is available to reservists with a foreign language proficiency who have actual or constructive credit for the Judge Advocate Officer Career Course or its equivalent. These reservists are assigned projects which contemplate the study of foreign legal systems and foreign legal documents. A Thesis Program is also available to "graduate" reservists interested in researching current legal problems and writing theses of interest to both military and civilian lawyers. Finally, a reservist may broaden his knowledge of his client's mission by taking the Command and General Staff College Course offered in either the USAR school system or through Fort Leavenworth's extension course program.

Liaison Visits. During this report period, staff liaison visits were made to 42 USAR schools in the reserve duty training phase of the 1962-63 school year. Additionally, the six CONUS Army Headquarters and six U. S. Army Corps were visited. Finally, visits were made to all of the USAR school and JAGSO detachment ANACDUTRA 1963 training sites, as well as to the summer training camps of twelve selected USAR and National Guard Divisions. Members of the Department traveled approximately 80,000 miles to accomplish these visits. The USAR school commandants and judge advocate branch department directors, as well as the JAGSO detachment commanders, were unanimous in their approval of the new program whereby The Judge Advocate General's School has undertaken to warehouse and ship all the training material to the USAR schools and the JAGSO detachments. The visits to the divisions demonstrated the need for the preparation of a staff training program specially tailored to the needs of the judge advocate sections of these and other reserve and ARNGUS units.

Career Management.

(1) Reserve Affairs Conference. On 13-14 December 1962 an Army Staff Judge Advocate Reserve Affairs Conference was conducted in Charlottesville. This was a working conference of the Staff Judge Advocates of the six ZI Armies and was also attended by the Staff Judge Advocate, United States Continental Army Command; Assistant Executive for Reserve Affairs, Office of The Judge Advocate General; and members of this School's Nonresident Training Department. The conferees were addressed by The Judge Advocate General on 14 December. A number of problems were discussed at this conference, with special emphasis being given to the major training deficiencies noted in the judge advocate sections of the USAR and ARNGUS divisions visited during ANACDUTRA 1962.

(2) Reserve Issue of Judge Advocate Legal Service. Two issues of the Judge Advocate Legal Service devoted exclusively to judge advocate reserve matters were published during this report period. Pursuant to the direction of The Judge Advocate General, the second of these issues contained a roster of judge advocates in the Ready Reserve, listed alphabetically by state and alphabetically by name within each state. This roster was compiled from the Reserve Records File maintained in the Nonresident Training Department. It is expected that such a roster will be published annually. Although it was originally contemplated that two issues of the Judge Advocate Legal Service would be devoted to reserve matters each year, it is now planned to have only a single, annual issue, published in early October of each year.

(3) Army Reserve Training Projects. During this period the Commandant approved a Standard Operating Procedure for Army Reserve Training Projects which are being assigned to all fully branch qualified mobilization designees to this School and to additional qualified judge advocate reserve officers selected by the Commandant. Ten reservists were preparing such projects during this period, each of which involves the composition of a scholarly article in a critical area of military law with a view toward its being published, thus contributing to an increased understanding of military law by civilian and military lawyers. Foremost, however, such articles will provide analyses of critical recurring problems which confront the military lawyer, as well as a source of completed research readily available to judge advocates in the field. Additionally, such articles will be of substantial benefit to the resident instructors of the School and in the preparation of instructional material by the Nonresident Training Department.

(4) Trial Judiciary Training Program. At the Law Officers' Seminar conducted at this School from 20-31 August 1962, the views and recommendations of the mobilization designees to the Trial Judiciary were solicited regarding the formulation of a workable training program. These proposals were subsequently collated and a program designed to encompass them was approved by The Judge Advocate General. Subsequently, the Nonresident Training Department prepared a Standard Operating Procedure which sets forth procedures regarding the reserve and active duty training to be undertaken by these mobilization designees under the new program. The essence of this new program is that each mobilization designee will be confronted with problems with which he will have to cope should he be called to active duty. Its purpose is to assure his appreciation of the thoroughness and quality of the requirements placed upon the Trial Judiciary officer.

(5) Program of Instruction for the USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course. A new program of instruction for the USAR School Judge Advocate Officer Career Course was written, generally conforming to its predecessor, but incorporating several major changes regarding course composition, administration, and reference materials. The new POI represents the first of two contemplated phases of transition to block instruction for the entire USAR School Career Course, as a basis for the conformity to the nonresident career training programs with the resident career course, with respect to the subjects taught. Additionally, new procedures have been devised whereby USAR school examination grades will be forwarded to this School for permanent recording on the Judge Advocate Reserve Records File.

(6) JAGSO Detachment Training Program. A program was developed to provide direction and guidance for the Judge Advocate General Service Organization Detachments for the conduct of training of individuals and component unit teams during the three-year period following completion of ANACDUTRA 1963. Emphasis is placed upon the training of the Detachment so that the teams attached to it will meet the mobilization time requirements established by USCONARC. This training program is embodied in a USCONARC Training Circular.

(7) Revision of Judge Advocate Unit Training Program. The Department prepared a revision of Appendix VIII, Judge Advocate Training, to Annex AA to USCONARC Training Directive. The guidelines for this revision were furnished by the deficiencies in the existing judge advocate unit and staff training program observed during the liaison visits to the USAR and National Guard Division ANACDUTRA sites during 1962. Appendix VIII, as revised, establishes a positive staff training program and insures the effective participation therein of all Reserve and National Guard unit Judge advocates. Further, it places a requirement on Troop Program unit judge advocate sections to obtain and maintain a reserve unit training law library and insures that these units will be able to obtain the prescribed unit training and reference materials.

(8) Proposed Conference of JAGSO Detachment Commanders. A preliminary study has been initiated to determine the feasibility of having a two-day conference of the twelve JAGSO Detachment Commanders together with the Executive Officers for Reserve Affairs from the six CONUS Armies, for the purpose of discussing the important features of the JAGSO Training Program for the next three years.

PLANS AND PUBLICATIONS

In general. One of the primary responsibilities and missions of the School is the conducting and coordinating of research in the military legal field and providing the means for the dissemination of the knowledge thus acquired to the Judge Advocate General's Corps and the Army as a whole for its use and guidance. Moreover, the School has a responsibility, as a military law center, in aiding in the development of military law.

These functions are performed by the Plans and Publications Department. This department was formerly designated as Research and Publications, but on 1 September 1962 the functions of the Research and Plans Divisions were integrated into one office designated as the Plans Division.

To fulfill these functions, the School engages in extensive research and prepares and publishes various military legal publications. Permanent pamphlets designed to assist personnel are prepared. Various periodicals are published at regular intervals throughout the year. Training films are produced to be used throughout the Army in acquainting all military personnel with the function and operation of the military legal system and with the services the Judge Advocate General's Corps provides.

Additionally, the School prepares an integrated course of instruction in military legal subjects for use in Army service schools, super-administrative opinions of The Judge Advocate General and Comptroller General; departmental policy letters; Army regulations; and similar materials. It also serves as a medium to keep reserve judge advocate personnel informed of new developments and supplements their inactive duty training in this regard.

During the period 1 July 1962 to 30 June 1963, 29 issues of the Judge Advocate Legal Service were published and distributed. In December of 1962, the Service contained verbatim lectures on the administration and imposition of nonjudicial punishment under the new Article 15 legislation. The lectures were written by members of the Publications Division, and the Legal Service was selected as the most feasible vehicle for their dissemination in time to comply with the 1 February 1963 training deadline established by the Department of the Army. Also published was a new list of regulations of particular interest to judge advocates.

(2) The Procurement Legal Service is a publication which provides prompt information on current developments in government contract law to legal personnel of the armed forces engaged in procurement activities. It includes digests of opinions of The Judge Advocate General of the Army, decisions of the Comptroller General of the United States, decisions of the Armed Services Board of Contract Appeals, and decisions of the federal courts.

(3) The Military Law Review is a Department of the Army pamphlet series issued quarterly. The Review is distributed to all active Army and Ready Reserve judge advocate officers and is sold by the Superintendent of Documents to interested civilian agencies and individuals. Although published as a Department of the Army pamphlet, the format is identical to that of the usual civilian law review. Articles in the Review treat subjects of military law in its broadest sense. Contributions are received from legal officers of all three armed services, foreign officers and attorneys, members of the staff and faculty, law school professors, and judge advocate reserve officers.

In Fiscal Year 1963 issue number 27-100-18 contained a symposium on procurement law with articles by distinguished scholars in this field. In issue number 27-100-21 appeared the first in what is planned as a series of biographical sketches of famous judge advocates. The subjects of these sketches are judge advocates who have distinguished themselves both in the service and in civilian life.

(4) The Trial Counsel and the Defense Counsel Handbook is designed to assist trial counsel, defense counsel and pretrial investigation counsel in the performance of their duties. The duties which counsel is to perform prior to, during the progress of, and after trial are described and discussed. Workable solutions for many specific problems which may arise both before and at trial are suggested. This pamphlet was published and distributed during Fiscal Year 1963.

(5) The Law Officer Pamphlet is intended primarily to serve as a practical guide for the law officer of a general court-martial. The duties of a law officer are described and discussed, and workable solutions to specific problems are suggested. It is also designed to aid the law officer in the preparation of his instructions to the members of the court, and many sample instructions are set out. During Fiscal Year 1963, coordination was begun with the Army Field Judiciary for revision of this pamphlet.

(6) During Fiscal Year 1962 the School made a study to determine the desired content and scope of a revised supplement to the Manual for Courts-Martial to replace the Cumulative Pocket Part to the Manual for Courts-Martial, last published in 1959. Also considered was the possibility of the adoption of a comprehensive one volume loose-leaf military justice service, similar in format to the commercial loose-leaf tax services, on a tri-service basis.

In Fiscal Year 1963 the School, as Department of the Army Agency, began informal interservice coordination on the project. That coordination is still in progress. In addition, commercial law book publishers were consulted as to the feasibility and cost of such an undertaking.

(7) The Staff Judge Advocate Handbook is designed to aid the judge advocate in the field in the practical aspects of his duties and to serve as a text for resident and nonresident courses in judge advocate activities. Successive chapters will describe the field operations of the staff judge advocate and cover the organization and functions of his section and his responsibilities as a working member of the staff, and the relationships he should attain and maintain with his commander, the Chief of Staff, other members of the general staff, subordinate commanders, The Judge Advocate General, superior, subordinate, adjacent staff judge advocates, and the civilian community. The handbook also covers relationships with other non-military agencies, operations in overseas areas, the organization and operations of the Army Judiciary, and offers practical considerations for the most efficient operation of a staff judge advocate section. The first edition of this pamphlet was sent to the printer during Fiscal Year 1963 and will be distributed early in Fiscal Year 1964.

(8) In addition to the verbatim lectures published in the Judge Advocate Legal Service, the School published a wallet size card which summarizes the policies, procedures, and authorized punishments applicable to nonjudicial punishment under the new Article 15, UCMJ. This card (GTA 27-1) is designed to provide the commander with a ready reference when handling a disciplinary problem under Article 15. It will be distributed early in Fiscal Year 1964.

(9) The School has proposed distribution of a newsletter tentatively entitled, Commander's Legal Service. The purpose of this quarterly publication will be to summarize, in non-legal prose, the legal authorities which affect the commander's performance of his mission. Sample issues are being prepared for submission to the Army Publications Board for approval. If approval is granted, the first issue is planned for the third quarter of Fiscal Year 1964.

(10) Military Law and Boards of Officers (ROTCM 145-85) is a pamphlet used for instruction in military justice in ROTC courses throughout the country. Although the U. S. Army Infantry Training Center has overall responsibility for ROTC training materials, the School supervises the legal training materials. During Fiscal Year 1963, ROTCM 145-85 was completely revised and submitted to USCONARC for use in the ROTC program.

Training films. In addition to the films which have already been produced and are available for showing throughout the Army, two new films were released during Fiscal Year 1963 and distributed to the field. "Evidentiary Problems and Trial Techniques" (TF 15-3178), a 66-minute film, is designed to instruct line officers who may be detailed as a counsel or court member in an inferior court-martial and also to instruct newly commissioned judge advocates. The second film, "Your Legal Assistance Officer" (TF 15-3286), is designed to acquaint all Army personnel with the services available through the legal assistance program.

A third film, "Nonjudicial Punishment," has been staffed and will be filmed shortly. It will detail the operation and the effect of nonjudicial punishment under the new Article 15.

Instruction in the Army Service Schools. In 1961 and 1962, the School studied the adequacy of training in the common subject courses for which it has monitoring responsibility (military justice and congressional relations). It was determined that training in these courses was inadequate. To meet this deficiency, programs of instruction were prepared and forwarded to United States Continental Army Command for approval. They set forth what was considered to be the desired minimum legal instruction in these areas of training. In addition to the traditional military justice training, the programs of instruction include training in the basic principles of international law, military administrative law, and other related subjects. They reflect the need for potential commanders to be aware of the current refinement in military law and the increasing legal problems brought about by the world-wide commitment of the United States Army.

Special Activities.

(1) Judge Advocate General's Conference. The 1962 Judge Advocate General's Conference was held during the period 24-27 September 1962 at The Judge Advocate General's School, Charlottesville, Virginia. The conference enabled senior judge advocates from throughout the world to meet and discuss important new developments in military law. Prominent guest speakers included General Paul D. Adams, Commander-in-Chief, United States STRIKE Command; Brigadier W. J. Lawson, Judge Advocate General of the Canadian Forces; and Mr. Abram J. Chayes, the Legal Advisor, Department of State. In addition, selected speakers from the Office of The Judge Advocate General and from major continental and overseas commands addressed the conferees as to developments and problems in their respective fields.

(2) Army Field Judiciary Conference. The second annual conference of the officers of the Army Field Judiciary was held in Charlottesville immediately prior to the Judge Advocate General's Conference. This conference brought together the Army's law officers for the purpose of discussing significant legal issues which have arisen during the last year in the Field Judiciary. Members of the Army's boards of review also participated.

(3) LOGEX. The School was charged with the responsibility of planning and supervising the judge advocate play of LOGEX 1963. The large scale logistical exercise was divided into two phases. In Phase I, the judge advocate sections were manned by 63 reserve officers together with 5 warrant officers and 72 enlisted men. In Phase II, these positions were manned by the 16 members of the Career Class together with the 100 junior officers attending the 38th Special Class. This was the first year that the entire Special Class participated. The actual play of Phase II was preceded by 16 hours of pre-LOGEX instruction given by the School. LOGEX 1963 was found to be a valuable teaching device in confronting the players with the multifarious legal problems arising in a logistical command. The play by the judge advocate officers also demonstrated the value of the Judge Advocate General's Corps to the other branches of the Army.

(4) The Judge Advocate General's Corps Exhibit. During the last year, the Judge Advocate General's Corps exhibit, which consists of illustrated panels depicting various activities and functions of the Corps, was further enlarged. It was displayed both at the American Bar Association Convention in San Francisco and at the ABA Mid-Winter Regional Meeting in Little Rock, Arkansas. The exhibit attracted considerable attention at these meetings and aided materially in informing the civilian bar and the public of the functions of the Corps.

(5) Enlisted Evaluation Program for MOS Code 713. The Plans Division together with the Enlisted Evaluation Center, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, has the responsibility of conducting the enlisted evaluation program for legal clerks and court reporters, MOS Code 713. The purpose of the program is to determine the qualification of an individual for his particular grade and his eligibility for proficiency pay and promotion. The grades achieved by the individual are the composite result of a commander's evaluation report, a paper and pencil test, and, in the case of court reporters, a performance test in reporting and transcribing.

During the past year this division critically examined with the aid of statistical data the paper and pencil tests, and further refinements were made. In addition, a new 30-minute tape recording utilizing an extract from an actual record of trial was made at the School for the court reporter's performance test. The examinees were required to record the examination and arguments and transcribe them in the proper format. The finished transcripts are presently being graded at the School. In addition, work is now being done on the preparation of a new test tape for 1964.

(6) Organizational Studies. Numerous studies involving the reorganization of Army combat units were reviewed for judge advocate interest. Recommendations were made as to judge advocate operations in both the combat support to the field army and administrative support to the communications zone. In addition, comment was made as to the organization of a judge advocate section of an air assault division. Continual comment by the Plans Division will be necessary as future organizational changes are proposed.

(7) Automatic Data Processing System. One member of the staff and faculty was detailed by The Judge Advocate General to make a comprehensive examination to determine the present and future utilization of Automatic Data Processing System by the Judge Advocate General's Corps. The major portion of this investigative work was accomplished in Fiscal Year 1963, and a final report on the findings is anticipated during the early part of Fiscal Year 1964.

(8) Court Reporter Classes. The School maintains liaison with the U. S. Naval School of Justice, Newport, Rhode Island, in the training of Army court reporters at Newport. 188 reporters, including 65 reservists, were trained in Fiscal Year 1963.

ADMINISTRATION

In general. The Office of the School Secretary, working under the direction and guidance of the Commandant, is responsible for all matters pertaining to administration, personnel, finance, billeting, transportation, logistics, and security, insofar as facilities and personnel permit.

This office also administers the following programs: records administration, reports control, voting, and command management.

It handles the official correspondence of the School, controls classified material, maintains personnel records and record files, prepares training aids, and reproduces materials published by the School.

Finally, the office is responsible for coordinating supply activities, preparing all budget and fiscal matters, operating the School reading rooms, and coordinating with the University of Virginia administration in arranging suitable classroom facilities.

Facilities of the School.

(1) The Judge Advocate General's School Building. This structure, dedicated on 26 September 1956, is a three-story red brick building of Georgian architecture. It contains 43 offices and 26 furnished rooms which are used as living quarters for personnel on temporary duty at the School. There is also a supply room, a bookstore, an enlisted men's dayroom, and a suite which is made available for visitors to the School. The Judge Advocate General's School Officers' Open Mess consists of a lounge and an outdoor patio on the fourth floor of the building.

Two rooms on the second floor of the building are set aside for reading and study purposes. These rooms contain a selected collection of military law books and periodicals as well as cognate materials in the fields of military history, military tactics, leadership and discipline, and international law.

Among the offices located in The Judge Advocate General's School building are Office of the Commandant, Office of the School Secretary, the Plans and Publications Department, the Nonresident Training Department, and several offices of the Academic Department.

(2) Clark Hall. Located directly opposite the JAG School Building, Clark Memorial Hall houses the University of Virginia Law School. The JAG School utilizes two classrooms in this building on a full-time basis. One of these is designed to accommodate 96 students, and the other has a seating capacity of 60.

The larger room is used principally for the Special Classes and the smaller room is occupied nine months of the year by the Career Class. The large room was extensively renovated and redecorated to include new desks, seats, shelving, lighting, air conditioning, sound equipment and training aids. The 37th Special Class was the first class to use this newly refurbished room on 13 November 1962. The smaller classroom was also redone. New desks, more comfortable chairs and new sound amplification equipment were added. Both rooms are used year-round and are available in the evenings for study purposes.

(3) Libraries. The School generally furnishes each student with the basic textbooks and other classroom materials which he will need during a course. However, where additional references are required, and for general research purposes, students attending The Judge Advocate General's School are permitted and are encouraged to utilize both the Law Library of the University of Virginia and Alderman Library, the general library of the University.

Housed in Clark Hall, the Law Library of the University of Virginia contains approximately 140,000 volumes. It has an extensive collection of published reports of the American federal and state courts, the reports of the courts of the United Kingdom, treatises, digests, encyclopedias, and indices and citator services. It also contains the statutes of the United States, of the several states, and of Great Britain. The Library receives every current legal periodical of general interest printed in the English language. The program of The Judge Advocate General's School requires frequent recourse to the Library; the use of the Library is subject to regulations, copies of which are available at the circulation desk.

The Alderman Library has about 1,360,000 volumes and a particularly fine collection of official Government publications. It has been designated by the United States Government as a depository for public documents.

Quarters. Bachelor officers' quarters are available in The Judge Advocate General's School Building. Assignment of rooms may be effected through the School Secretary. Linens, towels, maid service, and other conveniences are provided.

The JAG School has been authorized to lease 30 sets of quarters to be utilized as government quarters in lieu of BAQ. Presently these will be reserved for married EM and Career Class students. Other officers with dependents are advised to visit Charlottesville as early as possible to look for housing. The School Secretary and the University Housing Division maintain lists of available apartments and houses in the Charlottesville area.

Messing. Government messing facilities are not available at The Judge Advocate General's School. However, there is a snack bar in the Officers' Open Mess serving breakfast and light lunches. There are also available a number of dining halls and snack bars operated by the University of Virginia, as well as many convenient commercial restaurants.

Officers' Open Mess. The top floor of The Judge Advocate General's School Building, consisting of two large rooms and an open-air patio, is set aside as the Officers' Open Mess. The rooms are tastefully furnished with large comfortable chairs and sofas of the Jeffersonian style, writing tables, a television set, piano, radio and record player, and other accessories. These rooms are open daily for the use of all members. In the evening hours, refreshments and snacks are available.

During the year, the Mess sponsors a full program of activities and social events for the benefit of its members, including dances, picnics, class receptions, social hours, and bridge nights.

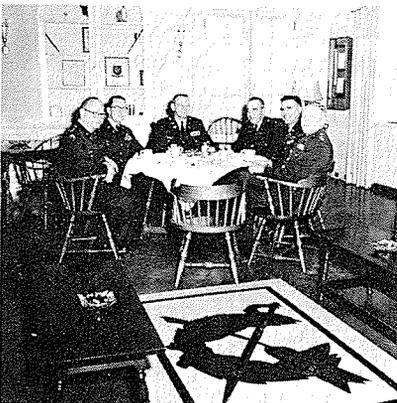

Bookstore. A small bookstore is operated in the west end of the JAG School Building on the first floor. Various drug items, uniform equipment, stationery supplies, cigarettes and tobacco, souvenir items, gifts, and books are available for purchase. Uniforms may be ordered through the Bookstore. Various catalogues are also available for ordering particular items at a discount.

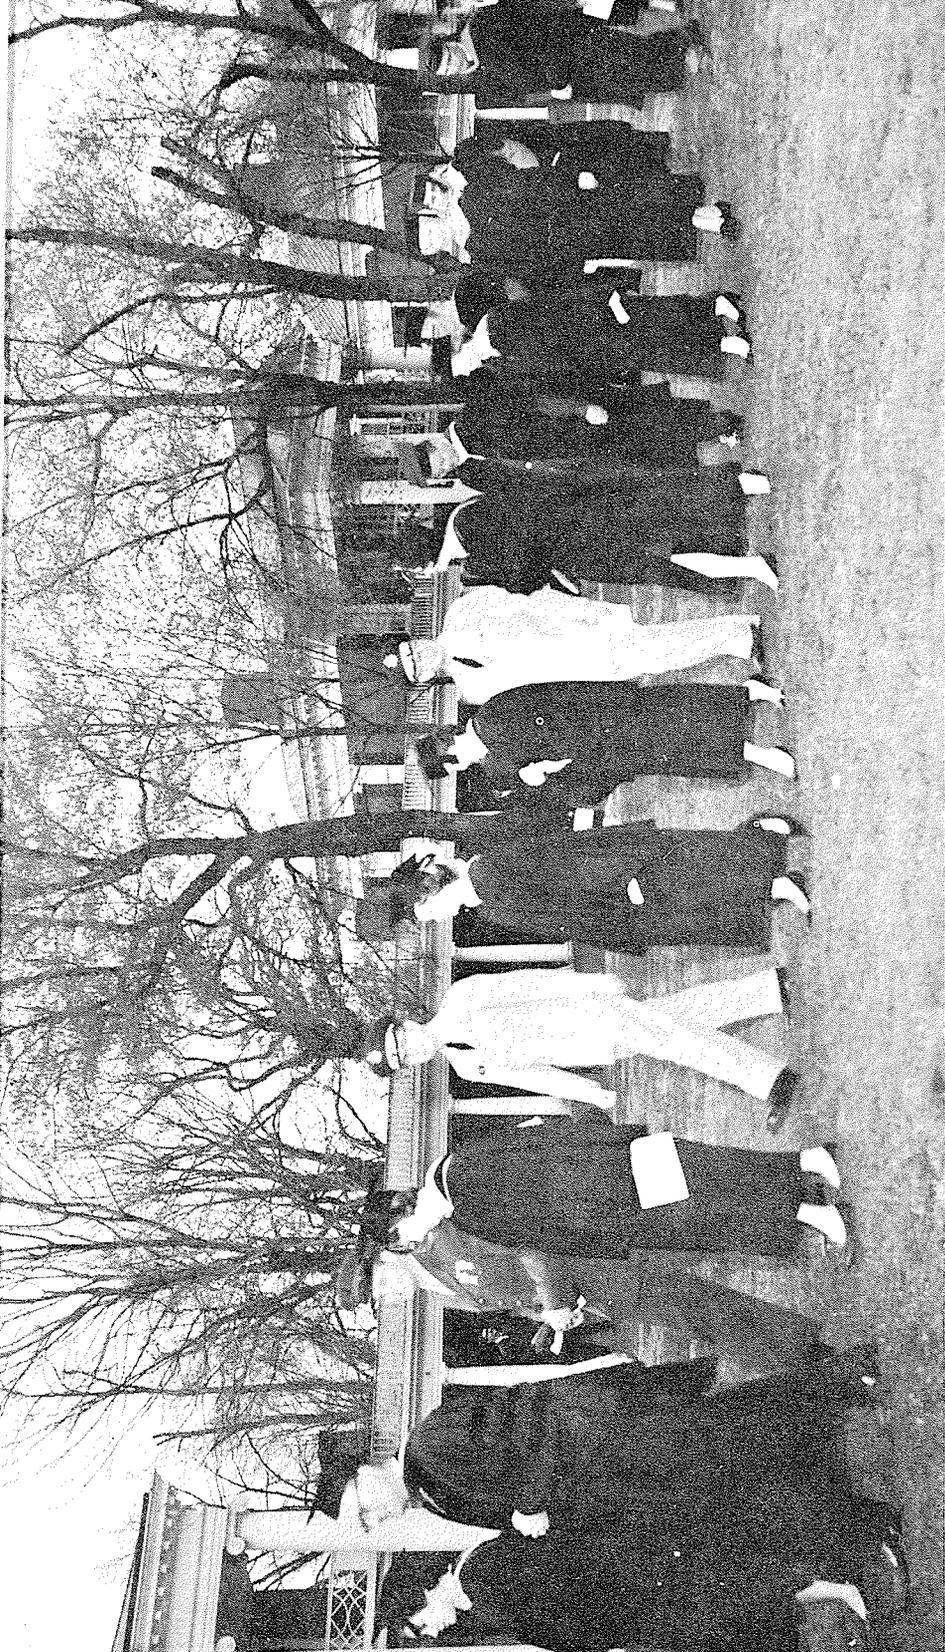

Logistical Support. Government storage facilities are not available nor is there a transportation officer assigned to the School. However, the Chief of Logistics can provide necessary assistance and advice in arranging for shipment and/or storage of household goods, concurrent travel, and other items of logistical support, subject to available time and facilities.

Adjutant and Personnel Offices. The Adjutant's Office is responsible for the processing of all incoming and outgoing personnel. Billeting arrangements and assistance are also handled by this office. The School Mail Room is operated by the Adjutant.

The School has no finance officer. However, the Personnel Officer is available to provide necessary assistance and advice in matters relating to pay and allowances. This office also maintains the School's personnel and health records and prepares travel and per diem vouchers for students.

The Commandant and the Director of the Academic Department participate in the University of Virginia Commencement Exercises.

Medical and Dental Facilities. The Judge Advocate General's School is satellited on Fort Lee, Virginia, for medical and dental care, where a complete Army hospital is located. Locally, a contract surgeon located in the Student Health Center of the University of Virginia provides out-patient services for military personnel. Finally, because of the distance from a U.S. Army hospital, dependents of military personnel stationed at the JAG School are entitled to full coverage of all benefits provided under Medicare.

Dental care and eye examinations for military personnel assigned to the School are available from any local dentist and eye doctor on an individual contract basis. However, there are no provisions for such care for dependents.

Drugs are generally available from the stocks maintained at the Student Health Center and by means of a mail service with the Fort Lee Hospital Pharmacy.

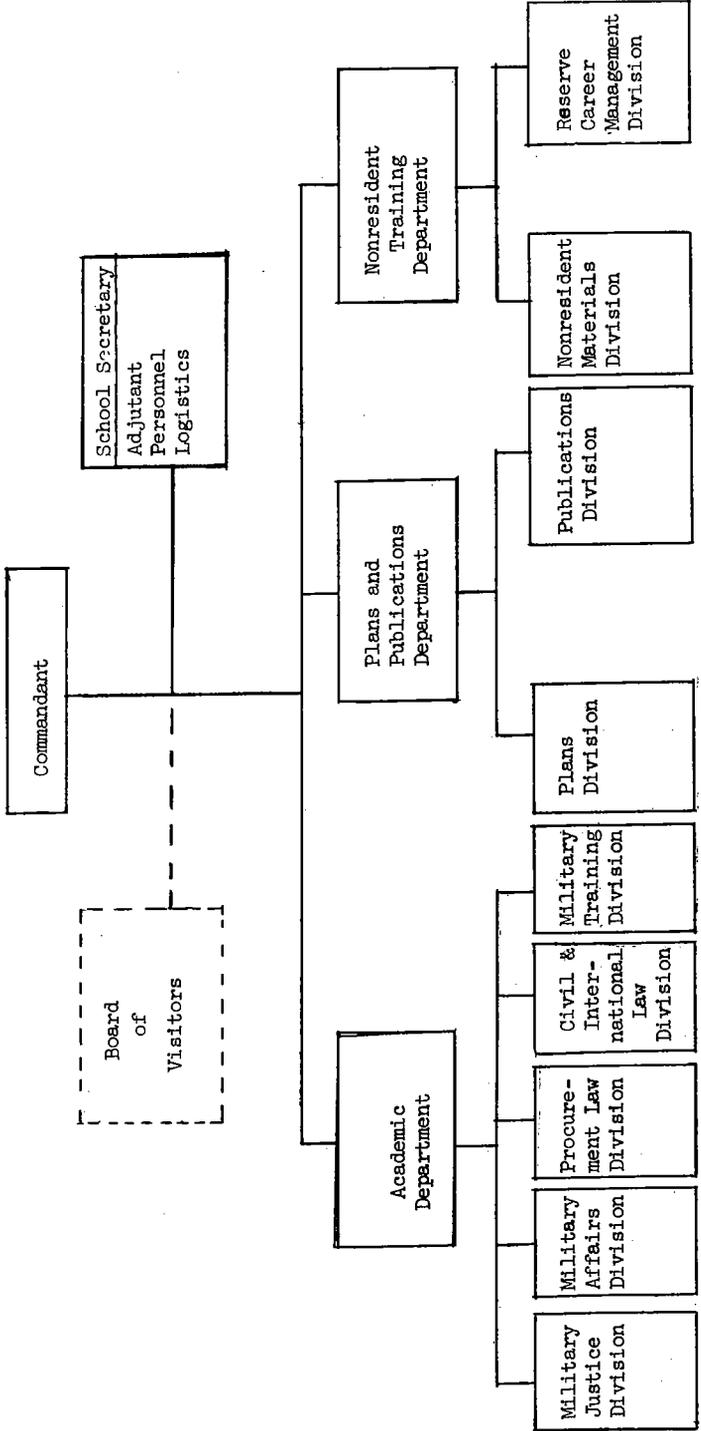

Athletic Facilities. Assigned and attached military personnel and all students are permitted to use all athletic facilities of the University of Virginia, including the tennis courts, bowling alleys, swimming pools, and all the indoor facilities at the University's Memorial Gymnasium. Both the School and the Intramural Department of the University have a limited amount of athletic equipment for the use of students and the staff and faculty, and lockers in the University Gymnasium may be rented on a limited basis by personnel attached to the JAG School. Additional golf, tennis, bowling and swimming facilities are also available in the Charlottesville area.

The Alumni Association. The Association of Alumni of the Judge Advocate General's School, U. S. Army, was established by the Commandant on 15 January 1963. To date there are approximately 250 members. All students, past and present, and members of the Staff and Faculty are eligible for membership. The School Secretary is also the Secretary of the Association and all inquiries or requests for membership should be addressed to him.
