Introduction

Novelists, historians, and others often ask librarians in the Local History and Genealogy Reading Room to help them find sources that describe the details of daily living for all Americans or for specific groups, e.g. Irish immigrants, or for a specific place, e.g. New York City, at a particular period in the nation’s history. This bibliography, organized by subject, lists works from the Library of Congress general collections which provide such information. Researchers may also use the Library of Congress’ online catalog at http://catalog.loc.gov/ and the catalogs of other libraries to locate such books by using Library of Congress subject headings.

A subject heading is a word or phrase used in the catalog’s “Basic Search” under “subject browse” that allows you to find all the library’s books on that subject. Go to the Library’s online catalog and click on “Basic Search.” Then highlight “subject browse.” Type any Library of Congress subject heading into the “search text” space at the top. The following list gives some of the most fruitful headings:

- United States–Social conditions
- Women immigrants–United States–Social conditions
- United States–Emigration and immigration
- Immigrants–United States–Social conditions
- Immigrants–United States–Social life and customs

When the researcher types in a broad subject such as “United States–Social conditions,” the catalog will give many sub-headings, allowing a choice of type and often of place. The researcher may substitute other places, such as “California–Social conditions.”

This flexible pairing of “subject heading” and “sub-heading” means that each time a “subject heading” is typed in, the catalog will automatically add all of the “sub-headings.”

Any immigrant group can be searched as a subject, such as

- Norwegian Americans
- Chinese Americans
- Dutch Americans.

Particularly fruitful sub-headings for these—to show aspects of daily life—are

- Biography
- History
- Social conditions
- Diaries
- Letters
- Personal narratives
EXAMPLES:

Irish Americans–Social conditions

Chinese Americans–Biography

Drinking customs–United States

The Library of Congress Subject Headings are available as a set of bound volumes in most U.S. public and academic libraries. They can also be searched on the Library of Congress Authorities website at http://authorities.loc.gov/.

Lomax collection of photographs depicting folk musicians, primarily in the southern United States and the Bahamas [graphic]. 1934-ca. 1950.
   400 photoprints: gelatin silver: 4x5 cm. or smaller.
   Subject: Snapshots primarily documenting sound recording expeditions carried out by John Avery Lomax, Alan Lomax, and Ruby Terrill Lomax for the Archive of American Folk Song from 1934 to ca. 1950. Photographs depict African American, white, and Latino musicians, singers and dancers, in the southern United States (Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Texas, and Virginia) and the Bahamas (Nassau, Andros Island, and Cat Island). Includes portraits of musicians posed with and without their instruments; many photos show musicians in various settings and activities—at homes, working in prison yards, working on chain gangs, performing outside and on stage at the Asheville Mountain Music Festival, North Carolina. Some photos depict daily life, including domestic activities, baptisms, and farming. Also includes some landscape and marine views, houses, and children playing singing games. Musicians depicted include, among others, Henry Truvillion, James "Iron Head" Baker, Moses "Clear Rock" Platt, Leadbelly, Crockett "Davy" Ward, Bill Hensley, Uncle Bob Ledbetter, and Bascom Lamar Lunsford. Folklorist Zora Neale Hurston, who assisted the Lomaxes on expeditions to Georgia and Florida is identified in a few photographs.
   No known restrictions. For more information see: "Lomax Collection (LOT 7414) Rights and Restrictions Information" (http://www.loc.gov/rr/print/res/159_loma.html)
   Digitized images of all items in the collection and their associated identifying information are available through the Prints & Photographs Online Catalog.
   Digitized images are also available through the Library of Congress Web site under the title: Southern mosaic, The John and Ruby Lomax 1939 Southern States Recording Trip, produced in 1999 for the National Digital Library Program, American Memory collections. This site also features associated sound recordings, field notes, and other manuscript materials.
   Photographer names do not appear on the photographs. Many images were taken by Alan Lomax and Ruby Terrill Lomax, and possibly others working with them. Photos of the Bog Trotters Band, Galax, Va., are marked: "These pictures were made by CBS photographer at the time of the A. Lomax School of the Air Broadcast in Galax”.

Most photographs have handwritten or typed identifications or other markings on the versos.
LOT title devised by Library staff.
Digital surrogates are provided for reference purposes. Access to original material is controlled by the Division’s policy of providing surrogates in preference to serving originals.

Summary: "An extensive collection of trade catalogs dating from the 19th and 20th centuries. The illustrations generally appear with greater clarity than does the text. Many catalogs pre-date the Civil War although post-war industrialization and production steadily expanded the use of the illustrated trade catalog as a means of advertising for the building supplies industry. Architects, builders and homeowners could consult the catalogs for products that would increase their comfort and convenience as well as enhance the aesthetics of their homes. The collection would well serve the historian and the restorer"–The Library of Congress Guide to the Microform Collections in the Humanities and Social Sciences Division, online version.

Searching for Information on the Internet

There is a good deal of information on daily life in America to be found on the free Internet. However, using standard Internet search engines such to find this information can sometimes be difficult, because search engines use keywords instead of standardized subject headings to locate relevant websites. There are many additional avenues for locating information on these topics:

1. Full-text archives: American Memory (from the Library of Congress; http://memory.loc.gov/) and The Making of America (two separate online archives from the University of Michigan and Cornell University; http://www.hi.umich.edu/m/maagrp/ and http://cdl.library.cornell.edu/moa/) provide digitized primary source materials related to American history. American Memory includes both published and non-book materials (such as photographs and sound recordings) from the colonial period to the present, while the Making of America sites consist of full-text reproductions of American books and periodicals from the 19th century. Both have site-specific keyword search engines. There are other digital archives with information organized by region, state, or topic. Some examples are given below:

   a. Region: Documenting the American South ( http://docsouth.unc.edu/ ); Library of Western Fur Trade Historical Source Documents ( http://www.xmission.com/~drudy/mtman/mnarch.html )
   b. State: Digitized Connecticut History Books ( http://www.quinnipiac.edu/x6776.xml ); The Kansas Collection ( http://www.kancoll.org/ )

2. American history site directories and virtual reference shelves: The Humanities and Social Sciences Division of the Library of Congress maintains an annotated virtual reference shelf dubbed "Alcove 9"; the U.S. History section of Alcove 9 ( http://www.loc.gov/rr/main/alcove9/ushist.html ) includes links to many of the websites described in here. Public and academic libraries also maintain virtual reference shelves with an emphasis on American history, e.g. Multnomah County Library ( http://www.multicolib.org/homework/amshthc.html ). Many private individuals have created subject-specific site directories, such as The American West (originally created by Western history enthusiast Bengt Lindblad; http://www.americanwest.com/ ).

3. Educational websites: The educational publishing firm Scholastic provides a large collection of links to free online resources for K-12 educators at http://teacher.scholastic.com/ ; relevant examples include From Homemaker to Shipbuilder (women on the American home front during World War II; http://teacher.scholastic.com/activities/wwii/ahf/reilly/ ). Anti-Slavery International sponsors Breaking the Silence: Learning About the Transatlantic Slave Trade, an online collection of teaching resources and external links on such subjects as North American plantation life and slave sales and auctions ( http://www.antislavery.org/breakingthesilence/ ). Farm and Daily Life is an example (from Ontario, Canada) of a personal website created and maintained by a teacher, and providing numerous external links (http://www.eagle.ca/~matink/themes/Pioneers/farm.html).

4. Online exhibits: Offered by museums, libraries, and academic institutions, online exhibits often include images, narrative descriptions, and bibliographic references to materials on American daily life and culture. For example, the Smithsonian Institution maintains a list of links to online exhibits and other resources on American social and cultural history available on its website at http://www.si.edu/resource/faq/nmah/. The Balch Institute of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania has a number of online exhibits, including Freedom for Some: The Japanese American Internment Experience (http://www2.hsp.org/exhibits/Balch%20resources/internment/html/intro_page.html) and Destination U.S.A. (digitized documents related to steamship passages to America; http://www.hsp.org/default.aspx?id=60). An online exhibit on Pioneer Asian Indian Immigration to the Pacific Coast (http://www.sikhpioneers.org/) offers historical photographs, bibliography, and numerous external links.

5. Genealogy websites: Genealogy site directories such as Cyndi's List (http://www.cyndislist.com/) can often be "mined" for links to digitized books, diaries, letters, and other first-person accounts of daily life in America. Examples of such sites include Tracing Mormon Pioneers (from genealogical researcher Bill Nelson; http://www.xmission.com/~nelsonb/pioneer.htm), with online transcriptions of various published emigration narratives; and the Mardos Memorial Library of On-Line Books and Maps (transcriptions of books from the library of genealogical researcher Pam Reitsch; http://www.memoriallibrary.com/).
