RDA Works

How do I choose the preferred title for a collection?

RDA 6.2.2.10 instructs: "If a compilation of works is commonly identified by a title or form of title in manifestations embodying that compilation or in reference sources, apply the instructions at 6.2.2.4–6.2.2.7." In other words, choose as the preferred title the title by which the compilation is commonly identified. If, in the judgment of the cataloger, the compilation does not have a title by which it is "commonly identified," a conventional collective title is chosen as the preferred title (see 6.2.2.10.2). However, in April 2021, PCC approved a policy that eliminates the use of conventional collective titles in certain cases. See https://www.loc.gov/aba/pcc/naco/documents/PCC-Policy-Partial-Compilations-Works-One-Agent.pdf

This is entirely a matter for the judgment of the cataloger. RDA itself gives little advice on how to decide if a title is the "commonly identified" title of a collection. Clearly if a title appears on the title page that is a title for the compilation. However, that title is not necessarily the title by which a particular compilation can be "commonly identified" by library users, even if the compilation has been published only once. Catalogers might consider whether the title is easily identifiable to users as the title of a particular collection or not. "The Canterbury tales" is a well-known, distinctive, and easily identifiable collection of stories by Geoffrey Chaucer and would be chosen as the preferred title of this compilation over "Short stories. Selections". Similarly, "A Shropshire lad" would be chosen as the preferred title for this collection of poems by A.E. Housman rather than "Poems. Selections". On the other hand, the title "Three stories and ten poems", referring to a collection of stories and poems by Ernest Hemingway, might in the judgment of the cataloger not be considered a title by which the collection is "commonly identified" in the sense that it is well-known, distinctive, and easily identifiable. In such a case the cataloger might be justified in choosing "Works. Selections" as the preferred title, although, according to the April 2021 PCC policy, the manifestation title "Three stories and ten poems" would be considered a "commonly identified" title.

The sub-instructions in RDA 6.2.2.10 distinguish between Complete Works, Complete Works in a Single Form, and Other Compilations of Two or More Works.

Compilations that purport to be complete (RDA 6.2.2.10.1) should always use the conventional collective title as the preferred title, whatever the title of the manifestation. If the complete works (poems, etc.) of an individual agent are published again under a different title this will

1 Note that 6.2.2.10.3 gives the cataloger the option of bypassing the question of preferred title for the compilation entirely by naming the individual works in the collection instead.
create a conflict; neither manifestation title will necessarily be the "commonly identified" title of the individual agent's complete works (poems, etc.).

Unless a choice is clearly incorrect catalogers should respect the judgment of other catalogers once a preferred title has been declared by establishing it as part of the authorized access point in a NACO authority record. Subsequent catalogers can always record additional variant access points based on variant titles they might have chosen as the preferred title.

Do preferred titles for complete collections of an individual agent's work (Works, Plays, Poems, Paintings, etc.) need to be qualified?

No. When considered as a whole there can be only one set of the complete works (plays, etc.) of an individual agent. There cannot be a collection referred to by the conventional collective title "Works" (or "Plays", etc.) differing in content from another collection of the complete works (plays, etc.) of that individual, and therefore that preferred title will never need to be qualified to differentiate it. There may be disagreements about the authenticity of certain of an individual's works but in fact that individual created one and only one set of works (or plays, or paintings, etc.).

100 1_ Shakespeare, William, $d 1564-1616. $t Works
100 1_ Wilde, Oscar, $d 1854-1900. $t Works

Note: For practical reasons compilations that purport to be complete are considered to be complete. This is based on the principle of representation. The cataloger is not required or expected to verify the completeness of the collection, nor should the cataloger attempt to compare different collections purporting to be complete to verify that they contain the same works. (This applies to living persons, who may create more works after the publication of a compilation purporting to be complete. Follow the principle of representation and consider it to be complete.) In addition, catalogers are not expected to make judgments about which works should or should not be contained within an individual's canon of authentic works.

\textsuperscript{2} The conventional collective title "Fragments" should be treated as denoting completeness, i.e., the complete set of an individual's fragments, even though for ancient authors such as Aristophanes new fragments may be discovered from time to time.
Can compilations created after an individual agent's lifetime or without the individual agent's authorization be treated in this way?

Yes. Collections and groupings of an individual's works can be described in authority records and have authorized access points, particularly if the grouping has become standard, even if the grouping is not the individual's own.

Do preferred titles for selections from the works of an individual agent (RDA 6.2.2.10.2, RDA 6.2.2.10.3) need to be qualified?

Generally speaking, yes. Unlike compilations that purport to be complete, there is no assumption that different compilations that purport to be incomplete contain the same set of works. To the contrary, the assumption is that they contain different works. For practical reasons catalogers make this assumption; they are not required to compare the contents of different collections to find out if they might contain the same works. The cataloger can make the assumption that they are different. The following examples show differentiation of existing conventional collective titles.3 (note the absence of subfield coding before the qualifier):

100 1_ Dickens, Charles, $d 1812-1870. $t Short stories. $k Selections (Christmas stories)
100 1_ Dickens, Charles, $d 1812-1870. $t Short stories. $k Selections (Douglas-Fairhurst)

110 2_ Rometti Costales (Artist group). $t Works. $k Selections (2016)

Choice of qualifier. The qualifier may be any of the elements listed in RDA 6.27.1.2: form of the compilation, date of the compilation, place of origin of the compilation, or any other distinguishing characteristic of the compilation. The cataloger should choose whatever qualifier best answers the question: "what makes this compilation different from others?", and whatever qualifier will best identify the compilation to database users. This may involve consideration of the type of qualifiers that have already been used in the file.

Exceptions to the need to qualify

Compilations unlikely to appear more than once. The publication of selections of a person’s works is a somewhat rare occurrence, and the publication of more than one

3 Under the April 2021 PCC policy, conventional collective titles would not be used to describe these collections.
different compilation occurs even less often. Under the April 2021 PCC policy, in most cases, the manifestation titles of these compilations would be chosen as the preferred title, and a conventional collective title would not be used. This action eliminates the realm of conflict considerably, especially if a second publication of selections of the person’s works is issued. It is not likely that a second publication of selections of the person’s works would use the same manifestation title. The following examples show the use of conventional collective titles when there is only one publication of the compilation.

100 1_ Abad, José Ramón. $t Works. $k Selections
100 0_ Chalœ̄msak Ngǣmngām. $t Short stories. $k Selections

100 1_ Hannum, Brian $c (Poet). $t Poems. $k Selections
110 2_ ATIKA (Artistic group). $t Works. $k Selections

If the judgment that selections from an individual agent’s works will not be published again later proves incorrect, the decision can be revisited and the preferred title for the first-published compilation may be qualified to distinguish it from that of the new compilation. An authority record established for a subsequent compilation containing different selections should always be qualified to differentiate it.

Well-known compilations. Certain compilations or groupings are published over and over. If the cataloger knows different compilations contain the same works, or if the compilations represent themselves as being the same, the same preferred title may be used (including qualifier, if any) for different iterations of the collection. In such cases it is likely that the compilation will be known by a particular title and therefore the cataloger will probably not choose a conventional collective title as its preferred title.

Whether a particular title or a conventional collective title is chosen as the preferred title for the compilation, the same principle applies as mentioned above under complete works. If a compilation purports to be the same as another iteration of the compilation it is considered to be the same. The cataloger is not required to verify that the works contained in it are the same. This principle applies even in extreme cases such as Walt Whitman’s Leaves of grass, which started out as a collection of twelve poems and grew through a series of editions published during the author’s lifetime to a collection of over 400.

100 1_ Whitman, Walt, $d 1819-1892. $t Leaves of grass

If differentiation between the editions is needed, it can be done at the expression level:

100 1_ Whitman, Walt, $d 1819-1892. $t Leaves of grass. $l English. $f 1860
Moving image works. Since motion pictures, television programs, etc. are typically highly collaborative works, RDA 6.27.1.3 says to construct the authorized access point representing the work by using a preferred title for work only. The authorized access point for a compilation of moving image works will therefore also be constructed using the preferred title of the compilation.

However, if more than one compilation has the same title, it will need to be qualified.

- 130  _0 Hitchcock collection (Force Entertainment)
- 130  _0 Hitchcock collection (MPI Home Video (Firm))

What about selections from a single work?

The same principles apply. If the single work purports to be complete, for practical reasons and following the principle of representation, the cataloger considers the work to be complete.

- 100  _0 Virgil. $t Aeneis

If the resource purports to be a compilation of selections from the work, and the specific selections cannot be identified, RDA directs us to add "Selections" to the preferred title. The principle mentioned under selections above applies here as well: the cataloger is not required to verify whether the set of selections is (or is not) the same as another set of selections from the same work. The assumption is that they are not the same and so the preferred title is qualified:

- 100  _0 Virgil. $t Aeneis. $k Selections (Lewis)

    A compilation by C.S. Lewis of various passages from the Aeneid

- 100  _1 Shakespeare, William, $d 1564-1616. $t Works. $k Selections (Anson)

    A compilation of quotations from Shakespeare with a rather vague title compiled by W.S.W. Anson

- 130  _0 Aesop’s fables. $k Selections (Clarke)

    A selection of fables compiled by H. Clarke

If the compilation is of selections that can be identified, they should be:

- 100  _0 Virgil. $t Aeneis. $n Liber 1-6

    A compilation of the first six books of the Aeneid
What should be done if the preferred title for a compilation is identical to one of the works in the compilation?

If the preferred title chosen for a compilation is the same as or similar to one of the works in the compilation (or to any other work by the creator), there is a conflict. The compilation title should be qualified to break the conflict. There is no prescribed term to use for this.

If an authority record for the individual work is also being established, it should be qualified.

Compilations with titles of the type "... and other stories" "... and other poems", etc., do not need to be qualified to distinguish them from the title of the individual work, although the cataloger may optionally qualify the individual work.

What variant access points should be made for compilations of works?
Variant access points are not required, but consider making them from the form(s) not selected as the preferred title.⁴

RDA Expressions

When should a conventional collective title for complete works be qualified?

When differences between two complete collections of works are found (e.g., different editorial notes, annotations, translators, content type, etc.), that creates a different expression of the complete works. Add one or more qualifiers at the expression level (content type, date of expression, language of expression, other distinguishing characteristic of expression). Expression elements in access points are separately subfielded.

⁴ Note that in the PCC Feasibility Study (see Footnote 3), creating an authority record in order to record a variant access point using conventional collective title construction is discouraged.
For translations, must the language of expression always be further qualified?

No, not if there has been only one translation in that language to date. The example above of the Latvian translation of Euripides’ complete works illustrates this. There is no requirement that catalogers anticipate a future conflict. However, if such a conflict does exist or becomes evident later on, the authority record for a different translation in the same language will need to be qualified further by date of expression and/or other distinguishing characteristic of expression. It may also be useful to go back and revise the earlier authority record to better identify that particular expression.

How do I create an authorized access point for an expression of "selections"?

NACO practice does not require the creation of an authority record at the work level when creating an authority record for an expression, but neither does it forbid it. It might prove less confusing to create the work-level authority record following the instructions above (including the necessary qualifier) before creating an expression authority record. If you do not create the work-level authority record you must still think out in your mind how the work-level authorized access point would be formed. Do not forget to include the qualifier at the work level.

Often the compiler is unknown for a collection that consists of translations of an author who worked in another language. In such cases the surname of the translator may be used as a work-level qualifier if it makes sense (sometimes the translator is the compiler, though this need not be explicitly stated).
Beginning with the form you have worked out for the work-level authorized access point, add expression-level elements (content type, date of expression, language of expression, other distinguishing characteristic of expression).

What variant access points should be made for compilations of expressions?

Variant access points are not required, but consider making them from the form(s) not selected as the preferred title, such as the manifestation title. It is cataloger judgment as to whether to qualify the variant access point to distinguish it from identical variant access points for other expressions of the same work.

Attributes of Works and Expressions

What attributes of works and expressions should be recorded as separate elements?

Catalogers have the option to record any attributes of works and expressions in 046 and 3XX fields regardless of whether they are included in access points. These include date of work or expression (046), content type of expression (336), place of origin of work (370), language of expression (377), form of work (380), other distinguishing characteristic of work or expression (381), musical work and expression attributes such as medium of performance (382), numeric designation (384), and key (385), as well as non-RDA elements such as audience and creator/contributor characteristics (385 and 386). Do not include expression attributes in work records or work attributes in expression records. For example, do not include language of expression in a work record or form of work in an expression record.

FAQ on Authorized Access Points for Collections of the Works of Individual Agents and Works of Unknown Responsibility that Purport to be by an Individual Agent

May 17, 2021
NACO Authority File Maintenance

How should I treat records (including authorized access points) already in the file that appear to be incorrect?

Authorized access point. Many "selections" authorized access points currently in the file appear to represent work-level collections, but have been formulated incorrectly for RDA. Do not follow an incorrect pattern when creating a new description, and optionally revise incorrect forms you find in the file as needed, including forms in 1XX fields, even if the record has been coded as "rda". (Note: if the record represents more than one aggregate work or expression, follow the procedure outlined below under "Coverage of the record.")

The following authorized access points are incorrectly formulated, but the record itself represents only one collection. After revision of the authorized access point no further work or reporting is required, although other elements may be added to the record.

Existing authorized access point:

100 1_ Abbey, Edward, $d 1927-1989. $t Works. $k Selections. $f 1984
   A collection with title Slumgullion stew : an Edward Abbey reader

Revise to:

100 1_ Abbey, Edward, $d 1927-1989. $t Slumgullion stew

Existing authorized access point:

100 1_ Abbey, Edward, $d 1927-1989. $t Works. $k Selections. $f 2005
   A collection with title The best of Edward Abbey

Revise to:

100 1_ Abbey, Edward, $d 1927-1989. $t Best of Edward Abbey

The same applies to authorized access points for selections that appear to have been intended to represent expressions. Most expression-level forms for selections currently in the file have not been formed according to RDA principles and should be revised even if they have been coded as "rda".

Coverage of the record. It is a principle of authority work that an authority record represents and identifies one and only one entity. The only exception was for undifferentiated personal names and that exception has been rescinded for PCC practice under RDA. RDA does not recognize “undifferentiated” work or expression descriptions (i.e., records that represent more than one work or expression).

If you encounter a work or expression authority record that represents more than one compilation of works or expressions, do not use the authorized access point. Instead, create a new authority record for the work or expression you need to describe, including a new authorized access point that is different from the one you found in the "undifferentiated" record following procedures described earlier in this document. If "your" compilation is represented in a note (e.g. 670) in the original "undifferentiated" authority record, remove the note. Optionally you may create new records and authorized access points for other compilations remaining in the original record, but this is not required.

Add one of the following notes to the original record to help subsequent catalogers avoid using the authorized access point and as a signal that other compilations were once in the record:

667 __ Do not use. Represents more than one compilation of works [or expressions]. Do not add to this record. Instead, create new name authority records for distinct compilations.

or

667 ___ Do not use. Represents more than one compilation of works [or expressions]. Reported for deletion.

Add the following note to the new work or expression authority record if appropriate:

667 ___ Previously represented on name authority record [LCCN]

When the cataloger encounters a record that has gradually had works/expressions removed and now has only one work or expression represented in 670 notes, a new name authority record should be created and the original record should be reported to LC for deletion, following a procedure similar to that used under PCC policy for undifferentiated personal names.

Work records. Many authority records appearing to represent a selection actually represent more than one compilation. These should be canceled and new NARs created for the separate works. You may add a 667 note telling catalogers not to use the record pending cancellation.

400 1_ Ausubel, Ramona. $t Guide to being born
400 1_ Ausubel, Ramona. $t Awayland
670 ___ A guide to being born, 2013.
670 ___ Awayland, 2018.

This authority record coded as RDA represents two completely different selections of Ausubel’s short stories. This record should be canceled and new work-level NARs created for each collection. You may add a 667 note telling catalogers not to use the record while waiting for it to be canceled:

667 ___ Do not use. Represents more than one distinctive selection of works. Reported for deletion.

Note: Work-level authority records for complete collections may correctly include variant titles for different publications of the complete collection. These records do not need revision. All the titles represent the same hypothetical collection, the complete works (poems, etc.) of an individual.

Expression records. Many authority records appearing to represent an expression of complete works actually represent more than one expression of the complete works. These should be canceled and new NARs created for the separate expressions. You may add a 667 note telling catalogers not to use the record pending cancellation:

667 __ $a Do not use. Represents more than one expression. Reported for deletion.

Expression-level records that had been based on such records will need revision.

Existing authority record:

100 1_ Ausubel, Ramona. $t Short stories. $k Selections. $s Spoken word (Heyborne)
400 1_ Ausubel, Ramona. $t Awayland $s Spoken word (Heyborne)
500 1_ $w r $i Narrator: $a Heyborne, Kirby
670 __ Ausubel, Ramona. Awayland [SR], ℗2018: $b publisher supplied information (performed by Kirby Heyborne and other various narrators)
The authorized access point in this record started with the existing work-level authorized access point for selections of Ausubel’s short stories (see above example), and the cataloger added expression attributes to it. However, as seen above, the existing NAR represented two different story collections. The authorized access point in the record for the spoken word recording of Awayland should be revised (depending on what was chosen as the authorized access point at the work-level) to:

100 1_ Ausubel, Ramona. $t Awayland. $h Spoken word $s (Heyborne)

Existing authority record:

100 1_ Shakespeare, William, $d 1564-1616. $t Works. $f 1966
400 1_ Shakespeare, William, $d 1564-1616. $t Kittredge-players edition of the complete works of William Shakespeare. $f 1966
400 1_ Shakespeare, William, $d 1564-1616. $t Plays and poems of William Shakspeare. $f 1966
670 __ His The plays and poems of William Shakspeare, 1966.

This record demonstrates two problems common in NACO authority records for expressions of Shakespeare’s complete works. First, it represents two expressions, an issue already discussed above. Second, looking carefully the 670 detailing the Kittredge-players expression, we see that the date of this expression is actually 1958 (which potentially might already be represented by a different NAR); the 1966 date is the manifestation date of a reprint of this expression.

To summarize: 1, in many cases NACO authority records for Shakespeare compilations represent more than one expression; and 2, in many cases single expressions of Shakespeare compilations have more than one NAR because under AACR2 they were differentiated by date of publication (manifestation), not by date of expression.

The existing record should be replaced by records for the separate expressions:

Similar problems exist in NARs for other individuals whose works or selections have been published many times.

670 __ $a Medea and other plays, 1998.
670 __ $a 10 plays, c1998.

This NAR represents English translations of two separate sets of Euripides' plays. This record was replaced with the following two records (abbreviated):

100 0_ $a Euripides. $t Works. $k Selections (Roche : 10 plays). $l English
670 __ $a Euripides. 10 plays, 1998: $b title page (new translation by Paul Roche) contents (Alcestis -- Hippolytus -- Ion -- Electra -- Iphigenia at Aulis -- Iphigenia among the Taurians -- Medea -- The Bacchae -- The Trojan women -- The Cyclops)
   Note: there is more than one collection of Euripides's plays translated into English by Paul Roche, so the work-level preferred title includes two qualifiers

100 0_ $a Euripides. $t Works. $k Selections (Morwood : 1998). $l English

8 Under the April 2021 policy, conventional collective titles should continue to be used for selections of an agent's works when the works were created before 1501.

9 Added to existing authority after new authorities for the two different expressions represented by the existing record were created.
