Since its formation, CMH has provided historical support to the Army Secretariat and Staff, contributing essential background information for decision making, staff actions, command information programs, and public statements by Army officials. Over the decades it also has progressively expanded its role in the vital areas of military history education, the management of the Army's museum system, and the introduction of automated data-retrieval systems. The Center's work with Army schools ensures that the study of history is a significant part of the training of officers and noncommissioned officers. It also supports the use of history to bolster unit pride and give the public a better understanding of the Army's past.

Acquired primarily through copyright deposit, exchange, gift and purchase, the collection spans the entire history of the cinema. The Library has been actively collecting motion pictures since 1942. Pioneered thanks to the generosity of Thomas Edison and other early film producers, beginning in 1994 thousands of films were deposited at the Library as still photographs. This Library of Congress began collecting films made for television in 1949 with the addition of a "Hoping Cassidy" feature. Because of such past acquisitions, the Library has been referred to as the "granadary of television archives," and it continues to increase its television holdings today, adding them to the large general collection of moving image materials on film, videotape, and videodisc.
