Colonel Carlos P. Romulo

OF THE PHILIPPINE ARMY

Throughout the battle for the Philippines, Colonel Carlos P. Romulo of the Philippine Army fought side by side with Quezon, MacArthur as his aide-de-camp and friend. He describes how Quezon struggled from the inside, with no security possible only to a member of General MacArthur's staff and a visibility possible only to a brilliant journalist trained in observing the human as well as the military actions. He relates how the courageous leader of the Filipino people, President Manuel L. Quezon lived in the tumult of Corregidor and then when it weakened and fell, left for one of the unoccupied provinces in the Visayas, and later for Australia and America. Colonel Romulo's escape from Romulo — the last man to leave that fateful spot before the surrender of the Filipinos and American forces — is a dramatic story that had literally been buried from the day and the obvious target for anti-aircraft guns. His heroic flight to Mindanao and then to Australia to join MacArthur are among the most exciting stories to come out of the War in the Pacific. But it is not his own experiences, but those of the American and Filipino soldiers who died on Bataan and Corregidor that he wants to tell, to impress upon the hearts and minds of Americans here at home, so that we will come to understand the full significance of their dying. As their commander in arms, he as an officer exposed to the same dangers and perils, Colonel Romulo tells these men fought and died. He describes in unforgettable terms their courage and heroism against insuperable odds. It was not so much the fighting, but the way it was done, the way it was fought. It was a victory over death, a victory over fear. And it was a victory over the enemy who tried to conquer us. These articles were published in his own newspaper and were being read in America.

Major General Myron Cady Cramer
The Judge Advocate General,
United States Army

In a series of Portland, Conn., when the war began November 14, 1914, Major General Myron C. Cramer, Judge Advocate General of the United States Army, was in command of the entire service of the United States. His vital position and influence in the war were such that his work was a vital part of the war effort. The general, who had been a soldier in the Civil War, had served in the War of 1812, and was a member of the 1st Division, with the rank of major. He attended the General Staff College at Langdon, France, where he was graduated in 1912. He then joined the headquarters of the 1st Division as Assistant Chief of Staff, and was transferred to headquarters of the 1st Division, with the rank of colonel. For his World War service General Cramer was awarded the Order of the Crown of France.

Excellent Work of JAG Schools Is Commended

Report Calls Attention To Orientation Method, Subject Development

By J. G. F. DOUGLAS

The General Staff of the United States Army has been called to the attention of the JAG schools in the United States. The report commends the current work of the JAG schools for their efforts in providing training for officers in the legal field.

The report highlights the importance of the JAG schools in ensuring that officers are adequately prepared for their roles, particularly in the context of recent conflicts. It notes that the schools have made significant progress in improving their curriculum and methods of instruction.

The report also emphasizes the need for continued improvement, particularly in the areas of subject development and orientation. It calls for a focus on providing officers with the knowledge and skills necessary to perform their duties effectively.

The General Staff is encouraged to continue supporting the JAG schools and to work with them to achieve their goals. The report concludes with a call for further improvements and a commitment to ongoing evaluation.

Army Keeps Martha Cook Girls Awake

Bagelballs, Songs Disturb Slumber As Music Fills the Air

It was as if the entire hall had come alive when a bag of marbles was shaken in the dormitory. Martha Cook girls, who had been sleeping through the night, were suddenly awakened by the sound of the music. They sat up in their beds, rubbing their eyes, and looked around in confusion. Suddenly, a girl screamed, "What's going on?" The other girls turned to look and saw that someone was playing the piano. They looked at each other in amazement and then quickly got out of bed to see what was happening.

Gen. Dillon Reviews Judge Advocate School

Student Officers To Be Reviewed Today in Low Quad by Gen. Dillon

Brigadier General Joseph V. J. de P. Dillon, commanding officer of the student body training course at Fort Riley, will be here today to review the student body at the Judge Advocate General's School. The review will be held in the Low Quad at 4 p.m. General Dillon, who served with Gen. George C. Marshall during World War II, was appointed to the Commanding General of the school in February.

General Dillon is a graduate of the United States Military Academy and the United States Army Judge Advocate General's School. He has served in various positions in the army, including as Chief of Staff of the 10th Army and as Chief of Staff of the 1st Army in Europe.

THE ARMY GOES TO SCHOOL

ANNOUNCER: The Army Goes to Schools

MUSIC: MILITARY MARCH - THEMES - UP AND PAGE FOR

ANNOUNCER: The Army Schools train officers for leadership. They turn enlisted men into specialists. They afford soldiers the opportunity to earn commissions.

Today, we'll visit the Judge Advocate General's School.

MUSIC: MILITARY MARCH...UP AND PAGE FOR

NARRATOR: When a man is inducted into the Army, he not only turns in his business suit for khaki, he also becomes subject to military law. The question is, just how does military law differ from civil law? First of all, there are many things a man may do in civil life which he cannot as a soldier. In business, he may walk up to the boss, mutter 'I quit' and leave his job. Needless to say, he can't do that in the Army. The Army requires a much stricter discipline than is normally necessary in civilian life.

A good soldier must know he is a vital part of the greatest team he ever joined. He must be able to live on good terms and in close quarters with a large number of other men. Instant obedience to the will of the leader is essential for a smooth running Army. When you take into consideration all these factors, you may readily see why a separate standard must be set up for military men.

The kaypoints of military law is to be found in the Articles of War, enacted by Congress as part of the Act of June 24, 1896. Some of the Articles of War are penal statutes that define the offenses for which soldiers may be tried by court-martial, and
New Judge Advocate General School Will Have Best Educated OCS Students

OCS Will Be Established Here in June

Eligible Lawyers Will Have Opportunity To Earn Lieutenant Ranks

The present Judge Advocate General School here will be expanded to become a full-fledged school of law in six months, at the request of the commander of Casual Officers, Lt. Col. Young said:

"We will consist of a generally excepting, producing and the young men to be selected to serve as an opportunity to the rank of officer, will have at least five years of experience in a legal field, and must have completed the necessary academic requirements for admission to the law school."

The new school will be located on the grounds of the old OCS campus.

Col. Young said:

"We have received a larger number of applications from young men who are interested in the legal field, and we believe that the new school will provide an opportunity for them to develop their legal skills and become effective officers in the Army."

"Fresh Vegetables Are a Treat Compared To Dehydrated Food"

By CAPT. H.W. MILLER

It's wonderful to be here, without problems, worries, and other discomforts of the city. The major difficulty faced is the lack of fresh vegetables. Our meals are small, but they're delicious. The army provides a variety of vegetables, such as sweet corn, carrots, and green beans. The fresh produce is excellent, and it is a treat to have a change from the dehydrated, packaged food we usually get.

Army officials to arrive today

"The end of the war brought a change in the atmosphere at the school. In previous years, the school was closed and the officers were stationed in various locations around the country. However, with the end of the war, the officers returned to the school, and it was a relief to have a sense of normalcy."

Administrators meet for flagpole dedication

DWAYNE L. HILDEBRAND

The flagpole dedication ceremony took place today in the presence of the school's staff and faculty. The flagpole was raised to the top of the school, and the national anthem was played as the flag was raised. The ceremony was attended by the school's principal and other members of the faculty. The ceremony was a symbol of the school's commitment to democracy and national unity.

Major Valentine's Unit in Action

From August, 1918, to Armistice Day

By LEE G. F. FORBES

A glutton for the first World War, including the famous Battle of Jutland and Allied Forces offensive from August 30, 1918, to Armistice Day, Major Valentine is a member of the Judge Advocate General's Department and is attending his first conference.

In the early morning of the battle, the 380th INFANTRY, 102nd INFANTRY, 103rd INFANTRY, 104th INFANTRY, and 105th INFANTRY, under the command of Major Valentine, were ordered to advance on the lines of the enemy forces. The battle was fought with great vigor and determination, and the Major's unit played an important role in the victory.

Lt. Lowe Relates Army Adventures

By LEE G. F. FORBES

Lt. Lowe, a member of the Judge Advocate General's School, recently returned from a tour of duty in the Middle East. He related his experiences to the students at the school, sharing stories of his time spent in the desert and the challenges he faced.

Lt. Lowe also spoke about the importance of law in the military, emphasizing the role of the Judge Advocate in ensuring that the rules of war are followed and that justice is served.

Lt. Lowe also discussed the ongoing conflict in the Middle East, and the importance of understanding the complex political and cultural factors that contribute to the situation.

Lt. Lowe's experiences have left a lasting impression on the students at the school, and his insights have been invaluable in their understanding of the complexities of military law and the role of the Judge Advocate in the armed forces.

Skiers Eat First

The second day of our maneuvers was opened with a breakfast of cream cheese, toast, and jelly. After this we started at 8:30 to our new stations. We marched in a line to our quarters, which were located in a large building. The weather was very cold, and we had to wear our winter clothes.

The breakfast itself was quite modest, consisting of toast, butter, and jam. The cream cheese was a bit too thick for some of us. However, it was a good start to the day.

The new stations were located quite far from the old ones, and we had to march for about an hour to get there. The weather was still very cold, and we had to wear our winter clothes.

The next day, we had to wear our winter clothes for the entire day. This was quite uncomfortable, as the weather was very cold. We were also given more food to eat, but it was still not enough to keep us warm.

The morning was spent marching and doing various exercises. We were divided into groups, and each group had a leader. The exercises were quite strenuous, and we had to work hard to keep up.

The afternoon was spent in doing more exercises and marching. We were given more food to eat, but it was still not enough to keep us warm.

The day ended with a small fire, where we sat and talked about our experiences. We all agreed that it had been a very challenging day, but we were grateful to be alive.

Army Takes Over Law Club

The United States Army has taken over and will continue to run the law school of the University of Chicago Law School. This move was made in order to accommodate the demands of the war effort. The law school will now be known as the University of Chicago Law School, Branches, and will be located on the same campus as the main campus.

HIGH RANKS MARK ELEVENTH J.A.G. CLASS

Eleven Army Majors, Veterans of Two Wars, Have Recently Enrolled

By LT. JAMES R. ROSE, JR.

Within the last few months, the J.A.G. (Judge Advocate General) school has welcomed back into its ranks eleven majors, veterans of two wars, who have recently enrolled in the program. These officers have been selected based on their experience and qualifications and will be assigned to various positions throughout the Army. They will be responsible for providing legal guidance to soldiers on issues such as contracts, regulations, and court-martial procedures. Their presence will greatly enhance the effectiveness of the J.A.G. school.

TUNISIA WAS NEVER LIKE THIS:

Ski Troops Break Camp in Bitter Blasts

By Paul S. J. G. Forbes

Ski troops are not a novelty in the world of war, but their presence in the Tunisian desert is certainly unexpected. These hardy soldiers, armed with skis instead of rifles, are breaking camp in the midst of a fierce winter storm. They are equipped with special gear designed to withstand the harsh conditions of the desert, including heavy outerwear and special boots. The ski troops are expected to play a crucial role in the upcoming battles, using their unique skills to navigate the terrain and take out enemy positions.

Dormitories Become Barracks as Service Unites Take Over

A notable change has occurred on the campus of our institution as dormitories have been transformed into barracks. This is part of a larger effort to prepare students for military service. The dormitories are now equipped with all the necessary facilities to accommodate the needs of soldiers. The atmosphere is one of discipline and order, with strict rules governing the behavior of the occupants.

COLD PERPENDICULAR DROPS:

Ski Patrols Maneuver in Colorado

By Capt. Harold W. Sutliff

Our ski patrollers are hard at work in the Colorado mountains, where they are practicing their skills in preparation for the upcoming winter season. They are employing advanced techniques to handle cold and perpendicular drops, a skill that is crucial for their success. The patrollers are also learning how to navigate the treacherous terrain and avoid potential dangers. Their dedication and hard work will ensure the safety of all visitors to our mountain resorts.

JAG School Has Special Review

All of the Judge Advocate General's officers, regardless of rank, will be required to take a special review of their work. The review will be conducted by a panel of experts who will assess the officers' performance and provide feedback. The review is designed to ensure that all officers are up-to-date with the latest legal and military procedures.

Major Atchison Should Know

Judge Advocates Must Master All Trades

By Capt. Harold W. Sutliff

Judge advocates are expected to be versatile individuals who possess a wide range of skills. They must be able to handle legal and military situations with ease, from drafting contracts to conducting court-martial proceedings. The key to success for these officers is a strong foundation in both areas, as well as a willingness to learn and adapt.

Military News

The latest developments in the military are being closely monitored. There have been several significant events, including the enlisting of new recruits, the promotion of experienced officers, and the deployment of new technology. The military is working to ensure that all personnel are well-prepared to face the challenges of the modern battlefield.

JAG's Take Off 15 Minutes a Day

In order to maintain their readiness, JAG officers are required to participate in daily physical training. This includes a 15-minute run, followed by a series of exercises to build endurance and strength. The training is designed to ensure that officers are in top physical condition, ready to serve on the front lines.

THE ARMY’S SCHOOL FOR ITS LAWYERS

By INZER B. WYATT

The Judge Advocate General’s Department of the Army provides a unique service to the armed forces. Its mission is to provide legal advice and representation to military personnel, including law enforcement officers, in all aspects of their military service. The department is responsible for ensuring that the rights of military personnel are protected and that the military justice system operates fairly and efficiently.

The school for its lawyers is an integral part of the Judge Advocate General’s Department. It provides legal training and education to military personnel, including law enforcement officers, to ensure that they are prepared to serve as legal advocates and advisors. The school offers a wide range of courses, including legal advocacy, constitutional law, and military justice, to prepare military personnel for their roles as legal advocates and advisors.

The school for its lawyers is located at the Judge Advocate General’s School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. The school offers both on-campus and online courses, allowing military personnel to obtain legal training while serving in the military.

The school for its lawyers is a vital component of the Judge Advocate General’s Department, providing the necessary legal training and education to ensure that military personnel are prepared to serve as legal advocates and advisors.

The Judge Advocate General's Department in World War II

by GEO. SANDFORD HUMES

N to reasons of the Judge Advocate General's Department, the increased volume of business caused by the impact of global war was not significantly more than the Military Reserve Division, the function of which was primarily to assign reserve status to officers and not to conduct active military operations.

All legal matters pertaining to the regulation, administration, disposition, and use of real property of the United States under the control of the Secretary of War of the responsibility of the Military Reserve Division. This was a large sector, when it is considered that such properties included all lands acquired for military purposes and national cemeteries, and those required in connection with federal control and the supervision, improvement and use of navigable waters.

History and Drama. Single figures tell the story of the vast expansion of the military establishment since powertion in terms of evolutions and developments, of the tremendous growth in the military forces, of the unprecedented efforts and sacrifices, and the total resources, with a total expenditure of approximately $2.50 billion. At the end of World War II, the number of military personnel had increased from 1.5 million to 18,000,000.

While much of the increase resulted from the purchase and conversion of privately owned aircraft, recreation, or the American people, the War Department was also responsible for preparing and organizing all original plans, including maps, records and instruments of great historical value. Among these are original plans and maps of the United States, and some of the original documents and correspondence over the original signatures of former administrators.

Four Law Graduates From University Attend JAG School

BY LT. C. P. FOGGIE

Four law graduates from the University of Michigan attended the Judge Advocate Generals' School at Fort Monroe, Va., in June 1918. These graduates are among the first to attend this school.

The graduates are Major Charles B. Clark, Captain George H. White, Captain John W. Pettit, and Captain John W. Swain. They were selected for this new school because of their legal training and their service in the army. They are expected to complete the course in a few weeks and will then be assigned to various military posts.

The school is designed to train officers in the legal aspects of military service and to prepare them for duty as legal officers in the army. It is expected that the graduates will be able to provide legal advice to military commanders and to represent the army in legal matters.

The graduates are expected to serve in various capacities throughout the country and to contribute to the legal needs of the army.

Maj. Justin McElroy Describes South Sea Paradise

Lt.-Col. Goff Says, 'Give the Soldier a Break,' to JAGs

When one would recall the soldiers of the South Sea Empire, the name of Maj. Justin McElroy would certainly come to mind. Major McElroy, who served with distinction in the South Sea Empire, was recently interviewed by this reporter as he prepared to return home after a tour of duty. The following is an excerpt from our interview:

Narrator: When I think of Maj. Justin McElroy, I picture a tall, distinguished man with piercing eyes and a warm smile. His journey through the South Sea Empire has been nothing short of amazing. He has seen it all, from the dense jungles of the New Guinea to the bustling cities of Hawaii. Yet, despite the challenges he faced, he always remained steadfast, a true soldier of the South Sea Empire.

Maj. McElroy: It was a privilege to serve in the South Sea Empire. The people there are so different, yet so united in their passion for freedom. Every day was a new adventure, and I learned so much about myself and the world around me.

Narrator: How did you manage to survive the harsh conditions of the South Sea Empire?

Maj. McElroy: Surviving in the South Sea Empire was not easy. The terrain was treacherous, and the weather was unforgiving. But with the support of my fellow soldiers and the local people, we were able to make it through. It was a true test of our strength and determination.

Narrator: What was your most memorable moment in the South Sea Empire?

Maj. McElroy: My most memorable moment was when we finally defeated the enemy and brought peace to the region. It was a monumental task, but we did it together as a team. It was a moment of pure joy and relief.

Narrator: What advice do you have for those who wish to serve in the South Sea Empire?

Maj. McElroy: My advice is to never give up. No matter how difficult the situation, perseverance is key. And always remember to take care of yourself and your comrades.

Narrator: Thank you, Maj. McElroy. May your service always be remembered.

Army bars as a new generation of growing plants and increase the amount of nitrogen in the soil. The bars are a type of plant that grows in the South Sea Empire and is known for its ability to fix nitrogen from the air. This process is known as nitrogen fixation and is crucial for the growth of many plants. The bars are also used to make nitrogen-rich fertilizer, which is essential for agriculture in the region. The bars are a testament to the resilience of the South Sea Empire and its people, who continue to thrive despite the challenges they face.

You are the men we trained to serve in the Army;
And you are the men who will serve our country well.

And when you reach your goal, let your heart be glad;
And when the roads are long, let your feet be fearless;
And when your courage is tried, let your spirit be strong.

So ring now the martial, the show must go on,
Let's make the world a better place.

And when the world is free, let our spirits be free,
And when the world is free, let our spirits be free.
When the Soldier

By Milt. Gen. Myron C. Crum

The Judge Advocate General of the Army's new vacancy leaves little to be said. The Judge Advocate General, John F. Bell, was appointed to the position by President Hoover in 1932, and served until his death in 1943. His appointment was made to meet the needs of the Army in the years following World War II, when the country was faced with the task of rebuilding its armed forces after the devastation of the war.

Bell was a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, class of 1903, and served as a major in the Signal Corps during World War I. He was appointed to the position of Judge Advocate General in 1932, and served until his death in 1943.

Under his leadership, the Judge Advocate General's Office was expanded to include a legal staff of over 1,500 lawyers and paralegals, many of whom served in the Army's major commands throughout the world.

In 1939, Bell was appointed to the position of Chief of Staff of the Army, and served until his death in 1943. He was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for his service to the Army during World War II.

Bell's appointment as Judge Advocate General was widely praised, and he is remembered as a dedicated and effective leader of the Army's legal staff.

With the end of World War II, the need for a Judge Advocate General diminished, and the position was abolished in 1947.

However, the task of maintaining a legal staff for the Army continued, and the Judge Advocate General's Office was re-established in 1950, with a legal staff of over 1,500 lawyers and paralegals.

Since then, the Judge Advocate General's Office has continued to grow, and now includes a legal staff of over 10,000 lawyers and paralegals, serving the Army's major commands throughout the world.

The position of Judge Advocate General is currently held by Gen. Harry J. Radford, who was appointed to the position in 2018. Radford is a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, class of 1971, and served as a major in the Air Force during the Vietnam War. He was appointed to the position of Judge Advocate General in 2018, and is serving his second term in the position.

Radford is a dedicated and effective leader of the Army's legal staff, and is widely praised for his service to the Army.

Under his leadership, the Judge Advocate General's Office has continued to grow, and is now one of the largest legal staffs in the world, serving the Army's major commands throughout the world.

People of Europe Sensed War Coming, Lt. Freeman, Michigan Alumnus, Says

Lt. Joel F. Freeman, a Michigan alumnus, says that the people of Europe sensed the coming of war much earlier than the people of the United States. He states that the broadcasts of the German government, which began in the summer of 1939, were widely listened to by the people of Europe. These broadcasts were a clear indication of the German government's intentions to go to war. Lt. Freeman, a member of the Michigan National Guard, was stationed in Europe during the early days of the war and witnessed the reaction of the people to the broadcasts. He states that the people of Europe were aware of the danger and were prepared for it, whereas the people of the United States were not aware of the danger until it was too late.
