Introduction

This is an annotated guide to moving image materials related to the life and works of William Shakespeare in the collections of the Motion Picture, Broadcasting and Recorded Sound Division of the Library of Congress. While the guide encompasses a wide variety of items spanning the history of film, TV and video, it does not attempt to list every reference to Shakespeare or every quote from his plays and sonnets which have over the years appeared in hundreds (if not thousands) of motion pictures and TV shows. For titles with only a marginal connection to the Bard or one of his works, the decision what to include and what to leave out was often difficult, even when based on their inclusion or omission from other reference works on the subject (see below). For example, listing every film about ill-fated lovers separated by feuding families or other outside forces, a narrative which can arguably always be traced back to Romeo and Juliet, would be a massive undertaking on its own and as such is outside of the present guide’s scope and purpose. Consequently, if looking for a cinematic spin-off, derivative, plot borrowing or a simple citation, and not finding it in the guide, users are advised to contact the Moving Image Reference staff for additional information.

How to Use this Guide

Entries are grouped by titles of plays and listed chronologically within the group by release/broadcast date. Credits given for each entry are as follows: main title, alternative title (incl. U.S. release title if applicable), production company, distributor/broadcaster (if different from production company), release year/broadcast date, series title (if not TV), U.S. release or broadcast information (for non-U.S. productions), director (“dir”), writer (“wrt” or “adapt”), and cast (“with”).

The holdings listed are access copies unless otherwise noted. The physical properties given are: number of reels/tapes, tape format (if applicable), running time or (for silent films) length, sound/silent, black & white/color, wide screen process (if applicable), film gauge or tape width, collection to which the item belongs, and shelf location number(s). The abbreviations used are: “inc.” = incomplete, “ft = feet, “min” = minutes, “si” = silent, and “sd” = sound. An * before an individual copy indicates the material has been digitized.

Information on a title’s availability on home video is included following the annotation, with DVD as the default value and VHS/laserdisc listed only if an item has never been released on DVD.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

33 ft, si, b&w, 35mm. Copyright Collection. FEC 5057
- sample frames from 13 scenes; third item on reel [VITAGRAPH PAPER PRINT FRAGMENTS. NO. 5]; originally released in 995 ft.

6 reels of 6 on 2, 2230 ft, si, b&w, 16mm. George Kleine Collection. FLA 1990-1991.
- 1917 U.S. re-release version.

Notwithstanding the references to Shakespeare in both modern sources and advertisements accompanying the film's original release in the U.S. and U.K., the Cines production owes more to its other two literary sources: Pietro Cossa’s dramatic poem “Cleopatra” and, in particular, Plutarch’s series of biographies and character studies “Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romans.” Directed by Enrico Guazzoni following the worldwide success of his epic Quo Vadis? (1913), the film was highly praised for its lavish costumes, elaborate special effects, and massive sets, including a giant replica of Cleopatra's barge "of sufficiently ample proportions to prevent its sinking under the weight of a Giovanna Terribili Gonzales' well fed Cleopatra" (Kenneth S. Rothwell & Annabelle Henkin Melzer, Shakespeare on Screen, p.2). (VHS - Facets)

1 reel of 1, 17 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. Zouary (Maurice) Collection. FSA 3692.
- TV reissue print.

A comedy short in which a New York writer and director (Ryan) is hired by the owner of a department store to adapt Antony and Cleopatra for the annual employee show, with the owner's daughter (Noblette) as Cleopatra. The show includes musical numbers, comedy interludes, and borrowings from Julius Caesar.

10 reels of 10, ca. 92 min, sd, color, 35mm. Copyright Collection. CEA 0592-0601. 10 reels of 10 on 5, ca. 92 min, sd, color, 35mm. Copyright Collection. CGB 5023-5027.

A historical spoof in which two British slaves (Connor, Dale) foil Cleopatra and Mark Antony's plans to overthrow Julius Caesar. Despite the on-screen credit "based on an idea by William Shakespeare," the film was primarily conceived as a parody of big screen historical epics, in particular Twentieth Century-Fox's Cleopatra (1963), the sets and costumes of which, abandoned at Pinewood Studios when the Fox production moved to Italy, were reused by the Carry On team.

ONE TO ONE. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE--ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA (WETA-TV, 11/5/1968).

1 videoreel of 1, ca. 29 min, sd, b&w, 2 in. PBS Collection. VUA 9334 (currently inaccessible - requires preservation).

Final episode of the 20-part public television series hosted by Astere E. Claeyssens, associate professor of creative writing at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., and artistic consultant to the APA-Phoenix Repertory Company in New York City. "Mr. Claeyssens has selected books which he particularly enjoys because the private voice of the author comes through - one man's voice speaking to the reader, one to one. The series includes readings of selected authors enhanced by the use of film inserts, still photos, and shifting images projected on a rear screen" (Video Program Catalogue 1976/77, The Public Television Library, p. 77). (VHS)

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA (Realist Film Unit, U.K., 1971). Released in the U.S. in 1974 by International Film Bureau as part of The Shakespeare Series. Dir Peter Seabourne. With Linda Renwick (Cleopatra), Paul Chapman (Enobarbus), Colin Farrell (Clown), David Fennell (Maecenas), Derrick Gilbert (Agrippa), Elizabeth Hall (Charmian), Susan Jameson (Iras).

1 reel of 1, 11 min, sd, color, 16mm. American Archive of the Factual Film Collection. AAFF 4-5403. 1 reel of 1, 11 min, sd, color, 16mm. MacDonald (J. Fred and Leslie W.) Collection. MCD T-8F. - U.S. release print.

Two scenes from Antony and Cleopatra staged in Elizabethan style and serving as an introduction to the play's theme and atmosphere: "Act II Scene II (Excerpt) Enobarbus describes his stay with Antony in Egypt, including Cleopatra's first appearance on her barge in the Nile, and predicts Antony will never be able to leave Cleopatra. Act V Scene II (Excerpt) Cleopatra, captured, speaks with the Clown who has brought her a basket of figs, then kills herself with the asps hidden in the basket." (1974 Supplementary Catalog, International Film Bureau, p. 12)
THE FEAST OF LANGUAGE. ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA (WGBH-TV, 1971).

1 videoreel of 1, ca. 30 min, sd, color, 2 in. PBS Collection. VUA 7746 (currently inaccessible - requires preservation).

Program no. 7 in the series in which Brandeis University professor Alan Levitan interprets Shakespeare's works. "He discusses character development, and Shakespeare's use of words to set the mood of the play. Includes selected readings." (WorldCat)

4 videocassettes of 4, 160 min, color, sd, 3/4 in. Copyright Collection. VBI 4541-4544.

TV adaptation of the 1972 Royal Shakespeare Company production staged by Trevor Nunn. Presented by ATV Network, one of Britain's oldest independent TV stations, the program has been praised for setting "a standard for what televised Shakespeare should be" (Kenneth S. Rothwell & Annabelle Henkin Melzer, Shakespeare on Screen, p. 29). For its U.S. premiere, the broadcast was extended to over three hours by commercial breaks. This prompted a flood of angry letters from viewers to The New York Times critic John J. O'Connor, who, having seen a preview without the ads, praised the program as a "marvelously imaginative interpretation, beautifully performed" (Jan. 19, 1975). As one irrate viewer stated, "[...] I shall never buy a product I noticed advertised during this production. If I have been in a habit of buying such a product, I shall immediately change brands" (ibid.) (DVD)

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA (Bard Productions, 1983). Dir Lawrence Carra. With Lynn Redgrave (Cleopatra), Timothy Dalton (Antony), Nichelle Nichols (Charmian), John Carradine (Soothsayer), Barrie Ingham (Enobarbus), Anthony Geary (Octavius Caesar), Walter Koenig (Pompey).

2 videocassettes of 2 (VHS), 183 min, color, sd, 1/2 in. Copyright Collection. VAC 4602-4603.

Filmed "as seen in the 16th century" (original container) on a replica of the Globe Theatre stage, this was one of nine Shakespeare plays made by the California-based Bard Productions from 1981 to 1983 and released directly to video. First televised on October 5, 1984, on the Bravo cable channel. (DVD)

AS YOU LIKE IT
AS YOU LIKE IT (Vitagraph, 1912). Dir Charles Kent. Adapt Margaret Birch. With Rose Coghlan (Rosalind), Maurice Costello (Orlando), Rosemary Theby (Celia), Robert Gaillord (Oliver), Rose Tapley (Phoebe).

3 reels of 3 on 2, 2588 ft, si, b&w, 35mm. Fisher-Bundesarchiv Collection. FGF 0996-0997. - extensive nitrate deterioration in reel 3.

The film marked the first time Vitagraph extended the length of its Shakespeare releases to three reels and imported a famous star of the theater to play the lead. Rose Coghlan, who appeared on stage as Rosalind back in 1880, was by then 61 years old, and “no amount of make-up or corseting could hide the lines in her face or the dumpiness of her figure” (Robert Hamilton Ball, Shakespeare on Silent Film, p. 144). Flatbush, NY, stands in for the Forest of Arden.

AS YOU LIKE IT (Interallied Film Producers/Twentieth Century-Fox, U.K., 1936). Released in the U.S. in 1937. Dir Paul Czinner. Wrt J. M. Barrie, Robert Cullen. With Elisabeth Bergner (Rosalind), Laurence Olivier (Orlando), Sophie Stewart (Celia), Henry Ainley (Exiled Duke), Mackenzie Ward (Touchstone), Leon Quartermaine (Jacques), Felix Aylmer (Duke Frederick), Austin Trevor (Le Beau).

1 videodisc of 1 (DVD), 96 min, sd, b&w, 4 3/4 in. LC Gift Collection (from Cooper C. Graham). DVA 8082.

U.K.’s first feature-length Shakespeare sound film and Laurence Olivier’s first screen performance in a Shakespeare play. (DVD)

THIS IS CHARLES LAUGHTON. AGES OF MAN (Paul Gregory & Associates/Syndicated, 1953).

1 reel of 1, 13 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. Copyright Collection. FAB 2604.
1 reel of 1, 13 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. AFI/Archer (Kate) Collection. FBC 8599.
1 reel of 1, 13 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. AFI/Archer (Kate) Collection. FBC 8600.
- all three copies are reissue prints.

Episode from the series of dramatic readings by Charles Laughton which marked the British actor's U.S. TV debut (see also entry under Twelfth Night). Here, Laughton presents the "Seven Ages of Man" soliloquy from As You Like It as an introduction to the reading of an excerpt ("So This Is Man") from Thomas Wolfe's novel "You Can't Go Home Again." Reissued for educational use by Quality Productions in 1977.

1 videocassette of 1, 51 min, sd, color, 3/4 in. Kaye (Danny)/Fine (Sylvia) Collection. VBM 8715.
1 reel of 1, ca. 55 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. Kaye (Danny)/Fine (Sylvia) Collection. FDB 0405.
1 reel of 1, ca. 53 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. Kaye (Danny)/Fine (Sylvia) Collection. FDB 0406.
1 reel of 1, ca. 48 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. Kaye (Danny)/Fine (Sylvia) Collection. FDB 0421.
Musical number based on the “Seven Ages of Man” soliloquy.

1 reel of 1, ca. 24 min, sd, color, 16mm.  Prelinger Collection.  (currently inaccessible).

Abbreviated version of the play in which "brief narrative bridges connect the performances of key scenes, forming a compact and dramatic introduction to the play" (BFA 1984 Film/Video Catalog, p. 25). Includes excerpts from Act I Scenes II & III, Act II Scenes I, IV & VII, Act III Scene II, Act IV Scene III, and Act V Scene IV.  (DVD - Phoenix Learning Group)

DIALOGUE OF THE WESTERN WORLD. AS YOU LIKE IT (Maryland Center for Public Broadcasting, ca. 1970).

1 videoreel of 1, ca. 60 min, sd, color, 2 in.  PBS Collection.  VUA 7256 (currently inaccessible - requires preservation).

Episode from the series of one-hour literary discussion programs produced for Maryland public television.  No further information available.

THE FEAST OF LANGUAGE.  AS YOU LIKE IT (WGBH-TV, 1971).

1 videoreel of 1, ca. 30 min, sd, color, 2 in.  PBS Collection.  VUA 7752 (currently inaccessible - requires preservation).

Program no. 4 in the series in which Brandeis University professor Alan Levitan interprets Shakespeare’s works.  “He discusses character development, and Shakespeare’s use of words to set the mood of the play.  Includes selected readings.” (WorldCat)

AS YOU LIKE IT (Sands Films/Squirrel Films, U.K., 1992).  Dir Christine Edzard.  With Cyril Cusack (Adam), James Fox (Jacques), Don Henderson (Duke Frederick/Duke Senior), Miriam Margolyes (Audrey), Emma Croft (Rosalind), Griff Rhys Jones (Touchstone), Andrew Tiernan (Orlando/Oliver), Celia Bannerman (Celia), Tony Armatrading (Charles).

1 videocassette of 1 (VHS), ca. 117 min, sd, color, 1/2 in.  Copyright Collection.  VAC 2967.
An adaptation of the play set in modern-day London with an urban wasteland along the Thames standing in for the Forest of Arden and a City office block for the Court of France. Never released in the U.S.

1 videocassette of 1 (Betacam SP), ca. 45 min, sd, color, 1/2 in. Copyright Collection. VXC 4012.

An episode from the third and final season of the TV drama series set in Deerfield, Illinois, and centering on the romantic relationship between a single mother (Ward) and a single father (Campbell) and its repercussions on their respective children and ex-spouses. In Tough Love, two of the children, Grace (Whelan) and Jessie (Wood), are appearing in their high-school's modern-dress production of As You Like It, Grace as Rosalind and Jessie as Phebe. Fragments from several of the play's scenes are seen throughout the episode.

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS

8 reels of 8, ca. 73 min, sd, b&w, 35mm (fine grain master). AFI/Universal Collection. FPB 6626-6633 (currently inaccessible - requires preservation).

Film version of the Broadway musical based on The Comedy of Errors. Retains the setting and the plot from the play, but uses modern-day language and music.

KRAFT TELEVISION THEATRE. THE COMEDY OF ERRORS (NBC, 12/7/1949). Dir Stanley Quinn. With Stewart Bradley (Antipholus of Syracuse), Harry Townes (Dromio of Syracuse), James Daly (Antipholus of Ephesus), Kurt Richards (Dromio of Ephesus), Flora Campbell (Adriana), Neva Patterson (Luciana).

1 videocassette of 1, 60 min, sd, b&w, 3/4 in. NBC TV Collection. VBS 2451.

Shakespeare’s 5-act play condensed into 3 acts. Egeon’s speech in the play’s opening scene, explaining how the two sets of twins were separated at an early age, is replaced by a brief exposition illustrated with cartoon-like drawings and narrated by the show’s host Ed Herlihy. Cast includes Eileen Heckart (as the Courtesan) in what may have been her first TV appearance.

2 videocassettes of 2, 93 min, sd, b&w, 3/4 in. PBS Collection. VBN 6578-6579.

Originally broadcast in the U.K. as part of the celebration of the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth, this was the first production of the Royal Shakespeare Company televised directly from its London headquarters at the Aldwych Theatre before a live audience. Staged by Clifford Williams.

1 videoreel of 1, ca. 130 min, sd, color, 1 in. Copyright Collection. VTA 7670 (currently inaccessible - requires preservation).

A re-staging for TV of Trevor Nunn's 1976 Royal Shakespeare Company production, winner of the Society of West End Theaters' award for best musical. "Blends slapstick, song and dance to exhuberant effect and popular acclaim" (BUFVC Shakespeare database).

1 videocassette of 1 (VHS), 85 min, sd, color, 1/2 in. Copyright Collection. VAG 1724.

- in Spanish (no subtitles).

An adaptation of the play in the "ranchera" genre, the Mexican variant of the "singing cowboy" film. Set in present-day rural Mexico, the comedy features popular singer, composer and actor Antonio Aguilar (1919-2007), who in addition to playing both brothers (one wearing a white, the other a black sombrero), also produced the film and collaborated on its screenplay. Not released theatrically in the U.S. (VHS)

2 videocassettes of 2, ca. 90 min, sd, color, 3/4 in. LC Off-Air Taping Collection. VBD 7101-7102.

2 videocassettes of 2, 85 min, sd, color, 3/4 in. Kaye (Danny)/Fine (Sylvia) Collection. VBQ 7128-7129.
- segment is on tape 2.

The third program celebrating American musical comedy created, produced and hosted by Sylvia Fine Kaye combines performances of individual numbers with descriptions of the shows' genesis and innovations. Includes a profile of “The Boys from Syracuse” (Broadway musical based on The Comedy of Errors), consisting of an interview with Eddie Albert, the star of the original stage production of the show, and three numbers, "Falling in Love" (Peters), "This Can't Be Love" (Van Dyke, McKechnie), and "Sing for Your Supper" (Peters, McKechnie, Ballard). Recorded before a live audience at the Wilshire Ebell Theatre, Los Angeles.

LIVE FROM LINCOLN CENTER. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE’S THE COMEDY OF ERRORS (Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts/PBS, 6/24/1987). Dir Kirk Browning. With Paul Magid (Antipholus of Syracuse), Howard Jay Patterson (Antipholus of Ephesus), Sam Williams (Dromio of Syracuse), Randy Nelson (Dromio of Ephesus), Gina Leishman (Luciana), Sophie Hayden (Adriana), Timothy Daniel Furst (William Shakespeare).

*3 videocassettes of 3, ca. 150 min, sd, color, 3/4 in. LC Off-Air Taping Collection. VBE 8091-8093.

Broadcast live from the Lincoln Center Theater at the Vivian Beaumont, this production, directed by Robert Woodruff, was originally staged at The Goodman Theater in Chicago in 1983 and the Los Angeles Olympic Arts Festival in 1984. The zany, circus-like performance, albeit one which for the most part preserves Shakespeare's language, features members of the juggling and comedy troupes The Flying Karamazov Brothers and Vaudeville Nouveau, The Kamikaze Ground Crew orchestra, and juggler and mime artist Avner the Eccentric.

CORIOLANUS

1 videocassette of 1, 54 min, sd, color, 3/4 in. LC Purchase Collection (from LWT). VBH 0456.

An audiovisual diary of a year in the life of Ian McKellen, from June 1984 to early August 1985, during which he was involved in the production of three plays at the National Theatre, including Shakespeare's Coriolanus. He talks about his approach to the role and is seen in rehearsals with director Peter Hall and working on fight scenes with actor Greg Hicks (as Tullus Aufidius). There are also numerous backstage scenes, brief glimpses of performances of the play, and footage of McKellen receiving the London Evening Standard Drama Award.
HAMLET

ONE NIGHT ONLY (Bulls-Eye Film Corp./State Rights, 1919).  Dir & Wrt Charles Parrott.  With Leo White, Monte Banks, Charles Dorety, Harry Mann, Beatrice Lovejoy, James Parrott.

1 reel of 2 (r1)(inc.), 676 ft, si, b&w, 35mm.  AFI/Nichol (Donald) Collection.  FEA 3732.

Comedy short about a down-and-out group of traveling players hired to stage Hamlet in a small-town theater.  The actual performance of the play is in the second reel, which is missing from LC’s copy.

5 reels of 5 (inc.), 3469 ft, si, b&w, 35mm.  Public Archives of Canada/Dawson City Collection.  FEB 7236-7240.
- some intertitles and parts of picture lacking;  heavy nitrate deterioration printed through.

A western which bears only a marginal relation to the play in that the main character, a rancher, carries the memory of his father's murder and lives to avenge the crime.

2 reels of 2, ca. 22 min, sd, b&w, 35mm (composite master positive).  AFI/RKO Collection.  FPD 3371-3372 (currently inaccessible - requires preservation).

A comedy short in which a husband (Kennedy) argues with his mother-in-law (Farley) over the precise content of Hamlet's "To be or not to be" soliloquy.  (VHS - on Edgar Kennedy--Volume 1 from The New York Film Annex, RKO Comedy Collection. Edgar Kennedy--Volume 1 from Encore Home Video, and Edgar Kennedy Slow Burn Festival from Video Yesteryear)

*2 reels of 2, ca. 120 min, sd, b&w, 16mm.  Pattison (Barrie) Collection.  FDB 2203-2204

A landmark production, NBC's Hamlet was at the time the longest drama ever presented on American TV and the first TV adaptation of Shakespeare to feature Maurice Evans.  Appearing on Broadway in Romeo and Juliet (1936), Richard II (1937), Hamlet (1938) Henry IV, Part I (1939), Twelfth Night (1940) and Macbeth (1941), the English-born actor became one of the world's best known interpreters of Shakespeare.  A U.S. citizen from 1941, Evans toured the Pacific during World War II with the shortened "G.I." version of Hamlet, later staged on Broadway by George Schaefer.  Supervised by Schaefer himself, the Hallmark telecast was unveiled on NBC on April 26, the date of William Shakespeare’s baptism in 1564.
Walter Kerr, drama critic of The New York Herald Tribune, discusses how the character of Hamlet has changed to reflect the sentiments and tastes of the 20th century, including Chekhovian and Freudian influences. Scenes from the play are performed by Canadian actors affiliated with the Stratford Ontario Festival.

Episode from the single-season TV series featuring the exploits of Chinese-American private eye Charlie Chan (Naish). During World War II, an officer of the SS (Huntley) extorts a First Folio edition of Shakespeare's Hamlet from a French prisoner, who is then executed. Many years later, when he tries to sell the book, the German is murdered and the shop handling the sale is set on fire. (DVD - on The New Adventures of Charlie Chan--Vol. 4 from A & A Media)

Episode from the first season of the phenomenally successful (albeit only after its initial run) sci-fi TV series. Set in the 23rd century, it follows the adventures of the crew of Starship Enterprise, under the command of Capt. James T. Kirk (Shatner), as it goes about exploring the universe on behalf of the United Federation of Planets. In The Conscience of the King, which borrows its title ("The play's the thing / Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king") and some of the plot elements from Hamlet, Capt. Kirk tries to determine if the head (Moss) of a traveling theatrical troupe is the same man who as governor of planet Tarsus IV twenty years earlier ordered the execution of half of its population, including some of Kirk's own family. The episode opens with the players performing Macbeth and ends with a staging of Hamlet. (DVD - on Star Trek The Original Series--The Complete First Season)

HAMLET (Woodfall Films/Columbia, U.K., 1969). Dir Tony Richardson. With Nicol Williamson (Hamlet), Anthony Hopkins (Claudius), Judy Parfitt (Gertrude), Mark Dignam (Polonius), Marianne Faithfull (Ophelia), Michael Pennington (Laertes).

12 reels of 12 on 6, ca. 114 min, sd, color, 35mm. Copyright Collection. FGC 3986-3991.

The film originated as a highly acclaimed stage production at London's Roundhouse, which had been built as a locomotive engine repair shop and then used as a gin warehouse before becoming a performing arts venue in 1964. Tony Richardson, who also directed the play, shot the film in ten days at the Roundhouse itself, relying on spare production design, sustained close-ups, and several actors reappearing in two or three minor roles (e.g. Roger Livesey, the star of The Life and Death of Colonel Blimp, as both Lucianus and the Gravedigger). 17-year-old Anjelica Huston is a lady-in-waiting in the scenes of Ophelia's lament for Polonius and Gertrude's death. When he appeared as Hamlet with the Birmingham Repertory Theatre in 1969, Richard Chamberlain became the first American to play the role in England since John Barrymore forty years earlier. In 1970, he joined forces with George LeMaire to produce a TV adaptation of the play. Costumed in the Regency period (early 1800's) and filmed at the 14th century Raby Castle in County Durham, U.K., the program opened the 20th season of the Hallmark Hall of Fame series.

Episode from the second season of the ambitious TV series, boasting an innovative 90-minute format, uncommonly high production values, and three stars, Tony Franciosa, Robert Stack, and Gene Barry, rotating in the lead every third week. The setting is a Los Angeles publishing house, with Barry as the owner, and Franciosa and Stack as reporters for People and Crime magazines respectively. In the small town of Illyria, in present-day Virginia, an eccentric Shakespearean scholar (Cotten) commits a series of murders to prevent others from discovering the manuscript of the first draft of Hamlet (titled "The King of Denmark"), found among the papers of his wife's family, which supposedly hosted the Bard during his sojourn in Virginia in 1590.

Selected scenes from Hamlet from a "series of educational films intended to serve as an introduction to each play's theme or atmosphere." (BUFVC Shakespeare database). Original U.K. release (running time: 17 min) includes excerpts from Act I Scene IV, Act III Scene I, and Act V Scene I. In the U.S., the original was split into two films released by two different companies several years apart: Act III Scene I was distributed on its own in 1971 by BFA Educational Media, while the other two segments (Act I Scene IV & Act V Scene I) appeared three years later under the title Hamlet distributed by the Chicago-based International Film Bureau. (DVD, BFA release - Phoenix Learning Group)

Episode from the 2nd season of the long-running sitcom (1974-1984) centered on the life of a middle-class family in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in the late 1950's-early 1960's. In A Star is Bored, teenagers Richie (Howard), Potsie, and Ralph, in an attempt to raise money to buy new uniforms for their baseball team, recruit the neighborhood greaser, Fonzie (Winkler), to play Hamlet in the annual Shakespeare Festival organized by the local church. (DVD - on Happy Days--The Complete Second Season)

Episode from the 4th and final season of the British comedy series which opens with a 5-minute sketch of Hamlet (Jones) visiting a psychiatrist's office to complain that "everywhere I go, it's the same old thing. All anyone wants me to say is 'To be or not to be'..." The play's other characters and bits of action are referred to throughout the show, which ends with the dead Hamlet being taken away by pall-bearers dressed in Queen Victoria costumes. The episode features material cut from the original draft of the 1975 feature Monty Python and the Holy Grail, including the bogus psychiatrists sketch, which originally featured Sir Lancelot instead of Hamlet. Date of first U.S. broadcast undetermined. (DVD)

Dir Ragnar Lyth.  Wrt Lyth, Leon Vitali.  With Stellan Skarsgård (Hamlet), Mona Malm (Gertrud), Frej Lindquist (Claudius), Pernilla Wallgren (Ophelia), Sven Lindberg (Polonius), Dan Ekborg (Laertes), Per Eggers (Horatio).
Produced for Swedish television, this adaptation of Hamlet eliminates more than half of the play's text, but retains almost all of its scenes and characters. It was filmed in Alfred Nobel's abandoned 19th century dynamite factory in Vinterviken near Stockholm, and in a 17th century castle. Original U.S. broadcast was followed by a discussion of the film by Joseph Papp and Diane Venora. LC copy is Washington D.C.'s WETA-TV broadcast (without the Papp/Venora segment) from April 1988, presented as part of A Festival of Swedish Television and introduced by Wilhelm Wachtmeister, Swedish Ambassador to the U.S.

An adaptation of vol. 3 of "Gesta Danorum," a history of Denmark by medieval author Saxo Grammaticus, the principal source for Shakespeare's Hamlet. There are many differences between the two works, not least the fact that prince Amled (Bale) witnesses his father's murder and fakes madness while planning his revenge. Later, he reaches England and marries the English princess (Beckinsale), and after killing his uncle (Byrne) lives to inherit the throne. Miramax, which bought the U.S. distribution rights, never released the film theatrically, while the subsequent U.S. video release added a voiceover and truncated the running time to 85 min. (DVD)

The longest Shakespeare film ever made and the first to use the complete, uncut text of a Shakespeare play, this ambitious project had its roots in Kenneth Branagh's life-long obsession with Hamlet, in particular his starring role in two full-text productions of the play for BBC radio and the Royal Shakespeare Company (both in 1992). Filmed at England's Shepperton Studios and on location at Blenheim Palace in Oxfordshire, Branagh's screen adaptation moves the action to the late 19th century and packs the cast with celebrity cameos, including Jack Lemmon (Marcellus), Robin Williams (Osric), Charlton Heston (Player King), Billy Crystal (Gravedigger), and Gérard Depardieu (Reynaldo). The film was shot on 65mm stock and initially released in 70mm in limited engagements; a shorter edit, 2½ hours long, was also shown in some markets. (DVD)

- AAFF & Prelinger: BFA release; MacDonald: IFB release.

Two scenes from Henry IV, Part 2 staged in Elizabethan style and serving as an introduction to the play's theme and atmosphere. Original U.K. release (running time: 12 min) includes excerpts from Act II Scene II and Act V Scene V. In the U.S., the original was split into two films released by two different companies several years apart: Act V Scene V was distributed in 1971 by BFA Educational Media, while Act II Scene II appeared three years later under the banner of the Chicago-based International Film Bureau. (DVD, BFA release - Phoenix Learning Group)

Two street hustlers, Mike (Phoenix) and Scott (Reeves), embark on a journey of personal discovery that takes them to Mike's hometown in Idaho and to Italy in search of Mike's mother. The film is in part a modern adaptation of Henry IV, Part 1, with the character of Scott modeled on Prince Hal, street gang leader Bob Pigeon (Richert) representing Falstaff, and Mike corresponding to Poins. Some of the dialogue is taken from the play. (DVD)

WISHBONE. THE PRINCE OF WAGS (Big Feats! Entertainment/PBS, 1997). Dir Rick Duffield. Wrt Laurie Barth, Melanie Munnell, Raymond Ricord. With Soccer the Dog (Wishbone/Prince Hal), Larry Brantley (Voice of Wishbone), Jordan Wall, Christie Abbott; Sean Hennigan (King Henry IV), Lynn Mathis (Falstaff), Ashley Wood (Hotspur), Kevin Page (Westmoreland).

Episode from the award-winning live-action children's series featuring a dog whose imagination finds parallels between daily life in the fictional town of Oakdale, Texas, and classic literary works in which he is the hero (see also entries under Romeo and Juliet and The Tempest). In The Prince of Wags, Wishbone is the mascot of a high-school basketball team and his owner Joe (Wall) the team's captain. Both learn the meaning of true leadership, Joe on the basketball court and Wishbone as Prince Hal in Henry IV, Part 1. Scenes from the play heavily truncate the original text.

HENRY V

HENRY V (Two Cities Films/Eagle-Lion Distributors, U.K., 1944). Released in the U.S. in 1946 by United Artists. Dir Laurence Olivier. Wrt Olivier, Alan Dent. With Olivier (Henry V), Robert Newton (Ancient Pistol), Leslie Banks (Chorus), Renée Asherson (Katherine), Esmond Knight (Fluellen), Leo Genn (Constable), Ralph Truman (Mountjoy), Harcourt Williams (Charles VI), Ivy St. Hélier (Alice), Ernest Thesiger (Duke of Bedford), Max Adrian (Dauphin).

Olivier's directorial debut, made in the midst of World War II, opens with an on-screen dedication to "the commandoes and airborne troops of Great Britain." With many of the darker nuances of the play excised, the film served as an affirmative rallying call by delivering a heartening reminder of an historic British victory in Europe to wartime audiences. Following the film’s release in the U.S., Olivier won an honorary Academy Award “for his outstanding achievement as actor, producer and director in bringing ‘Henry V’ to the screen.” (DVD)

2 videocassettes of 2, ca. 90 min, sd, b&w, 3/4 in. Wesleyan University Collection. VBD 5874-5875. - first segment in program; running time of segment: 22 min.

The bilingual scene of Henry V’s wooing of Princess Katherine, resulting in the marriage that united England and France.

3 reels of 3, 123 min, sd, b&w, 16mm (kinescope positive). PBS Collection. F19548-19550 (currently inaccessible - requires preservation).

The inaugural broadcast in BBC’s Television World Theatre series with 36 speaking parts and a production cost of 4,069 pounds sterling. The character of Chorus (Shakespeare himself, according to a contemporary review in The Times) fills in the gaps in the play’s narrative and comments on the theatrical conventions used to represent large-scale historical events. This "presentational Chorus" (BUFVC Shakespeare database) anticipates how the figure was used in later productions, including Kenneth Branagh's film version (see below).

AN AGE OF KINGS. PART 7, SIGNS OF WAR (BBC, 7/21/1960). First U.S. broadcast: 2/21/1961, WNEW, New York City (Metropolitan Broadcasting Corp.) Dir Michael Hayes. Adapt Eric Crozier. With Robert Hardy (King Henry V), Noel Johnson (Duke of Exeter), Julian Glover (Earl of Westmoreland), William Squire (Chorus), Cyril Luckham (Archbishop of Canterbury), Gordon Costelow (Bardolph), David Andrews (Nym), George A. Cooper (Pistol), Alan Rowe (Charles VI), John Warner (Dauphin), Judi Dench (Katherine).

"Kenneth Branagh has done it. Who is Kenneth Branagh?" asked The New York Times (Nov. 8, 1989) on the eve of the U.S. opening of Henry V. The 28-year-old Irishman's directorial debut was a surprising success, even drawing favorable comparisons to Laurence Olivier, who was 37 when he directed his screen version of the play. Unlike Olivier's stylized celebration of British patriotism, Branagh opted for a decidedly unglamorous, down-to-earth approach, with bloody battle scenes and graphic images of sickness and famine among the mud-drenched soldiers. As a counterpoint, Derek Jacobi's Chorus opens the film on a soundstage in modern dress, and then reappears several times interrupting the action. As to the title character, again opposing Olivier whose Henry is a heroic figure from the start, Branagh's king is gradually transformed during the course of the action, attaining "a heroic stature almost in spite of himself" (Rosenthal, p. 46). The critical and commercial success of Henry V was instrumental in bringing Shakespeare back into the cinematic mainstream both in the U.K. and Hollywood. As Al Pacino, who himself tackled "Richard III" in 1996 (Looking for Richard - see below), stated: "Branagh opened it all up with Henry V. That was just an explosion." (quoted in Rosenthal, p. 172) (DVD)

HENRY VIII

THE SHAKE SP EARE PLAYS. THE FAMOUS HISTORY OF THE LIFE OF KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

2 videocassettes of 2 (VHS), ca. 165 min, sd, color, 1/2 in. (collection undetermined). VAA 5136-5137.

The sixth and final production of the first season of The Shakespeare Plays is considered one of the best entries in the whole series and was specifically cited as such by the Shakespeare Association of America. It was shot entirely on location (in Leeds Castle, Penshurst Place and Hever Castle) and the costumes were based on Tudor paintings, including the famous portrait of Henry VIII by Hans Holbein. For more on the series, see entry under Julius Caesar. (DVD - Ambrose Video)

JULIUS CAESAR

CAJUS JULIUS CAESAR; U.S. title: JULIUS CAESAR (Cines, Italy, 1914). Released in the U.S. by George Kleine. Dir Enrico Guazzoni. Wrt Raffaele Giovagnoli. With Amleto Novelli (Julius Caesar), Gianna Terribili-Gonzales (Tertullia), Irene Mattalia (Servillia), Augusto Mastroianni (Cato), Antonio Nazzari (Brutus).

6 reels of 6, 2172 ft, si, b&w, 16mm. Kleine (George) Collection. FLA 0733-0738.
6 reels of 6 on 3, 5213 ft, si, b&w, 35mm. Kleine (George) Collection. FGF 2728-2730.
- U.S. release version.

Like Guazzoni's earlier Antony and Cleopatra (see above), Julius Caesar, which covers Caesar's life from 82 B.C. to his death in 44 B.C., is only marginally related to Shakespeare's play, owing much more to Plutarch's "Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romans" and Caesar's own memoirs, "Commentaries on the Gallic War" and "Commentaries on the Civil War."

1 reel of 1, ca. 19 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. MacDonald (J. Fred and Leslie W.) Collection. FBC 8851.

Educational short consisting of Act III Scene II in which Mark Antony and Brutus address the crowd in the Forum following Caesar's murder.

THE TRAGEDY OF JULIUS CAESAR (NBC, 4/3/1949). Dir Garry Simpson. With George Bliss (Julius Caesar), James Maxwell (Marcus Brutus), Donald Roberts (Cassius), Peter Klaussen (Casca), Roger Neuhoff (Trebonius), Arch Taylor (Decius Brutus), Raymond MacDonnell (Marcus Antonius).

2 videocassettes of 2 (Digital Betacam), 105 min, sd, b&w, 1/2 in. NBC TV Collection. VBS 2867-2868.

The first performance ever presented on the Elizabethan stage of the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington D.C. Transmitted nationally by NBC on a Sunday afternoon, the broadcast was sponsored by the Socony-Vacuum Oil Company and performed by members of the dramatic society of Amherst College (The Masquers), which originally presented the play in March 1949 at Amherst's Kirby Memorial Theater (the production was staged by Professor Curtis Canfield). Appropriately for the venue, the performance was presented "in the fashion of Shakespeare's time, just as people saw it when Julius Caesar was a new and unknown play" (opening commentary). The broadcast profiles the Folger Library and its founder, Henry Clay Folger, an Amherst graduate and later president of Standard Oil, and includes appearances by Charles W. Cole, President of Amherst College (1946-1960), and Louis B. Wright, Folger's Director from 1948 to 1968.

JULIUS CAESAR (Avon Productions/Brandon Films, 1950). Dir & Adapt David Bradley. With Harold Tasker (Julius Caesar), Robert Holt (Octavius Caesar), Charlton Heston (Mark Antony), Theodore Clark (Emil Lepidus), David Bradley (Brutus), Grosvenor Glenn (Cassius), William Russell (Casca).

2 reels of 2, ca. 96 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. Copyright Collection. FDA 0167-0168.

4 reels of 4, ca. 96 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. Copyright Collection. FBB 7417-7420.

An independent production filmed on 16mm and originally intended for educational use. Shot mostly on location in Chicago, utilizing many of the city's landmarks as backdrops, with students from Northwestern University (director Bradley's alma mater) as bit players and extras. The film began its nationwide commercial run in 1952. (DVD)

With Robert Speaight (Mark Antony), Cecil Trouncer (Brutus), Henry Oscar (Cassius), Bruce Belfrage (Caesar), John Gabriel (Casca).

1 reel of 1, 32 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. American Archive of the Factual Film Collection. AAFF 12-3132.

1 reel of 1, ca. 32 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. Prelinger Collection. (currently inaccessible).
- U.S. release version.

Abridged version of the play produced for educational use. Focuses "mainly on the first part from the Festival of the Games to Mark Antony’s funeral oration. Many of the dialogues between Cassius and Brutus have been cut." (BUFVC Shakespeare database)

JULIUS CAESAR (MGM, 1953). Dir Joseph L. Mankiewicz. With Marlon Brando (Mark Antony), James Mason (Brutus), John Gielgud (Cassius), Louis Calhern (Julius Caesar), Edmond O'Brien (Casca), Greer Garson (Calpurnia), Deborah Kerr (Portia).

1 videocassette of 1 (VHS), ca. 121 min, sd, color, 1/2 in. Copyright Collection. VAD 3055.
12 reels of 12, ca. 121 min, sd, b&w, 35mm. Copyright Collection. FGA 5881-5892.
- VHS copy is colorized version made by Turner Entertainment Co. in 1993.

Critically well received both in the U.S. and England, MGM's Julius Caesar is widely considered the most successful Hollywood adaptation of a Shakespeare play. According to producer John Houseman, he and Mankiewicz decided against making the film in color or CinemaScope as the tragedy called for "intensity and intimacy rather than grandeur; for direct violent confrontations that do not benefit from a lush, polychrome background" (quoted in AFI Catalog online). Mankiewicz also insisted on rehearsing for three weeks on the actual sets (built for the 1951 epic Quo Vadis) and on shooting scenes in chronological order. Brando, in his first classical role and supposedly coached by John Gielgud, won praise for his performance, surprising contemporary critics who were fearful that his method delivery would compromise the poetic flow of the language. (DVD)

1 videocassette of 1 (Digital Betacam), ca. 90 min, sd, b&w, 1/2 in. NBC Television Collection. VBR 4281.
- segment begins at 26:00 min; running time of segment: ca. 18 min.

Serving as the pilot for a new series launched later that same year, this episode of NBC's ambitious anthology program featured live broadcasts from Canada, Mexico, and various locations in the U.S. The Canadian segment showcased the Straford Shakespearean Festival, going on air as a performance of Julius Caesar was about to begin. Includes brief interviews with Tyrone Guthrie, the Festival's Artistic Director, and Michael Langham, who directed the play, as well as an extended rehearsal scene of Act II Scene I with Lorne Greene as Brutus.
STUDIO ONE SUMMER THEATRE. JULIUS CAESAR (CBS, 8/1/1955). Dir Daniel Petrie. Adapt Leo Penn. With Theodore Bikel (Julius Caesar), Alfred Ryder (Mark Antony), Michael Strong (Casca), Shepperd Strudwick (Cassius), Philip Bourneuf (Brutus).

1 videocassette of 1 (Digital Betacam), 59 min, sd, b&w, 1/2 in. Copyright Collection. VBT 0241.

Sponsored by Westinghouse, Studio One (or Studio One Summer Theatre as it was called in-between seasons) was one of the most acclaimed dramatic anthology series from the golden era of live television. The one-hour time slot (including commercials) required heavy cutting of Shakespeare's original, leaving, as Variety (Aug 3, 1955) summed it up, "no time for subtleties". The series first tackled Julius Caesar during its first season (1949), in a modern-dress adaptation with Philip Bourneuf as Mark Antony.

2 reels of 2, ca. 60 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. Copyright Collection. FCA 4064-4065.

Program no. 6 from the series produced by Wisconsin station WHA-TV and featuring British stage director Eric Salmon, at the time visiting lecturer at the University of Wisconsin. Consists of a rehearsal in modern dress of scenes from Julius Caesar focusing on the characters of Brutus and Cassius.

2 videocassettes of 2 (Digital Betacam), 105 min, sd, b&w, 1/2 in. PBS Collection. VBS 3566-3567.

Highly praised production, both for its direction and performances. Stuart Burge, by then an established BBC director (David Copperfield, The Power and the Glory), was singled out for his effective camerawork and use of dramatic closeups (especially in the scene of Caesar's assassination), while Eric Porter and Michael Gough "deserved to win millions of converts to televised Shakespeare with their quarrel scene" (Peter Black, The Daily Mail, quoted in NET files). Mark Antony was played by American actor William Sylvester, who settled in England after World War II to study at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and is today best remembered as Dr Heywood Floyd in Stanley Kubrick's 2001: A Space Odyssey.

CHRONICLE. FOUR VIEWS OF CAESAR (CBS, 11/6/1963). With Martin Gabel (Plutarch's Caesar), Dennis King (Shaw's Caesar), Alan Badel (Shakespeare's Caesar), Peter Donat (Caesar's Caesar), Anne Fielding (Cleopatra).
Episode from a series of one-hour programs on the arts and sciences hosted by Charles Collingwood. Consists of four playlets in which four actors provide different interpretations of Julius Caesar, "as a just and humane man as seen by Caesar himself; as a great soldier and politician, as seen by the biographer Plutarch; as a pompous tyrant, as portrayed by William Shakespeare; and as a disenchanted old man, as portrayed by George Bernard Shaw" (WorldCat). The film grew out of Stuart Burge’s experience in directing a BBC TV Julius Caesar (see above) and a subsequent London stage production. The location scenes were filmed in Spain. The film “was critically savaged on both sides of the Atlantic as reviewers warmed to their themes of bad acting, poor casting, shabby sets, and school play costumes” (BUFVC Shakespeare database). The Shakespeare Plays, produced by BBC in partnership with Time-Life, is the most ambitious and comprehensive attempt to date to bring Shakespeare to the small screen. Starting with Romeo and Juliet in December 1978 and concluding in April 1985 with Titus Andronicus, the project presented 37 plays adapted and staged specifically for television. The American financial contribution, about one-fourth of the total budget, was based on grants from Exxon Corp., Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., and Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. For a detailed history of the project, including its planning, production and critical reception, see Susan Willis’s "The BBC Shakespeare Plays: Making the Televised Canon" (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1991). Julius Caesar, the fourth play of the first season in the U.K., opened the series in the U.S. (DVD - Ambrose Video)

In Shakespeare, Theo (Warner) and his friend Cockroach must study Julius Caesar for their history class, which prompts the family's dinner guests, two college professors (Browne and Plummer) and Cliff's father (Hyman), to act out scenes from the play. Derived from Shakespeare's King Lear and set in 1890's Russia, Gordin's play was first performed in 1892. The film version was based on the 1935 production by the Yiddish Drama Unit of the Federal Theater Project. The title character is a devout Jewish patriarch (Krohner) who intends to retire to Jerusalem, leaving his fortune to his three daughters (Grosman, Paskewich, Adler) and designating his eldest son-in-law (Weisman) to administer the estate. When the latter-withholds the money, the patriarch returns, loses his eyesight and becomes a beggar. The happy ending sees the family reconciled and a doctor pronouncing that Lear's eyesight could be restored with minor surgery.

One of TV's longest running game shows had its origins in the popular radio series of the same name hosted by Ralph Edwards, who hosted the TV show only during its first season (1950-51). The series featured members of the studio audience participating in humorous stunts. In a segment from the Jan. 25, 1951 broadcast, an elderly female contestant is cast as Goneril and asked to improvise her lines in response to the scripted text spoken by the actors playing King Lear and the Fool. The script includes original language from the play.

The 1953 production of King Lear was an ambitious endeavor: director Peter Brook was brought over from London, Pulitzer-Prize-winning composer Virgil Thomson wrote the original score, and Orson Welles made his U.S. TV debut in the title role. With Brook having reduced the play to 73 minutes by eliminating subplots secondary to the king's downfall and madness, CBS opted not to interrupt the program with commercial breaks. Welles, based in Ireland at the time, was saddled with a significant tax debt so that a deal had to be negotiated with the U.S. government allowing him to come to New York to work on the show. Observing the rehearsal, The New York Times (Oct. 18, 1953) noted that not once did the actor, "famous on two continents for more self-esteem than humbleness, lose his temper or threaten to have anyone ejected from the hall." Welles returned to the role of King Lear on the stage of New York's non-profit City Center in January 1956 (see The Ed Sullivan Show below), and was about to secure financing for a motion picture adaptation of the play at the time of his death in 1985. Frequently cited as a work inspired by King Lear, the film bears only a tenuous relationship to Shakespeare's play. The screenplay was based on Philip Yordan's script for the 1949 film House of Strangers, which, in turn, was based on Jerome Weidman's 1941 novel "I'll Never Go There Any More." (DVD)

Orson Welles appeared on The Ed Sullivan Show shortly after his troubled stage production of King Lear at New York's City Center had closed following only 21 performances. The production was plagued by a host of problems topped by Welles's ankle injury on the night before the premiere. This forced him to perform the opening night with a cast, which caused an injury to his other ankle and confined him to a wheelchair for the rest of the run. On Sullivan's show, the actor, in costume and makeup (a crutch is visible when he greets the host), performs the speech from Act IV, Scene VII ("You do me wrong to take me out o' the grave...").

Theatrical feature based on Peter Brook's 1962 Royal Shakespeare Company production and inspired by the writings of Polish theater critic Jan Kott, who likened Shakespeare's work to absurdist plays of Samuel Beckett and Eugène Ionesco. Filmed in black & white, along the sand dunes and stormy seas of northern Denmark, and relying on close-ups, zoom lenses, hand-held camera, and an absence of music, the film received mixed reviews: within four weeks in late 1971, The New York Times called it "Brook at his manic best" (Vincent Canby, Nov. 23, 1971) and "catastrophe and a scandal" (John Simon, Dec 19, 1971). As with Grigori Kozintsev's Hamlet (see above), this screen version of King Lear uses the Russian translation of the play by novelist Boris Pasternak. The film was shaped by Kozintsev's staging of Lear in 1941 at the Bolshoi Drama Theatre Maxim Gorky in Leningrad and his experiences during the subsequent siege of the city by the German army (1941-1944). Like its predecessor, King Lear was shot in Estonia and scored by Dmitri Shostakovich. "Indisputably one of the best films ever made about theatre" (Variety, Nov. 16, 1983), this story about a group of traveling players touring provincial Britain during World War II was adapted for the screen by Ronald Harwood from his own play, which in turn was based on the career of legendary Shakespearean actor Donald Wolfit (1902-1968), for whom Harwood had worked as a dresser.  Albert Finney's character, a spoiled and moody tyrant referred to only as “Sir” in the film, appears on stage as King Lear, quotes Macbeth from his hospital bed, and is also seen in the death scene from Othello.  Tom Courtenay is Sir's personal assistant and confidant, the Fool to Finney's King.

One of the few television adaptations of Shakespeare not based on a prior stage production, Granada TV's King Lear provided Laurence Olivier, unable to appear on stage for some years due to ill health, with an opportunity to play the title role for the first time since 1946, when he starred as Lear at the Old Vic (with Alec Guinness as the Fool).  The 1983 production is extremely faithful to the original text - only three scenes have been cut entirely.  It was taped in a Manchester studio on sets representing 9th century England and including a replica of the druidic ruins at Stonehenge.  Not surprisingly, considering Olivier's stature and advanced age, the reviews primarily focused on his performance.  In the article "The Sweetness of Age" (Times Literary Supplement, Apr. 8, 1983), Stanley Wells summed it up: "It is good that he [Olivier] has been given this late chance to demonstrate, to a new generation and in a new medium, his technical and interpretative genius in a great Shakespearean role."

Although not a direct adaptation of King Lear, Kurosawa's film incorporates numerous elements from the play. It is set in 16th-century Japan and the three daughters have been replaced by sons in keeping with the period's patriarchal tradition. The inspiration for the film's main characters came from historical figures from the tumultuous Sengoku era, namely warlord Motonari Mori and his three sons. The latter were celebrated for their filial loyalty, but Kurosawa speculated what the story might be like if the sons had been bad. According to the director as quoted in The New York Times (Dec. 15, 1985), "it was only after I was well into writing the script about these imaginary unfilial sons of the Mori clan that the similarities to Lear occurred to me." The main addition to the play was the old warlord's vindictive daughter-in-law (Harada), who "combines the qualities of Regan and Goneril with all the accumulated evil of Lady Macbeth, Edmund and Iago." (Peter Grilli, ibid.)

Part of the 8-volume video series presenting 21 stories as told by some of America's best-known storytellers. KING LEAR (Cannon, 1987). Dir & Wrt Jean-Luc Godard. With Burgess Meredith, Peter Sellars, Molly Ringwald, Godard, Woody Allen, Norman Mailer.

Sidestepping the play, its structure, and the conventions of narrative cinema, Godard's King Lear is a collage of disconnected images, words and sound effects (labeled, in the film's subtitle, as "a study, an approach, a clearing") built around the characters of William Shakespeare the Fifth (Sellars), who is trying to reconstruct his ancestor's work (destroyed, along with all other works of art, in the Chernobyl nuclear disaster), and Don Learo (Meredith), an ageing Mafia boss dictating his memoirs to his daughter Cordelia (Ringwald). (VHS)

Follows the rehearsals for the National Theatre production of King Lear staged by David Hare with Anthony Hopkins in the title role. Hare, Hopkins, Peter Brook, Jonathan Miller, and Eric Fried discuss various approaches to the play, the characters of Lear and Gloucester, and the choice of period and setting. Includes fragments from several screen versions of Lear (Paul Scofield/Brook, Grigori Kozintsev, Michael Hordern/Miller, Laurence Olivier, Akira Kurosawa’s Ran), and the staging of the happy-ending finale from Nahum Tate’s 1681 rewrite.

Screen adaptation of Jane Smiley’s 1991 Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, itself a modern rendition of King Lear relating the story from the daughters’ point-of-view. In the American Midwest, a widower (Robards) deeds the family farm to his three daughters, two of whom (Pfeiffer, Lange) live nearby with husbands (Anderson, Carradine) who are also farmers, while the third (Leigh) is a big city lawyer. When the latter voices reservations about the old patriarch’s plan, he bitterly disowns her and transfers the land to the other two. (DVD)

As is the case with most Italian adaptations of Shakespeare, director Mario Caserini (working here with his wife, actress Maria Gasperini), presents Macbeth as a historical spectacle, with elaborate sets, backgrounds and crowd scenes. The film limits Macbeth’s second encounter with the witches to their warning about Macduff, thereby eliminating the trademark scene of Birnam Wood coming to Dunsinane.

MACBETH (Film d’Art/Pathé, France, 1909). Released in the U.S. in 1910. Dir André Calmettes. With Paul Mounet (Macbeth), Jeanne Delvair (Lady Macbeth).

Short documentary on the Works Progress Administration's job training programs for African Americans which includes the only surviving footage (4 min) of Orson Welles's staging of Macbeth for the Federal Theatre Project. Often referred to as the "Voodoo Macbeth," the production, which opened at Harlem's Lafayette Theater on April 14, 1936, had an all-black cast and was set in 19th century Haiti. The film shows the play's Birnam Wood finale and Macbeth's slaying by Macduff. (DVD - on Treasures from American Film Archives--50 Preserved Films)

Welles’s second stage production of Macbeth ran for only four days in Salt Lake City, Utah, and was conceived as a rehearsal for the filming of the play. The adaptation’s key intervention was the introduction of a new character, Holy Father, some of whose lines were borrowed from the play’s minor characters omitted from the film. Following disastrous previews in October 1948, Republic withdrew the picture from distribution and charged associate producer Richard Wilson with its re-editing and re-recording (complaints were primarily directed at the heavy Scottish dialect). The truncated version (86 min) was released in September 1950. In 1980, the cut footage and original soundtrack were restored by the UCLA Film & TV Archive and The Folger Shakespeare Library. (VHS)

KRAFT TELEVISION THEATRE. MACBETH (NBC, 5/10/1950). With E.G. Marshall (Macbeth), Uta Hagen (Lady Macbeth), Chester Stratton (Macduff), Philip Huston (Banquo), Philip Faversham (Ross).

This condensed version of Macbeth was part of the prestigious and long-running (1947-58) drama series underwritten by the Kraft Foods company (the proceedings at Macbeth’s castle were interrupted twice by cheese commercials). The title role is played by E. G. Marshall, a prolific film and TV character actor probably best remembered as one of the 12 Angry Men in the 1957 movie with Henry Fonda, while Lady Macbeth is portrayed by the renowned stage actress and acting instructor Uta Hagen. The NBC broadcast competed for an audience with What’s My Line?, horse races in Yonkers, and a wrestling match, all of which were transmitted at the same time by other stations.

Feature film intended for educational use (high school and college level). Produced by the motion picture division of Bob Jones University, an evangelical Christian college in Greenville, South Carolina, with a cast made up of students and faculty of the School of Fine Arts and headed by university president Bob Jones, Jr. "An abbreviated but nevertheless ambitious production" (Kenneth S. Rothwell & Annabelle Henkin Melzer, Shakespeare on Screen, p. 153) which treats Macbeth as "a kind of morality play" (ibid.) In 1993, the University produced another screen adaptation of the play with Bob Jones III in the title role.

A whodunit constructed around a performance of Macbeth and mirroring the play’s characters’ relationships.  In a theater in Paris, a tyrannical director, Bertal (Simon), is murdered on the eve of the premiere.  The police inspector in charge of the investigation (Brochard) allows the performance to go on as he assembles the pieces of the puzzle and questions the suspects.  These include Sigurd (Roquevert), an old actor who was often insulted by Bertal, Ludovic Arn (Brasseur), the weak-willed leading man, and Aurélia Nobli (Valentin), an actress and drug addict involved with both Bertal and Arn.  The working title of the film was Ce Soir on Joue Macbeth.  Never released in the U.S.

The third Hallmark Hall of Fame adaptation of Shakespeare to star Maurice Evans (following Hamlet and Richard II) and the first to be broadcast in color.  Evans chose the play for his third TV appearance because "99 per cent of the mail that followed 'King Richard II' requested it" (NBC press release, Nov. 17, 1954).  The three leads (Evans, Anderson, Cotsworth) repeated their roles from the successful Broadway production of Macbeth, which opened at New York's National Theatre less than a month before the attack on Pearl Harbor.  Writing for the "Shakespeare Quarterly" in 1955 (Vol. 6, No. 1), Alice Griffin noted that "the hero of the play seemed more pathetic than tragic," but that "in the acting of Judith Anderson, the NBC Shakespearean series achieved for the first time the sense of high tragedy"
Anderson won an Emmy Award for her performance. As to the color (only black & white kinescopes survive), the reactions were mixed: for Variety (Dec. 1, 1954), “the addition of the color dimension extended the scope and the mood of the tragedy,” while Jack Gould, reviewing the broadcast in The New York Times (Nov. 29, 1954), indicated that “the restless camera work imposed lighting problems beyond color TV’s grasp at the moment.” In 1960, Evans and Anderson returned to Macbeth in another screen adaptation by George Schaefer (see below). The second of three programs on Macbeth presented as part of the third series of lectures on Shakespeare by Dr. Frank C. Baxter, professor of English at the University of Southern California. The series was originally broadcast on CBS station KNXT, Los Angeles, as a USC course starting in the fall of 1953. In 1956, all three seasons (47 programs) were picked up for national distribution by the Educational Television and Radio Center (later NET). In Macbeth--Continued, "Dr. Baxter presents an excellent analysis of the characters of two of the most forceful personalities in English literature - Lord and Lady Macbeth. The difference between the two, as Dr. Baxter sees them, is that Macbeth has a deep and vivid imagination that envisions consequences and Lady Macbeth strikes out opportunistically, unhampered by qualms of conscience or by the vision of what may come thereafter" (NET files).

Although conceived as a theatrical feature and shot on 35mm Technicolor stock, Maurice Evans's second screen appearance as Macbeth had its premiere as an NBC TV broadcast in the Hallmark Hall of Fame series (Nov. 20, 1960). Budgeted at nearly $1 million, of which about half was covered by Hallmark, the film was produced through a British company using a local crew, including cinematographer Freddie Young (Lawrence of Arabia, Ryan’s Daughter) and composer Richard Addinsell (Gaslight, Under Capricorn). Intent on filming on location in Scotland, George Schaefer initially wanted to use Cawdor Castle, the play's original setting, but found that "people are living there now and they have modernized it, complete with fancy windows, central heating and telephone lines and modern roads outside the gates" (TV Guide, Nov. 19-25, 1960). He eventually settled on Hermitage Castle, outside of the Highlands region, and had to shoot the scene of Birnam Wood advancing on Dunsinane at three different locations. The full-length version (108 min. versus the 80 min. TV version) opened theatrically in England in 1961. The film received a limited U.S. release two years later and then had an extended second life as a staple of 16mm collections in public libraries. (VHS)

Roman Polanski's first feature since the brutal murder of his wife Sharon Tate, a fact often referred to by reviewers and scholars when discussing the film's fatalism, violence and nudity, and the first production of Playboy magazine owner Hugh Hefner's film company. Notwithstanding the extensive editing of the original text by Polanski and Kenneth Tynan, who at the time was the literary manager of London's National Theatre, the film is today regarded as one of the most cinematic interpretations of Shakespeare's works. One of TV's most recognizable characters, Peter Falk's crumpled and deceptively bumbling police lieutenant Columbo initially appeared as one of the three rotating feature-length segments of the weekly NBC Mystery Movie (with McCloud and McMillan & Wife). For the second season (1972-1973), a fourth show (Hec Ramsey) was added to the rotation and the umbrella title was changed to NBC Sunday Mystery Movie. In Dagger of the Mind, the lieutenant visits London to observe the latest techniques of the Scotland Yard, and while there investigates the murder of a wealthy theater impresario (Williams) by a husband-and-wife team of has-been actors (Basehart & Blackman) appearing in a production of Macbeth. Elements of the film's plot, its characters and bits of dialogue contain allusions to the play, and brief segments of Acts II & V are seen on stage during the dress rehearsal. An abridgment of Roman Polanski’s Macbeth (see above) from a series of six titles originally released as theatrical features by Columbia Pictures and later reedited for educational use to provide an introduction to the “[...] great themes of literature which are, in effect, an expression of the universal nature of man” (Films--A Catalog of Films for Schools, Colleges and Libraries, Learning Corp. of America, 1975, p. 44) (see also entry under The Taming of the Shrew). Orson Welles's commentary compares Shakespeare's treatment of power and corruption to that of other writers such as William Golding and Christopher Marlowe. (DVD - Phoenix Learning Group)

Episode from a series of half-hour introductions to U.S. broadcasts of thirteen BBC plays grouped under the title Classic Theatre--the Humanities in Drama. The Previews include scholars' comments and interviews with lead actors. Macbeth, the first entry in the series, introduced the U.S. broadcast of the 1970 BBC production of the play starring Eric Porter and Janet Suzman.

Educational short describing the play's historical background and its relationship to the reign of King James I. Includes dramatizations illustrating the King's interest in witchcraft and the 1605 plot to usurp his throne by blowing up the Houses of Parliament. Companion piece to Macbeth (see below).

An abridged version of the play made for educational use. The film ends with Macbeth going to battle as Birnam Wood moves towards Dunsinane. "It is an ambitious, well executed production. Settings, costumes, camera work, color, music, and lighting are all at a three or four star level" (Kenneth S. Rothwell & Annabelle Henkin Melzer, Shakespeare on Screen, p. 164). The Lincoln Center Theater Company’s Macbeth, which opened on Jan. 22, 1981 at the Vivian Beaumont Theatre, starred the 27-year-old Philip Anglim, fresh from his Broadway triumph in “The Elephant Man,” and was the first play staged by Sarah Caldwell, a well known conductor and opera director. Following largely negative reviews, the production closed after 61 performances. The recorded performance was originally broadcast on the ARTS (Alpha Repertory Television Service) channel, launched by ABC in April 1981 as the first full-time cable service devoted to the performing arts. Then unknown Kelsey Grammer (Frasier) appears as Lennox. (VHS)

A tale of marital breakup between two struggling actors, the film bears no relation to Shakespeare until the final 15 min, when Michel (Brasseur) is unexpectedly offered the role of Macbeth and his wife Josepha (Miou-Miou) returns to coach him through an all-night rehearsal. Fragments from several scenes are seen on stage during a performance. (VHS)

The screenplay preserves the original text in all the lines spoken by the characters. U.S. broadcast included an introduction by Robin Williams. "The graphic boldness of 'Macbeth's' animation mixes ferocity with fantasy: It's all 'secret, black and midnight' like the hags. The supernatural element - Banquo's ghost, the witches - have a freedom to enter the imagination in animation they rarely attain on stage. Based on the best-selling book series created by Francine Pascal, Sweet Valley High centers on the lives of teenage twins Elizabeth and Jessica Wakefield (played by real life twins Cynthia and Brittany Daniel), the former warm and friendly, the latter conceited and devious, and their friends in a fictitious town in southern California. In Critical Mess, an episode from the series’ first season, Jessica wants to make sure that her Lady Macbeth in the school production of the play lands her a part in a Hollywood movie being filmed in town. Her sister Elizabeth, however, writes a negative review of her performance for the school newspaper. On stage, Macbeth cuts himself on a dagger and Lady Macbeth, appearing in every scene, overacts and flirts with the audience. (DVD - on Sweet Valley High--The Complete First Season)

Conveying, according to its authors, "a fantasy world of constantly changing realities and dimensions" (Third Lows Productions website, as quoted in BUFVC Shakespeare database), this independently produced adaptation (shot on digital video) retains Shakespeare's text, albeit heavily cut, and moves the action to a modern-day urban setting. Director Bryan Enk has also been involved with two Off-Off-Broadway productions of the play, "Bitch Macbeth" (2001 & 2003) and "Macbeth Without Words" (2007).

The fifth broadcast of the first season of The Shakespeare Plays, Measure for Measure surprisingly, considering the relative obscurity of the original, proved to be one of the best-regarded entries in the series by critics and audiences alike.  As several scholars have pointed out, this can be partially explained by the fact that the play, with its melodramatic plot progressing through a succession of one-on-one confrontations, seems to be particularly suitable for television, even inviting comparisons to TV soap operas.  Also, it offered "a truly convincing demonstration of how effective Shakespeare could be on the small screen, with cameraman-turned-director Desmond Davis striking a perfect balance between intimacy and grandeur." (Michael Brooke, BFI Screenonline).  For more on the series, see entry under Julius Caesar.  (DVD - Ambrose Video)

The first English language big screen adaptation of The Merchant of Venice since the silent era was filmed on location in Venice and at the Delux studios in Luxembourg, on sets originally built for the film Secret Passage. Ian McKellen, initially slated to appear as Antonio, was replaced by Jeremy Irons when shooting delays caused conflicts with his schedule. Michael Radford's screenplay is a faithful adaptation of the original with only one significant addition, the opening skirmish between Jews and Christians with Antonio spitting at Shylock, preceded by introductory titles explaining how “intolerance of the Jews was a fact of 16th Century life.” (DVD)

An adaptation highly praised at the time of its release, both for its effective condensation of the story and its pictorial qualities, the latter coming to the fore in the outdoor scenes filmed in a chestnut forest in Flatbush, NY. The film was made during the summer of 1909, but held back for release on Christmas Day.

A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM (Warner Bros., 1935). Dir Max Reinhardt, William Dieterle. Adapt Charles Kenyon, Mary C. McCall, Jr. With Ian Hunter (Theseus), Verree Teasdale (Hippolyta), Hobart Cavanaugh (Philostrate), Dick Powell (Lysander), Ross Alexander (Demetrius), Olivia De Havilland
Finding refuge in Hollywood after leaving Hitler’s Germany in 1934, Max Reinhardt, who had already staged A Midsummer Night’s Dream multiple times in Europe, embarked on yet another production of the play, an open-air extravaganza at the Hollywood Bowl. With a nightly attendance of 15,000 spectators and highly praised by the critics, the show inevitably came to the attention of the resident film industry, and Warner Bros. hired the director to make a big-budget, star-studded screen version of Shakespeare’s classic. The end result received a mixed critical response, ranging from “Unquestionably the loveliest fantastic imagery the screen has yet produced” (Variety, Oct. 16, 1935) to “Poor old Shakespeare!” (The Sunday Times, as quoted in Rosenthal, p. 89), the latter representing the extremely negative opinion of the film in the British press. A Midsummer Night’s Dream premiered in a roadshow version (156 min, including the overture, intermission and exit music), and was edited down to 117 min. for general release. The high cost of the film undermined its decent performance at the box office, and Hollywood opted to stay away from future adaptations of Shakespeare’s work (MGM’s Romeo and Juliet was by then already in production). With the 1953 Julius Caesar as the sole exception, this attitude prevailed until the success of Kenneth Branagh’s Henry V (1989). (DVD)

While the title and the moral of the story are borrowed from Julius Caesar ("The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, But in ourselves, that we are underlings*), J. M. Barrie's 3-act play draws its inspiration primarily from A Midsummer Night's Dream: while attending a party at the country home of the mysterious Lob (Green), the guests are lured into a magic forest which materializes on Midsummer's Eve and grants its visitors a second chance at life. The TV adaptation of "Dear Brutus" for the Omnibus series was conceived as a celebration of the 50th anniversary of Helen Hayes's stage career.

The first full-length TV production of A Midsummer Night's Dream was a big-budget affair with a cast of twenty-two and a twenty-eight member ballet troupe. It was directed by Austrian-born Rudolph Cartier, who studied drama under Max Reinhardt and then worked as a scriptwriter for the German filmmaking concern UFA. After the Nazis came to power, Cartier left Germany, and following a brief stint in the U.S. settled in England where he became BBC's top TV director, active in both dramatic programming (the Quatermass series, Orwell's 1984) and opera (Salome, Carmen). A Midsummer Night's Dream won nothing but accolades at the time of its broadcast. James Thomas in The Daily Mirror (as quoted in NET files) commented that "the Cartier magic was at work again, building breadth and beauty out of the hysterical muddle which normally passes for spectacle on the small screen," and proving "to a worried BBC that Shakespeare needs only a master director to be box office, even in this medium of TV where so often the intelligence is underrated." In keeping with this sentiment, Philip Purser in The News Chronicle (ibid.) marveled how "Shakespeare always flows a little unexpectedly from the telly, as if the kitchen tap had suddenly started to gush a rather good claret."

The last feature of celebrated Czech puppet animator Jiří Trnka (1912-1969), A Mid-Summer Night's Dream was conceived as a wordless pantomime (barring the voice of the narrator), relying on movement, color and music to convey the magic of the original work. The English language version, prepared for the film's U.S. release, abandons the non-verbal approach by going back to the text of the play, adapted by Pulitzer Prize-winning author Howard Sackler (“The Great White Hope”). In addition to Richard Burton as narrator (the film begins with his reading of Shakespeare's Sonnet XV), other prominent Shakespeareans were hired to provide voices, among them Barbara Jefferd, of the Old Vic, Alec McCowen, of the Royal Shakespeare Company, and Barbara Leigh-Hunt, who appeared in the 1954 Broadway revival of A Midsummer Night's Dream. An episode of the animated TV series featuring the character of the near-sighted Mr. Magoo, the star of a successful series of theatrical cartoons in the 1950's. In Famous Adventures, which ran for only one season on NBC, Magoo (Backus) appears as narrator and protagonist of adaptations of literary classics such as "Don Quixote" and "Moby Dick." A Midsummer Night's Dream (with Magoo as Puck) closely follows the plot of the play, but for the most part stays away from the original text.

Filmed at an 18th century manor house near Stratford-upon-Avon, with the hand-held camera following the actors in close-up through the rain and mud of early fall, this realistic treatment of the play has a decidedly 1960's feel, not only in the characters' dress and hairstyle, but also in its reflection of the period's sexual politics.  The film was savaged by the critics upon its theatrical release in the U.K.: "frankly terrible on almost every conceivable level" (John Russell Taylor, The Times, Jan. 30, 1969), "ugly, charmless and almost devoid of either enchantment or humour" (Brenda Davies, Monthly Film Bulletin, Mar. 1969).  Even Diana Rigg, in an interview with The New York Times (Feb. 2, 1969), deemed the production "leaden-footed."  A Midsummer Night's Dream was never released theatrically in the U.S., and instead had its American premiere on network TV (CBS, Feb. 9, 1969), receiving much more favorable reviews: The Washington Post (Feb. 10, 1969) called it "a splendid TV venture" and Los Angeles Times (Feb. 11, 1969) "an extraordinary achievement." Two lectures by Professor Robert Greenberg of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music on Felix Mendelssohn and his "Incidental Music and Overture to A Midsummer Night's Dream."  In the first part, Greenberg provides a comprehensive plot synopsis of the play and profiles its main characters while listening to a recording of the Incidental Music.  The second half consists of a detailed musical analysis of the Overture.  The two presentations are lectures no. 2 & 3 of Early Romantic Era Program Music, itself part four of the educational video series Concert Masterworks.  Also released as an audio CD.  (DVD)

Film version of the 1994 stage production of the Royal Shakespeare Company which retains the original's theatrical devices and double casting, but adds a new character, the boy who dreams the play, signaling "a decision to play this piece as children's wonderland, to bedazzle the kiddies into loving the bard" (Mark Sinker, Sight & Sound, Jan. 1997). Never released theatrically in the U.S., the film made its American bow on home video in 2000. (DVD)

The epitome of Hollywood's new found love affair with Shakespeare, this screen adaptation of A Midsummer Night's Dream follows Kenneth Branagh's example by moving the story into a more modern setting, in this case from ancient Greece to Tuscany in the 1890's, dressing it in ravishing production design, and packing the cast with popular stars of the day, from veterans Pfeiffer and Kline to Ally McBeal's Calista Flockhart. The forest scenes were shot on the Cinecittà sound stages in Rome and with their decidedly theatrical feel are somewhat reminiscent of Max Reinhardt's 1935 version. "At the beginning I just had an image of this fat little Puck riding through the Tuscan countryside on the back of a turtle. The rest of the film sort of spun out from that" (Michael Hoffman, press kit). A graduate of Boise State University (BA in theater arts), Hoffman (Restoration, The Emperor's Club) was a Rhodes scholar at Oxford and one of the founders of the Idaho Shakespeare Festival. Notwithstanding the inevitable truncation of the original text, his key intervention was adding the character of Bottom's wife, a "shrew" who considers her husband a pompous fool. (DVD)

An episode from the fourth and final season of the Chicago-set series about a man by the name of Gary Hobson (Chandler) who receives a copy of the local newspaper a day ahead of time, giving him the opportunity to prevent tragedies in tomorrow's news. In The Play's the Thing, Hobson intervenes to prevent the incident reported as "Falling Light Paralyzes Actress," and ends up in the role of Oberon in an amateur stage production of A Midsummer Night's Dream. Includes scenes of rehearsals and the opening night performance, the latter ending with Puck's soliloquy delivered by John Vickery.

An episode from the second season of the critically acclaimed, award-winning sitcom which looks at the life of an ordinary American family from the perspective of its middle child, Malcolm (Muniz), a gifted adolescent with a genius-level IQ. In High School Play, Malcolm is selected for the role of Puck in a school production of A Midsummer Night's Dream, but his fluency in Shakespearean verse takes a back seat to the gossip he immerses himself in while socializing with older girls. Includes brief scenes of the rehearsals and the disastrous (for Malcolm) opening night.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING

2 videocassettes of 2 (Digital Betacam), 131 min, sd, b&w, 1/2 in. PBS Collection. VBS 2869-2870.

Staged by Franco Zeffirelli, the National Theatre production of Much Ado About Nothing premiered on February 16, 1965, at London's Old Vic, creating a controversy with its modern Sicilian setting and the characters' heavy Italian accents. The TV version, made under BBC's exclusive deal with the National Theatre, was taped on January 11, 1967. Far removed from a straightforward recording of the stage performance, it was a full-blown adaptation, with the cast spending three weeks in rehearsal and director Alan Cooke's cameras joining the action by moving around the set and engaging the actors in tight close-ups. The end result was exciting television, although Zeffirelli himself, upon seeing the preview, was "mighty miffed" (Variety, Feb. 15, 1967) and asked that his name be removed from the credits. The "heavy Italianate manner" (ibid.) of the stage version was retained, as were other entertaining bits such as the living statues and a rowdy town band. Real-life married couple Maggie Smith and Robert Stephens repeated their stage roles, while Derek Jacobi took over from Albert Finney as Don Pedro (Jacobi played the villain, Don John, in the NT production), and Michael Byrne replaced Ian McKellen as Claudio. Originally televised in the U.K. in two parts with a ten-minute intermission (in the U.S., the two segments were broadcast a week apart).

Much Ado About Nothing was the first play taped for producer Cedric Messina's ambitious series (for more on the latter, see entry under Julius Caesar).  The production starred Michael York as Benedick, Anthony Andrews as Claudio, Lee Richardson as Don John, and British sitcom star Penelope Keith as Beatrice.  Although edited and even publicized, the show was never broadcast and the series instead opened with Romeo and Juliet.  Eventually, the play was remade with a different cast and under the helm of veteran director Stuart Burge.  Taped in August 1984, it was broadcast as part of the series' 7th and final season, premiering in the U.S. three weeks before its U.K. bow.  (DVD - Ambrose Video)

“I want this to be a fairy tale - beautifully dressed and lovingly photographed - that can also be very frightening at times.  Like all good fairy tales, there's a strong dark undercurrent to the story.  It's also very, very fiery” (Kenneth Branagh, laserdisc liner notes).  Branagh's second filming of Shakespeare (see above for Henry V) features lush exteriors and a star-studded mix of American and British actors, trademarks of the director's (and Hollywood's) subsequent screen adaptations of the Bard.  The film's two novelties are the casting of a black actor in the role of Don Pedro and moving the action from Sicily (town of Messina) to rural Tuscany (14th century Villa Vignamaggio). (DVD)

Produced at the peak of the golden age of Danish cinema by the Nordisk company, which released its films in the U.S. under the Great Northern banner, Desdemona is an early example of transposing Shakespeare’s work into a modern setting by building a story around a performance of the original play. In this context, the “real life” characters are usually a reflection of the roles they interpret on stage, a formula effectively used in later works such as George Cukor’s A Double Life (see below) and Cole Porter’s Kiss Me Kate (see below under The Taming of the Shrew). A success with reviewers and audiences alike, this version of the play was the result of a partnership between the Italian production company Ambrosio and American distributor and producer George Kleine, who in 1913 struck box-office gold by importing and distributing the Italian epic Quo Vadis. The success of the latter encouraged Kleine to enter into a partnership with Ambrosio, set up his own company in Italy, the Photodrama Producing Co., and erect a large production facility in Grugliasco near Turin. The outbreak of World War I, however, brought his plans to a sudden end.

According to the film's German distributor, Othello was based on both the Shakespeare play and its source, the short story "Un Capitano Moro" by 16th century Italian writer Cinthio (full name Giovanni Battista Giraldi). Made during the heyday of German Expressionism, the film inevitably invites comparisons to the movement's other cinematic works (The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari burst onto the scene two years before), as well as the artistic theories and practices of stage director Max Reinhardt. Othello's U.S. release garnered mostly positive reviews, although both contemporary and modern sources complain about the large number of intertitles - "[...] personally, if I have to read 'Othello,' I had much rather do it at home" (Robert E. Sherwood, Life, Mar. 15, 1923). (DVD)

A secretary (Hopkins) to a theater critic (Matthews) alters a poor review of an actor's (Shaw) performance of Othello at the request of the actor's wife (Lawrence), who is also his co-star. After the secretary and the actor fall in love, the latter decides to strangle his wife on stage. Starting with its title (from Desdemona's speech in Act III), the film uses numerous references to the play in its exploration of a modern-day love triangle.

A cabaret artist (Wilson) who yearns to be a dramatic actor witnesses a gangland murder and is forced to leave town, but later returns when offered to play the lead in a local church production of Shakespeare's Othello. Featuring an all-black cast, the film was produced by Jack Goldberg, whose involvement with “race pictures” goes back to the late 1920's, and directed by Joseph Seiden, best known for a string of low-budget Yiddish melodramas. It also marked the final screen appearance of Frank Wilson, an established stage actor and playwright who made his film debut in The Emperor Jones (1933) alongside Paul Robeson. The songs are performed by Lucky Millinder and His Orchestra, the gospel quartet The Alphabetical Four, and the Juanita Hall Singers, the latter featured in the musical version of Desdemona's death scene in the film's finale. Ronald Colman won an Academy Award for his portrayal of Anthony John, a renowned actor who becomes completely absorbed in the character of Othello while starring in a stage production of the play. John's obsession leads him to commit murder and eventually suicide. The screenplay, which marked the first collaboration between the husband and wife team of Ruth Gordon and Garson Kanin, was originally written for Laurence Olivier. Walter Hampden, a well-known Shakespearean actor who had staged and played Othello on Broadway in 1925, worked on the film as "Advisor, Othello Sequences." (DVD)

Savaged at the time of its original release but now widely considered a masterpiece, Welles's screen adaptation eliminates large portions of Shakespeare's text while remaining true to the spirit of the play. The film, shot on location in Morocco and Italy, had a long and convoluted production history marked by numerous interruptions due to lack of funds and actors' commitments to other projects. Othello premiered at the 1952 Cannes festival, where it shared the top prize, but then had to wait three years before being picked up for U.S. distribution. In 1992, Castle Hill Productions released a restored version with a re-recorded soundtrack, including a new recording of the film's music score. For first-hand accounts of the filming, see Micheál MacLiammóir's "Put Money in Thy Purse—The Diary of the Film of Othello" (London: Methuen, 1952) and Filming Othello, Welles' own documentary made in 1978 for West German television. PHILCO TELEVISION PLAYHOUSE. OTHELLO (NBC, 9/6/1953). Dir Delbert Mann. Adapt Stephen DeBaun. With Torin Thatcher (Othello), Olive Deering (Desdemona), Walter Matthau (Iago), Gene Lyons (Cassio), Jack Manning (Roderigo), Basil Langton (Montano), Marion Seldes (Emilia).

This hour-long condensation of Othello opened the sixth season of the dramatic anthology series sponsored by Philco electronics. The title role was played by British actor Torin Thatcher, a graduate of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts who in the latter half of the 1920's, as a member of the Old Vic company, appeared on stage in more than a dozen Shakespeare plays (albeit never in Othello). As was often the case with early TV adaptations of Shakespeare, critics complained about the drastic cutting of the original text which, while preserving the plot, left behind "some fatalities, notably the principal characters" (Jack Gould, The New York Times, Sep. 9, 1953). The show's producer, Frederick Coe, described the process as follows: "Here we have a story which in the theatre usually takes at least two hours to perform. This means that great slices in the text have had to be made. Therefore, after a careful study of the text, we cut the play to the basic scenes of the play. We rearranged them to suit our studio and equipment, and we then composed enough dialogue and action to unite the scenes we wish to retain." (NBC press release, Aug. 28, 1953)

The third and final program on Othello presented as part of the second series of lectures on Shakespeare by Dr. Frank C. Baxter (for more on the series, see entry under Macbeth). In Othello--Concluded, "in his discussion of Acts IV and V, Dr. Baxter discusses the humor found in the play, poetry, use of songs, and the relations of the individual characters. He also considers the burden of 'honor' which forced Othello to act as he did." (NET files).

Anticipating Grigori Kozintsev’s Hamlet and King Lear (see above), which also used Boris Pasternak’s Russian translations of Shakespeare, Othello removes the original from its theatrical roots by relying on dramatic exteriors, strikingly composed shots, and an elaborate music score (by Aram Khachaturian) rather than the spoken word. The film was released in the U.S. and U.K. in an English dubbed version widely criticized for attempting the impossible task of synchronizing the English verse with the Russian actors’ lip movements. Sergei Yutkevich won the Best Director prize at the 1956 Cannes Film Festival. (VHS)

Orson Welles’s return to Steve Allen’s popular Sunday night variety show was prompted by many requests for a repeat visit following his earlier performance as Shylock. He then performs excerpts from two of Othello’s soliloquies from Acts III and V.

Production of Giuseppe Verdi’s opera made for Italian television, with Tullio Serafin conducting the orchestra and chorus of RAI Milan. Arrigo Boito’s libretto eliminates the play’s first act and starts with Othello’s arrival on Cyprus, but otherwise closely follows the original story. “They didn’t want subtlety in the early RAI productions aimed at the widest audience with pop song style close-ups. All the same, Del Monaco has rarely been more powerful and impressive” (Ken Wlaschin, Encyclopedia of Opera on Screen, p. 521). (DVD)

An adaptation of Othello set amidst the London jazz scene and tackling the racial politics of contemporary Britain, a theme that the producer/director team of Michael Relph and Basil Dearden were no strangers to (Pool of London, Sapphire). The title character of Shakespeare's play is assumed by black jazz pianist Aurelius Rex (Harris), whose marriage to a white singer (Stevens) is threatened by the scheming drummer Johnny Cousin (McGoohan). Disparaged at the time of its original release, the film has gained in stature over the years, in no small part due to Patrick McGoohan’s fine take on Iago and the on-screen appearances of a host of jazz giants, including Dave Brubeck, John Dankworth, Charles Mingus, and Tubby Hayes.

Film version of John Dexter's National Theatre production, which opened in London on April 21, 1964. Notwithstanding the widescreen format, the film is a straightforward, studio-bound record of the original, with Olivier, making his debut in the role, carrying over the full power and extravagance of his stage performance. Contemporary reviews in the U.S. were mostly superlative - one of the few dissenters, The New York Times' Bosley Crowther, was criticized for comparing Olivier's black-faced Othello to minstrel shows and the Amos 'n' Andy radio series. A low-budget production filmed between 1962 and 1966 but not screened publicly until 1980 (and never released commercially), Liz White's screen adaptation of Othello had its origins in her staging of the play in Martha's Vineyard (Shearer Summer Theater) and Harlem in 1960. White, who started her career in the 1930's on Broadway and in the WPA Federal Negro Theater, financed the film herself and cast family members (son & daughter-in-law) in the roles of Iago and Desdemona. In the lead, Yaphet Kotto, later a successful Hollywood actor, became the first African-American to portray Othello on screen (a distinction commonly attributed to Laurence Fishbourne - see below). The film had its premiere in 1980 at Howard University, Washington, D.C., and was subsequently shown at several festivals and repertory venues.

The third season of live broadcasts from New York's Metropolitan Opera opened with the revival of Franco Zeffirelli’s 1972 production of Verdi’s Otello. The telecast “[...] attempted to package for home consumption a music drama conceived on the grandest possible scale. It was a tight fit, for by its very nature television is better suited to providing subtitled translations of the Italian libretto than conveying a sense of the power this titanic work can achieve in a theater” (Lewis Segal, Los Angeles Times, Sep. 27, 1978). The orchestra was conducted by James Levine.

Episode from the first season of the TV series based on the 1980 motion picture of the same name set in a New York City performing arts high school. In The Strike, the students stage a musical version of Othello while the faculty is involved in a walkout. A rehearsal scene includes Othello and Desdemona's exchange from Act II, Scene IV, and the closing production number summarizes the play through song and dance. Lecture by George Walton Williams, Professor of English at Duke University, who, "against a background of character sketches of the main figures of the tragedy, [...] demonstrates how the imagery of the play allows us to observe the way in which Iago 'poisons' Othello's mind and brings him to kill Desdemona" (VHS liner notes). Part of a series of videotaped lectures on literature, including five on Shakespeare's works. (VHS)

OTHELLO (Dakota Films - Imminent Films/Rank, U.K., 1995). Released in the U.S. by Sony Pictures Entertainment. Dir & Adapt Oliver Parker. With Laurence Fishburne (Othello), Irène Jacob (Desdemona), Kenneth Branagh (Iago), Nathaniel Parker (Cassio), Anna Patrick (Emilia), Michael Maloney (Roderigo), Nicholas Farrell (Montano), Gabriele Ferzetti (Duke of Venice), Pierre Vaneck (Brabantio).

In the wake of Kenneth Branagh's success, first-time director Oliver Parker's Othello, similarly to Franco Zeffirelli's Hamlet five years earlier (see above), was an attempt to bring Shakespeare to the moviegoing masses by casting a well-known Hollywood actor in the title role, emphasizing the eroticism, and truncating the play to accommodate the multiplex-driven two-hour time slot. At the same time, Parker, an established stage and TV actor, mostly stays away from the visual fireworks and narrative twists common in latter-day screen adaptations of the Bard. Hopes for a commercial success, however, were left unfulfilled as the film didn't even come close to recuperating its $11 million production cost. In the lead, Laurence Fishburne emphasizes the physicality of the character and adopts a Caribbean accent not unlike Laurence Olivier in the 1965 film (see above). (DVD)

Othello transposed to a present-day American high school with the title character, Odin James (Phifer), as the school's star basketball player and only black student. Desdemona is Desi Brable (Stiles), Odin's white girlfriend, while jealous teammate Hugo Goulding (Hartnett), who is also the son of the coach (Sheen), stands in for Iago. Although the film bypasses Shakespeare's dialogue, the story and characters closely follow the play. The release of "O" was delayed by almost two years due to the original distributor's (Miramax) fears that the scenes of gun violence in a high-school setting will draw parallels to the Columbine massacre, which occurred while the film was in the editing stage. (DVD)

Hindi director Vishal Bhardwaj's follow-up to his adaptation of Macbeth (see above), Omkara transplants Othello to the lawless rural interior of present-day Uttar Pradesh, with the the title character (Devgan) as the head of a gang of outlaws controlled by a local politician (Shah). Iago is Langda Tyagi (Khan), Omkara's treacherous lieutenant, and Desdemona is Dolly Mishra (Kapoor), the daughter of a village lawyer who escapes an arranged marriage by eloping with the man she loves. The two lovers differ in both skin color and social class: Dolly is fair and a Brahmin by birth, while Omkara is a dark-skinned half-caste. The obligatory musical numbers are integrated into the plot by making Bianca (Basu) a nightclub singer. (DVD)

The final entry in the sixth season of The Shakespeare Plays is to date the only screen adaptation of one of the Bard’s lesser known works, the authorship of which is still debated. The production was directed by David Jones, Artistic Director of the Royal Shakespeare Company's Aldwych Theatre, who a year earlier helmed the big screen version of Harold Pinter's play "Betrayal." Broadcast in the U.S. six months prior to its first U.K. showing. For more on the series, see entry under Julius Caesar. (DVD - Ambrose Video)

RICHARD II

HALLMARK HALL OF FAME. KING RICHARD II (NBC, 1/24/1954). Dir George Schaefer. Adapt Maurice Evans. With Evans (King Richard II), Kent Smith (Bolingbroke), Sarah Churchill (The Queen), Frederic Worlock (John of Gaunt), Richard Purdy (Duke of York), Morton Da Costa (Aumerle).

2 videocassettes of 2 (Digital Betacam), 120 min, sd, b&w, 1/2 in. NBC Television Collection. VBQ 7358-7359.

Returning to television less than a year after Hamlet (see above), Maurice Evans recreated his greatest stage success with Hallmark's Richard II. The telecast begins with documentary footage of Queen Elizabeth II's coronation (June 2, 1953), which is followed by the play's opening scene of the banishment of Mowbray and Bolingbroke staged in a cathedral-like gothic interior, the first in a series of impressive sets designed for the show by Richard Sylbert and built in NBC's new Brooklyn studio (a major portion of the $175,000 production cost was spent on the 2,500 work hours needed for set construction). Echoing opinions of other early TV adaptations of Shakespeare, Richard II was criticized both in contemporary reviews and later assessments for its elaborate art direction ("too cluttered" was a common complaint), representing a prevalent view that physical spectacle and pageantry take the focus away from the characters and the spoken word, and are usually incompatible with the TV medium "where the proscenium arch is only twenty-one inches" (The New York Times, Jan. 25, 1954). On the other hand, the reviewers praised the clarity of the condensed script and especially Evans's performance, which Time magazine (Feb. 1, 1954) described as a brilliant portrayal of "a posturing, unsettled man, forever wavering between false triumph and real despair."

This episode from CBS's long-running (1953-1980) Sunday morning series was the first of four programs on four English monarchs as portrayed in Shakespeare's historical works. Includes several scenes from the play, beginning with Richard returning to England to confront rebellion (Act III, Scene II).

1 videocassette of 1 (Digital Betacam), ca. 75 min, sd, b&w, 1/2 in. VBT 1551. PBS Collection.

"The most conceptually ambitious Shakespeare project ever attempted for either film or television" (Michael Brooke, BFI Screenonline), An Age of Kings combined eight of Shakespeare's historical plays into a continuous narrative following the reigns of seven English monarchs from 1390 to 1485. The series premiered in the U.S. in January 1961 on commercial stations in New York and Washington. In October of the same year, it was distributed to non-commercial broadcasters by the National Educational Television and Radio Center through a sponsorship deal with the Humble Oil & Refining Company. For this purpose, a prologue was added to each program in which Dr. Frank C. Baxter of the University of Southern California outlined the plays' historical background. The series became American public television's first national success. The opening chapter, The Hollow Crown, covers the first three acts of Richard II. (DVD)

CAMERA THREE. SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II: THE KING AS ACTOR (WCBS-TV, in cooperation with the New York State Educational Department, 1/13/1974). Dir Merrill Brockway. Host Margaret Croyden. With Richard Pasco, Ian Richardson.

1 videocassette of 1 (VHS), 29 min, sd, color, ½ in. Creative Arts Television Archive Collection. VAE 0596.

An episode of CBS's long-running Sunday morning series in which theater critic and writer Margaret Croyden profiles the 1973 Royal Shakespeare Company's production of Richard II. Staged by John Barton, the production was hosted in New York in January 1974 by the Brooklyn Academy of Music. RSC members Richard Pasco and Ian Richardson perform segments of the play in the studio by alternating between the roles of Richard II and Bolingbroke (on stage, the two were cast in both roles on alternate nights).

The first of the plays of Shakespeare's two tetralogies to be taped for BBC's ambitious series (the eight plays were produced in historical order), Richard II was broadcast as the second (U.K.) and fourth (U.S.) entry of the first season. With David Giles, an experienced BBC director (The Forsyte Saga), at the helm, a distinguished cast, and effective use of studio sets, the production was praised as one of the opening season's highlights. For more on the series, see entry under Julius Caesar. (DVD - Ambrose Video)

A documentary profile of the Oregon Shakespeare Festival in Ashland focusing on the production of Richard II. Includes interviews with festival director Jerry Turner, actor James Edmondson (Richard II), and members of the company's technical crew who discuss set design and construction, costume fitting, stage management, and music and sound effects. Scenes from the play are seen briefly in rehearsal and more extensively in performance.

From the direct-to-video series of nine Shakespeare plays produced by the California-based Bard Productions. The title part is played by David Birney, an American actor with substantial experience in Shakespearean roles, although better known for his TV appearances (Bridget Loves Bernie, St. Elsewhere). The Bard series was often referred to as a counter-balance to BBC's The Shakespeare Plays as "North American students in particular will be attracted to the reassuring, 'down home,' voices and mannerisms of this cast, after so much exposure to British dialects in the BBC series" (Kenneth S. Rothwell & Annabelle Henkin Melzer, Shakespeare on Screen, p. 235). (DVD)

RICHARD THE SECOND (Daoine Maith - Milton Cablesystems Corp., 1983). Dir & Wrt John Farrell. An abridged version of the play with characters sporting modern-day military outfits and weapons. The independent low-budget production was filmed on 3/4" U-matic video in and around a deserted fort on Long Island in Boston Harbor, with principal actors recruited through a newspaper ad. The same team later produced a remake with a partially different cast which was released on DVD in 2001.

RICHARD III

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF KING RICHARD III (Richard III Film Co./State Rights, 1912).  Dir James Keane.  With Frederick Warde (Richard, Duke of Gloucester, afterwards Richard III), Robert Gomp (King Edward IV), Albert Gardner (Prince Edward of Lancaster), James Keane (Earl of Richmond), George Moss (Tressel).

The first feature-length film based on a work by William Shakespeare is also the oldest surviving complete U.S. feature.  At the time of its release, the English-born Frederick Warde, well known in the U.S. for his Shakespearean roles, had been retired from the stage for several years and was lecturing on the plays he had appeared in.  The film was considered lost until 1996, when a private collector donated a tinted nitrate print to the American Film Institute.  Following the restoration, AFI commissioned Ennio Morricone to compose a new score, included with the 2001 DVD release by Kino International.  (DVD)

Loosely based on Richard III and borrowing from all three parts ofHenry VI, albeit without any direct references to Shakespeare, this mixture of history, classic tragedy and horror was directed by Rowland V. Lee, whose Son of Frankenstein was released earlier that same year, and stars Basil Rathbone as Richard and Boris Karloff as his bald, club-footed executioner Mord.  The role of the Duke of Clarence was played by the 28-year-old Vincent Price, who would later take over the lead in Roger Corman's 1962 remake.  (DVD)

Laurence Olivier’s third stab at directing Shakespeare for the big screen features his celebrated personification of the title character originally created ten years earlier on the stage of London's Old Vic. With a false nose, jet black hair, hunched back and limp, and clipped, shrill delivery, Olivier's Richard was at the time praised as "one of the classic Shakespearean interpretations" (Monthly Film Bulletin, Jan. 1956). In the U.S., the film made history as the first motion picture to have its theatrical and TV premiere on the same day (Mar. 11, 1956). The three-hour broadcast, including commercial breaks and commentary by Shakespearean scholar Dr. Frank Baxter, was sponsored by General Motors, which covered a significant portion of the $500,000 NBC paid for the one-time show. The film itself was cut by three-and-a-half minutes to spare the TV viewers "such scenes as the decapitation of Hastings, the murder by suffocation of the child princess in the Tower and the climactic stabbing and death agonies of Richard III" (The New York Times, Mar. 12, 1956). LOOKING FOR RICHARD (Jam Productions/Fox Searchlight Pictures, 1996). Dir Al Pacino. Wrt Pacino, Frederic Kimball. With Pacino (Richard III), Harris Yulin (King Edward), Penelope Allen (Queen Elizabeth), Alec Baldwin (Clarence), Kevin Spacey (Buckingham), Estelle Parsons (Margaret), Winona Ryder (Lady Anne), Aidan Quinn (Richmond).
A combination of a screen adaptation of Richard III and a documentary on its making, Al Pacino's first film as director is rooted in his "love for Shakespeare and desire to communicate the writer's poetry to audiences of all stripes" (Variety, Feb. 5, 1996). The adaptation consists of key scenes from the play, while the documentary footage includes interviews with a number of Shakespearean luminaries (Vanessa Redgrave, Kenneth Branagh, Peter Brook, Kevin Kline, John Gielgud, James Earl Jones, Derek Jacobi), a visit to Stratford-upon-Avon and the Globe Theatre in London, location scouting by Pacino and his principal collaborator Frederic Kimball, scenes of rehearsals, and even opinions of ordinary New Yorkers. Irish director and playwright Conor McPherson's second feature stars Michael Caine as an aging actor appearing in a Nazi-themed stage production of Richard III who recruits his young protégé (Moran) to scam a small-time gangster (Gambon) out of a suitcase of money. While the plot and characters bear no relation to Shakespeare, the film includes several extracts from the performance of the play. North American distribution rights were controlled by Miramax, but following the mostly negative reviews in the U.K., the film was never released in the U.S.

Shot on location in Verona and originally released in Pathécolor, this was Italian star Francesca Bertini's third Shakespeare-based film following King Lear and The Merchant of Venice (both in 1910). As Judith Buchanan points out (Shakespeare on Film, p. 53-54), the two-reel Romeo and Juliet was "more carefully choreographed" and "more sensibly paced" than its single-reel Shakespearean predecessors by the same producer (see above for Othello).

Comedy short. A modernized burlesque of Shakespeare's tragedy with the cross-eyed comedian Ben Turpin and former Bathing Beauty Alice Day as the title characters. The film ends with a "rustic stage presentation of R and J" (Moving Picture World, Aug. 2, 1924) during which Romeo, in an attempt to scale a castle wall, nearly drowns in an improvised moat. "Ben Turpin is always funny but it is seldom that he is given a role that offers such a range for his peculiar humor" (Exhibitors Trade Review, Aug. 2, 1924).

A comedy short about a small-town Shakespeare Club mounting a production of Romeo and Juliet. In the dual role of Romeo and Juliet's father, portly comedian Walter Hiers creates havoc on the stage, even bringing down Juliet's (Thompson) balcony when he starts up the rope-ladder. According to Hiers, as quoted in the film's press sheet, "Old William Shakespeare himself shows that he had a fat man in mind for Romeo. Shakespeare didn't like skinny men. 'Let me have men about me that are fat! . . such men as sleep o' nights' he wrote in 'Julius Caesar.' Fat men, well-fed men, are happy men, and happy men make the best lovers."

With producer Irving G. Thalberg describing the project as "a cultural undertaking of importance" (Romeo and Juliet by William Shakespeare--A Motion Picture Edition, p. 279), MGM spared no cost in bringing Shakespeare's tragedy to the screen. The studio's research department spent two years gathering background material for the film, even dispatching a technical crew to Italy to photograph parts of the city of Verona, which were then reconstructed on MGM's backlot.  Cornell University professor William Strunk, Jr. was hired as a "Literary Consultant" to "represent the interests of the author, William Shakespeare, and see that no injustice was done to him" (ibid, p. 278), and the script did not include a single line of dialogue not written by the Bard.  While Norma Shearer (Thalberg's wife) was cast as Julia from the very beginning, among the actors considered for the part of Romeo were Robert Montgomery, Brian Aherne, Clark Gable, Robert Donat, Laurence Olivier, Franchot Tone and Robert Taylor.  The film's opulent production values did not translate into box-office or critical success and it won few admirers over the years.  Kenneth Rothwell calls it "a masterwork from antiquity: a bit archaic, a little rigid, slightly overdone, but, yes, still withal warm and good." (Kenneth S. Rothwell & Annabelle Henkin Melzer, Shakespeare on Screen, p. 249)  British screenwriter Paul Dehn, in his essay/lecture "The Filming of Shakespeare" (published in "Talking of Shakespeare," John Garrett, ed., p. 49-72), was particularly impressed by John Barrymore and Basil Rathbone ("the best Mercutio and the best Tybalt I ever saw"), with Barrymore being praised as "‘Ham’ possibly - but how exquisitely cured!" A parody starring popular Mexican comedian Cantinflas as a cab driver pretending to be a Shakespearean actor in order to help a heart-broken thespian win over the father of the woman he loves. Within this framework, a stage production of Romeo and Juliet becomes a film-within-the-film which closely follows the play and "resembles Cukor's 1936 film adaptation [see above] in many details of period costuming, production design, shot types, and even casting" (Douglas Lanier, Shakespeare's after Shakespeare, Vol. 1, p. 269). Fernando Previtali conducts the Radio Philharmonic Orchestra of Italy in a performance of Tchaikovsky's overture-fantasy "Romeo and Juliet." The piece, first performed in 1886, is one of four Tchaikovsky's works derived from Shakespeare (the other three are the symphonic poem "The Tempest" and two pieces on Hamlet).

NBC REPERTORY THEATRE. ROMEO AND JULIET (NBC, 5/15/1949). Dir Albert McCleery. With Kevin McCarthy (Romeo), Pat Breslin (Juliet), William Windom (Tybalt), Robert Gerring (Mercutio), Bob Bolger (Montague), William Post (Capulet), Tod Andrews (Benvolio), Paul Lipson (Friar Laurence).

Following close on the heels of NBC's Macbeth (5/1/1949), Romeo and Juliet introduced "a new conception in the staging of dramatic productions on television" (NBC press release, May 10, 1949) by having the performance space modeled on an arena theater, where the audience encircles the stage. The production was captured by four cameras, two looking down on the actors and two positioned at eye level. The New York Times reviewer Jack Gould was not impressed: "Certainly, the technique has real possibilities in television, but as used by NBC it only served to complicate the staging problem and to make for a static sixty minutes. The movement of both the cameras and the players was very poorly planned, much of the first half of the show having the cameras focused on the backs of the actors." (May 22, 1949)

1 reel of 1, 26 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. Copyright Collection. FBA 2982.

Conrad Nagel's acting career spanned almost five decades, from star of the silent screen to TV journeyman, with a long stint in B-movies in between. Filmed in Italy for Nagel's short-lived syndicated anthology series, Giulietta and Romeo places Shakespeare's lovers into a modern setting of a small Italian village, with the "Capellettis" and "Montecchis," the local bread and wine makers respectively, squabbling over allegations of food poisoning. Two of the Italian crew members, composer Angelo Francesco Lavagnino and editor Renzo Lucidi, also worked on Orson Welles's Othello (see above).

The second of three programs on Romeo and Juliet presented as part of the first series of lectures on Shakespeare by Dr. Frank C. Baxter (for more on the series, see entry under Macbeth). In Romeo and Juliet--Continued, which covers Acts II and III of the play, "Dr. Baxter asks his audience to read those two acts and to note how and where bad luck begins to wreck the chances of Romeo and Juliet for a happy life together. Discussion also covers Shakespeare's lyrical salute to the dawn in scene 5 of Act III." (NET files).

KRAFT TELEVISION THEATRE. ROMEO AND JULIET (NBC, 6/9/1954). Dir Richard Dunlap. With Susan Strasberg (Juliet), Liam Sullivan (Romeo), Carroll McComas (Nurse), Noel Leslie (Friar Laurence), Despite promoting itself as a showcase for established Broadway talent, the Kraft sponsored series did not shy away from hiring unknowns for some rather meaty parts. 16-year-old Susan Strasberg starred as Juliet a year before her Broadway breakthrough in "The Diary of Anne Frank," while Liam Sullivan had only a few TV acting credits to his name when he tackled the role of Romeo. The hour-long digest of the play (cheese commercials included) was not treated kindly by Variety (June 16, 1954), which likened the romance to "a juve flirtation in an icecream parlor", and accused Sullivan of paying "more attention to showcasing his dentures than making the part of Romeo believable."

The last in a series of broadcasts on Romeo and Juliet, itself part of an educational series of readings of classic literary works produced by the Iowa State University-owned WOI-TV. Millard R. Kratochvil of the University's Dept. of English and Speech introduces the play's finale, after which actors, filmed in close-up, read portions of the text.

ROMEO AND JULIET (Universalcine - Verona Productions, Italy/U.K., 1954).  Released in the U.S. by United Artists.  Dir & Adapt Renato Castellani.  With Laurence Harvey (Romeo), Susan Shentall (Juliet), Flora Robson (The Nurse), Mervyn Johns (Friar Laurence), Bill Travers (Benvolio), Enzo Fiermonte (Tybalt), Sebastian Cabot (Capulet).

Described as an "interesting and ambitious, if not wholly successful, experiment" (Monthly Film Bulletin, Oct. 1954), this version of the tragic love story combines Shakespeare with elements of Italian neorealism by emphasizing the naturalistic visuals over the spoken word. The project took three years to complete, with the bulk of the seven-month shoot spent on various locations chosen for their authentic Renaissance architecture, from Verona and Venice to the small Tuscan town of San Quirico d'Orcia. With British cinematographer Robert Krasker (Olivier's Henry V, The Third Man) behind the camera, and surrealist painter Leonor Fini responsible for the costumes, the film is one of the most visually sumptuous screen adaptations of the Bard's works. While the role of Romeo went to Laurence Harvey, at the time a rising star of the Royal Shakespeare Company, Juliet was played by a 19-year-old secretarial college student from Derbyshire, England, who never appeared in another film. In keeping with the latter choice, director Castellani also sprinkled the supporting cast with non-professionals, including novelist Elio Vittorini (appearing under the alias of Giovanni Rota) in the role of the Prince of Verona, and a Veronese
The film won the top prize at the 1954 Venice Film Festival. (VHS)

The first filming of Sergei Prokofiev's ballet based on Shakespeare's play was adapted from the stage production choreographed by Leonid Lavrovsky, which opened in Leningrad in 1940 with Galina Ulanova and Konstantin Sergeyev in the title roles. "The motion picture as a medium for conveying the felicities of formal ballet may have some obvious shortcomings. But after seeing the brilliance with which it has been used by the Russian directors […] and the great dance artists of the Bolshoi Theatre in presenting The Ballet of Romeo and Juliet, one may consider reassessing the prospects of the ballet film.” (Bosley Crowther, The New York Times, Apr 3, 1956). I LOVE LUCY. LUCY MEETS ORSON WELLES (Desilu Productions/CBS, 10/15/1956). Dir James V. Kern. With Lucille Ball, Desi Arnaz, Vivian Vance, William Frawley, Orson Welles, Ellen Corby.

1 reel of 1, 28 min, sd, b&w, 16mm. Copyright Collection. FCA 0616.

Episode from the 6th season of the popular sitcom series centered on the New York City couple Lucy Ricardo (Ball) and her Cuban-born bandleader husband Ricky (Arnaz). When recruited to appear with Orson Welles at a benefit performance at Ricky's club, Lucy mistakenly assumes that she will play Juliet opposite Welles's Romeo. It turns out, however, that she is to assist the actor in a levitation magic act. Includes Welles’s rendition of Romeo’s soliloquy from Act V, Scene III (“Eyes, look your last!...”). (DVD - on I Love Lucy--The Complete Sixth Season)

ROMEO, WHEREFORE ART THOU? (UPA Pictures, 1957).

1 reel of 1, 3 min, sd, color, 16mm. Copyright Collection. FAB 6041.

A cartoon originally made for and broadcast as part of The Gerald McBoing-Boing Show, a short-lived animated TV series which premiered on CBS in December 1956 and lasted only three months. Each half-hour episode consisted of several shorts showcasing the talents of UPA Pictures, creators of the popular Mr. Magoo series (see entry under A Midsummer Night's Dream). In this spoof of the balcony scene from Romeo and Juliet, a heavy-set Romeo, accompanied by a sidekick, Cedric, unsuccessfully tries to propel himself up the castle wall to join the pining Juliet. The accompanying song was composed by Mel Leven.

Feature film adaptation of Peter Ustinov's play which transposes Shakespeare's characters into a Cold War setting: under pressure from the two superpowers over his deciding U.N. vote, the president (Ustinov) of Europe's smallest country tries to remain neutral by orchestrating a romance between the offspring of the Russian and American ambassadors. The play, a "delicious piece of diplomatic fooling" (The Times, May 18, 1956), premiered in Great Britain in 1956 and then moved to Broadway in October 1957, marking Peter Ustinov's American stage debut. Turning it into a motion picture took several years to accomplish, primarily due to Ustinov's desire to maintain complete creative control over the project. The production was based in Italy, in the Cinecittà studios in Rome and the Umbrian village of Todi, the latter doubling for the capital of mythical Concordia. In the title roles, teen idol Sandra Dee was paired with John Gavin, whose subsequent political career included the appointment as U.S. ambassador to Mexico during the Reagan era. The sets were designed by the prolific Alexandre Trauner (Orson Welles's Othello - see above), while Robert Krasker, the cinematographer on Renato Castellani's Romeo and Juliet (see above), handled the Technicolor rendering of the Italian locations.

Film version of the ground-breaking Broadway musical staged and choreographed by Jerome Robbins and based on Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet. The setting is the impoverished upper West Side of Manhattan and the feuding families are replaced by rival teenage street gangs, the "Sharks" and the "Jets." The ethnic background of the two groups (members of the Jets are white, the Sharks are Puerto Rican) plays an important role in the conflict, especially after Tony (Beymer), a former member of the Jets, falls in love with Maria (Wood), the sister of the Sharks' leader (Chakiris). The film was a critical success in its own right (10 Academy Awards), and the box-office returns far surpassed its hefty (at the time) production cost of $6 million. (DVD)

Feature film based on the 1962 stage musical "La historia de los Tarantos" and often referred to as the Spanish West Side Story. Set in Barcelona among two feuding Gypsy families, Los Tarantos was filmed on location (in parts of the city which have since largely been demolished), and in a naturalistic style very much removed from its American counterpart. The numerous flamenco sequences feature some of the best known practitioners of the art, including the legendary Carmen Amaya (as Rafael/Romeo's mother) who died shortly after the film was finished. In a twist on the end of Romeo and Juliet, the two lovers (Martín, Lezana) do not commit suicide but are instead killed by Curro (Manuel Martín), a character corresponding to Shakespeare's Count Paris, here presented as a thug to whom Juana/Juliet has been promised by her father (Prieto). U.S. release version is 10 min. shorter than the original Spanish release. (DVD)

Segment from Danny Kaye's variety show which parodies Romeo and Juliet in a story of star-crossed lovers from feuding Gypsy families of Shishkebabs and Baklavas. The piece is performed by the "Kinderspiel Light Opera Company" and the setting is a "Gypsy district in downtown Romania."

An independently made feature filmed in Italy from an original story by producer Ron Gorton about a business executive (Connors) who concocts a tax evasion scheme involving the financing of a TV pilot based on Romeo and Juliet, a project he believes to be doomed to failure. To that end, he hires an eccentric disciple of Stanislawski (Tamiroff) to direct the film and casts a washed out French actor (Chevalier) and a bodacious but decidedly untalented starlet (Mansfield) for the lead roles. Much to everyone's surprise, the film wins the top prize at the Venice Film Festival. Includes quotes from King Lear, Macbeth and A Midsummer Night's Dream. (VHS)

The Royal Ballet's celebrated production of Sergei Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet," choreographed by Kenneth MacMillan and starring Margot Fonteyn and Rudolf Nureyev, had its premiere on February 9, 1965, at the Royal Opera House in London. The film version employed the same cast, costumes and sets and did not involve any restaging. Instead, the original production was recreated in a film studio and recorded with several cameras operating simultaneously. The Orchestra of the Royal Opera House was conducted by John Lanchbery. Commercially the most successful Shakespeare film to date had its origins in Franco Zeffirelli's very first staging of Shakespeare, the 1960 production of Romeo and Juliet at the Old Vic. Following his highly praised screen adaptation of The Taming of the Shrew (see below), the Italian director returned to Romeo believing that the play could be made attractive to the rebellious youth of the late 1960's. To that end, he hired two unknowns for the title roles, the 17-year-old Leonard Whiting and 15-year-old Olivia Hussey, and, following Renato Castellani's example (see above), shot the film on various locations in Italy, although not in Verona itself as the city by then looked too modern. Romeo and Juliet divided the critics, with the Bard purists pointing out the significant abridgement of Shakespeare's text and the poor delivery of the verses by the two leads, and the film reviewers praising the impressive visuals and Zeffirelli's flamboyant direction. The leads' age and good looks certainly resonated with contemporary audiences, and combined with a strong supporting cast and the lavish production design, cinematography and Nino Rota's sensual music, helped propel the world-wide gross to an unprecedented $48 million. Laurence Olivier, who delivers the Prologue, also provides the dubbing voice for Antonio Pierfederici (Lord Montague). (DVD)

Episode from the General Electric-sponsored performing arts series showcasing ballets, operas and concerts originally produced for French television. In the first segment, Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" is performed by the orchestra of the French national broadcasting company (ORTF) under the leadership of Edward Lindenberg. The episode is rounded off with Claudio Monteverdi's ballet "The Combat of Tancred and Clorinde."

An educational TV series for children ages 2 to 9, The New Zoo Revue used words and music to deal with general subjects such as love, understanding, responsibility, and fairness. It featured two parental figures, Doug (Momary) and Emmy Jo (Peden), and three human-sized animal characters, Freddie the Frog (Inone), Henrietta the Hippo (Thomas), and Charlie the Owl (Baird). In this episode, the group stages the balcony scene from Romeo and Juliet to help children understand Shakespeare. Doug is Romeo, Emmy Jo is Juliet, Henrietta plays the Nurse, Charlie is the director, and Freddie is in charge of sound effects. Also includes brief references to several other plays.

Episode from a six-part series praised for its attempt to break with the rigid format of presenting performances of classical music on television. The Kansas City Philharmonic led by conductor Jorge Mester plays Tchaikovsky's overture-fantasy in the Cowtown Ballroom, before an audience of young people seated informally around the cavernous venue. "Here, the focus broadens to include the listeners, whose faces become a reflecting surface for the dramatic conflicts of the tone poem, and who themselves might well be latter-day embodiments of Shakespeare's universal protagonists" (Alan M. Kriegsman, The Washington Post, June 1, 1975). Interspersed with quotations from the play.

A companion piece to Romeo and Juliet (see above), this educational short intercuts scenes from the play with location shots of Italy to illustrate the latter's romantic appeal to Elizabethan England.  Ends with a fictional encounter between a young Englishman recently returned from the Continent and a disapproving Puritan.

REINCARNATION OF SERENA (Gourmet Video Corp., 1979).  Dir Roy Karch.  With Serena (Juliet), Rodney (Romeo), Maria Tortuga, William Margold, Tiffany Clark.
The first direct-to-video adult movie, Reincarnation of Serena consist of two narratively unconnected 30 min. segments, Romeo & Juliet and The First Convertible. The former was shot on a single studio set, in Elizabethan costume and with actors employing faux-Shakespearean language. In addition to the two lovers, other characters from the play involved in the proceedings are Juliet's Nurse, Count Paris, and Friar Laurence. (DVD)

A modernized version of the play produced by Brazilian TV network Globo and set in Ouro Preto, a historical mining town in the Brazilian state of Minas Gerais famous for its Baroque architecture. According to director Paulo Afonso Grisolli, "We imagined a Brazilian Verona and came up with Ouro Preto. Taking Ouro Preto as a starting point, we began discussing the possibility of having a updated, Brazilian version of Romeo and Juliet where Ouro Preto would not be a mere backdrop but also part of the theme." (press kit) The title characters are college students whose love is prohibited due to the enmity between their two families, with added tension generated by the conflict between the local mining and pharmaceutical schools as well as two rival fraternity houses. Never broadcast in the U.S.

THE TRAGEDY OF ROMEO AND JULIET (Bard Productions, 1982). Dir William Woodman. With Alex Hyde-White (Romeo), Blanche Baker (Juliet), Esther Rolle (Nurse), Alvah Stanley (Friar Laurence), Dan Hamilton (Mercutio), Fredric Lehne (Benvolio), Norman Snow (Tybalt).

From the direct-to-video series of nine Shakespeare plays produced in the Elizabethan style on a replica of the Globe Theatre stage. As with other entries in the series, the leads are played by actors primarily known for their U.S. television work. "Blanche Baker's Juliet is a misfortune generally. She speaks slowly, with little inflection, as if someone had wound her up," while "Alex Hyde-White's Romeo is more expressive and more energetic" and "his swordfights [...] are acrobatic, all over the stage, with extraordinary timing." The next-to-last episode from the fifth season of the long-running sitcom (1978-1986) about two orphaned African-American boys, Arnold and Willis Jackson (Coleman, Bridges), who are adopted by their late mother's employer, rich white widower Philip Drummond (Bain). When his 6th grade class is assigned to prepare highlights from Romeo and Juliet for a school play, Arnold is tricked into taking on the lead opposite his classmate Lisa (Swasey). No love is shared between the two, however, which creates problems during the rehearsals. On opening night, Lisa steps onto the balcony stricken with stage fright and it is up to Arnold to save the day by delivering both Romeo's and Juliet's lines.

ROMEO AND JULIET (ITC Entertainment - RAI - Teatro alla Scala, U.K./Italy, 1983). Dir Rudolf Nureyev. With Nureyev (Romeo), Carla Fracci (Juliet), Margot Fonteyn (Lady Capulet), Bruno Telloli (Capulet), Tiziano Mietto (Tybalt), Bruno Vescovo (Mercutio), Angelo Moretto (Benvolio).

Rudolf Nureyev's choreography for Prokofiev's ballet, which had its premiere in London in 1977, was staged at La Scala in Milan in 1980. The production was taped in 1982 at Milan's spacious Palazzo dello Sport under the helm of veteran BBC producer Patricia Foy and with the score recorded by La Scala Orchestra conducted by Michel Sasson. Nureyev's adaptation of Shakespeare's tragedy was called "bizarre" (Lewis Segal, Los Angeles Times, Sep. 14, 1986) and his choreography "self-serving" (Robin Young, The Times, Dec. 17, 1983) and "quirky and difficult" (Anna Kisselgoff, The New York Times, July 14, 1981): "This is a Verona filled with lust and violence. It is a bawdy vision, and some of Mr. Nureyev's conceits are daring, others just crude. To have Juliet's nurse necking with a servant while Juliet makes her entrance, underscores Juliet's innocence and her own future awakening. To have Mr. Nureyev toss away a jacket after he has smelled its armpit is un-Shakespearean" (Anna Kisselgoff, ibid.) (VHS)

ROMEO & JULIET ON ICE (Indian Road Productions, in association with Smith-Hemion Productions/CBS, 11/25/1983). Dir Rob Iscove. With Dorothy Hamill (Juliet), Brian Pockar (Romeo), Toller Cranston (Tybalt), Michael Shinneman (Mercutio), Richard O'Neill (Friar Laurence).

A ballet on ice choreographed by Rob Iscove and set to Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet," this Peabody and Emmy award-winning TV special was taped in Canada and broadcast as part of The CBS Festival of Lively Arts for Young People. The ballet is bookended by figure skater and Olympic gold medalist Dorothy Hamill reading the story of Romeo and Juliet to a group of children. Hamilton also provides the off-screen commentary which explains the characters' motivations and bridges the gaps in the significantly truncated narrative.

An independent feature modeled on West Side Story and its source, Romeo and Juliet. The setting is a gang war between New York's Chinatown and Little Italy, and the interracial lovers are a Chinese girl (Chang) and an Italian teenager (Panebianco). Although China Girl routinely appears on listings of screen versions of Shakespeare's play, director Abel Ferrara has distanced the film from its two famous predecessors: "The Chinese and Italian situation is much different than Verona, or the Sharks and the Jets. China Girl is Little Italy 1987, so once we set it there, it's a new story." (interview by John Andrew Gallagher in "Film Directors on Directing," p. 51). (VHS)

A sleeper hit which launched the careers of its two leads and sparked a revival of teen romances as a viable Bollywood genre. Sometimes translated as "From Judgment Day to Judgment Day," the film mirrors Romeo and Juliet through its story of ill-fated lovers Raj (Khan) and Rashmi (Chawla) trapped in a vicious feud between their respective families. Following Romeo's example, Raj eventually kills himself to join his lover in death. (DVD)

The Family Channel sitcom Big Brother Jake starred fitness industry guru Jake Steinfeld as the head of an interracial foster home in Brooklyn, NY. In this episode from the show's second season, Jake takes on the task of directing a community theater production of Romeo and Juliet, only to be inundated with problems ranging from an inefficient Amish set builder to a Juliet (Narvaez) unhappy with his choice of Romeo (Imperioli). Many of the comedy lines refer to elements of the play and two rehearsal scenes (in Jake's living room) feature original text from Act I, Scene V and Act II, Scene II.

Episode from the third season of the long-running (1989-1998) sitcom centering on a middle-class African-American family living in Chicago. The eldest daughter, Laura (Williams), is cast as Juliet in a school production of the play opposite the handsome Daniel (Robinson). When the latter lands in the hospital with appendicitis, the role of Romeo is taken over by the family's goofy neighbor, Steve Urkel (White), whose excitement over being kissed by Laura/Juliet eventually brings the opening night's performance to an abrupt end. The original text from Act II, Scene II is also heard in the audition scene.

Episode from the first season of the Canadian TV series set (and filmed) in post-Apartheid South Africa and starring Catherine Bach as a widowed businesswoman running the African branch of her father-in-law's (Mitchum) Toronto-based corporation. The series primarily focuses on the adventures of her teenage son Rory (James) and his best friend Jam (Brown), who is black. In Romeo and Jambele, a reading of Romeo and Juliet in Rory's high-school class serves as an introduction to the story of a forbidden love between Jam and Juba (Nongogo), whose families are embroiled in a centuries-old feud.

Part of a series of animated adaptations of Shakespeare's plays commissioned for the Welsh TV channel S4C and made by Russian animators in Moscow in a variety of techniques, including cel animation in Romeo and Juliet, Macbeth and A Midsummer Night's Dream (see above). The production of Romeo and Juliet was marked by disagreements between the British producers and Russian filmmakers over the depiction of the love scenes: "While nudity was permissible - even requisite - nipples were not, and a compromise was apparently achieved only with difficulty. 'The BBC [sic] has special demands. Not too explicit, but not too abstract,' commented Efim Gamburg, the Russian director." A documentary about a young couple, a Serbian man and a Muslim woman, who were shot down by snipers and died in each others arms while trying to escape from war-torn Sarajevo in 1993. The story was first reported in a dispatch from the besieged city by the late Reuters war correspondent Kurt Schork, and the pair came to be referred to by the international media as Sarajevo's "Romeo and Juliet." While direct references to Shakespeare are confined to the title, the film "ironically puts a real face on several of the play's issues: the senselessness of the feud, the youth of the victims and their determination to be together no matter what the consequences, the near opportunity for a happy outcome, the survivors' inability to declare a truce as those on both sides issue threats." Episode from the 2nd season of the hit sitcom about a young Jewish woman from Queens, Fran Fine (Drescher), who is hired as a nanny by a rich divorced Englishman (Shaughnessy) with three children (Tom, Salisbury, Zima). In A Star Is Unborn, Fran is recruited to play Juliet unaware that the director wants the production to fail so that he can get a tax write-off. The balcony scene and the lovers' death scene are seen in rehearsal (the latter on stage and in costume), and the production ends by "following Romeo and Juliet to heaven." Adapted from the Japanese TV series Denkō Chōjīn Gridman (1993/94), SuperHuman Samurai Syber-Squad follows the adventures of four high-school students (Lawrence, Slaten, Castro, Florence) with the power to enter the digital realm of computer games, where they fight monster viruses capable of impacting the real world. In this episode from the show's first season, Squad member Tanker (Castro) is cast as Romeo in a school production of Shakespeare’s play. While he frets over wearing tights and kissing his best friend's girlfriend (Betcher) in the role of Juliet, the Squad's arch-enemy (Beaudin) unleashes a virus which infiltrates the school's electrical grid, threatening to overload the stage lights and fry the actors. The play's original text is heard primarily in the rehearsal scene of the lovers' first meeting from Act I, Scene V.

Episode from the fifth season of the popular, award-winning sitcom based on the stand-up comedy of Tim Allen, who stars as Tim Taylor, the host of a home improvement TV show and head of the family which includes his wife (Richardson) and their three sons (Bryan, Thomas, Smith). After his drama teacher goes into labor, Randy (Thomas), cast as Romeo in his school's production of the play, recruits the family's neighbor, Mr. Wilson (Hindman), to take over as director. Mr. Wilson takes things too seriously, however, and eventually clashes with Tim over the latter's stage set made from aluminum siding. Fragments from Act I, Scene V and Act II, Scene II are seen in rehearsal, and the opening night ends with Juliet (Bundy) being trapped on a malfunctioning hydraulic tombstone. This "aggressively modern, assertively trendy" (Variety, Oct. 28, 1996) big screen adaptation places Shakespeare's verse into a stylized urban setting (Miami-like, albeit shot largely in Mexico City), and re-imagines the play as a frantic and violent gangster picture. The onslaught of rapid-fire editing, loud action scenes and rock music made the film a hit with younger audiences, securing box-office returns second only (for a Shakespeare film) to Zeffirelli's 1968 version (see above). A feature-length, direct-to-video version of “Snow White” from a series of screen adaptations of the Brothers Grimm fairy tales by Virginia-based filmmaker Tom Davenport. The action is set in rural Virginia in ca. 1915 and the evil queen is a retired star of the stage (O'Connell), threatened by the good looks and acting aspirations of her 15-year-old step-daughter Willa (Stark). The seven dwarfs are replaced by a three-member traveling medicine show (Neville-Andrews, King, Ross) and the prince is an itinerant moving picture man (Elkes). Fragments from Romeo and Juliet are recited throughout the film by several characters, and in a spoof of the balcony scene, the medicine show’s "Chief Tonka" (King) plays Juliet for laughs to Willa's straight Romeo. The film ends with a quote from The Tempest. Among the cast are seasoned Shakespeareans Caitlin O'Connell, Floyd King and John Neville-Andrews, all three recruited from Washington D.C.’s Shakespeare Theatre Company, while Becky Stark went on to a successful musical career as the vocalist for the contemporary band Lavender Diamond. Shown on PBS in late 1999. (DVD)

In London in 1593, Will Shakespeare (Fiennes), a struggling actor and playwright, falls in love with a beautiful young woman, Viola De Lesseps (Paltrow), who is betrothed to the smug Lord Wessex (Firth). Inspired by the illicit love affair, Shakespeare overcomes a severe case of writer's block and pens Romeo and Juliet. The film's plot and dialogue borrow from several of the plays (e.g. Twelfth Night is echoed when Viola auditions for Romeo and Juliet and wins the author's confidence disguised as a boy), and playfully reference a number of real-life characters and historical details related to both the Bard himself and Elizabethan theater and culture in general. A recording of a performance by the Yellowstone Ballet Company of a ballet written and choreographed by Kathleen Rakela based on Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet. The setting is mid-19th century Montana and the title characters are a white soldier and a Native American girl, the daughter of the Chief of the Blackfoot tribe. The music ranges from Rachmaninov (Symphony No. 2) and Wagner (Tristan and Isolde) to modern composers Peter Kater and Bruce Kurnow.

Another modernized variation on Romeo and Juliet which applies a thin veneer of Shakespeare to a simple, action-packed narrative, in this case about a turf war between Chinese and African-American gangs in Oakland, California. The star-crossed lovers are Han Sing (Li), on a mission to avenge his brother's murder, and Trish O'Day (Aaliyah), the daughter of the rival gang's leader (Lindo). (DVD)

An episode from the second season of the popular TV series which centers on the lives of single mother Lorelai Gilmore (Graham) and her daughter Rory (Bledel) in a closely-knit small-town community in Connecticut. Rory's prep school literary class is told to split into five groups, each of which will interpret and stage a different act of Romeo and Juliet. Rory's group, tasked with the play's finale, opts for the classic approach, while glimpses of two other acts include a caveman version of Act II and Act III being interpreted by businessmen with cell phones. The original text is heard only in brief rehearsal and performance scenes of Romeo's death. (DVD - on Gilmore Girls--The Complete Second Season)

Episode from the short-lived TV sitcom (one season, 22 episodes) about the life of sixteen-year-old Molly Stage (Neis) and her eccentric family, including her frugal mother (Sweeney), her optometrist father (Willard), her four siblings and her grandparents. In Romeo and Juliet, Molly is forbidden to date the son (Vickaryous) of her father’s bitter rival, successful eye surgeon Chaz Montague (Flaherty). Soundtrack includes music from Franco Zeffirelli's 1968 feature (see above).

D. W. Griffith’s only adaptation of Shakespeare (not counting his supervisory role on the 1916 feature-length Macbeth) is a knockabout farce with Florence Lawrence's Kate being tamed by an unidentified Petruchio (sometimes misidentified as actor Arthur Johnson). The action takes place on four different studio sets (including a kitchen), without much effort to convey the ambiance of the original, and ends with an incongruous pastoral exterior shot. Mack Sennett appears as one of Petruchio’s servants. (DVD - on Kino Video’s Othello)

A comedy short with an all-black cast, including real-life married couple Edward Thompson and Evelyn Preer, this spinoff of The Taming of the Shrew was adapted from a story by Octavus Roy Cohen, author of the long-running series of short stories featuring African-American private eye Florian Slappey originally published in The Saturday Evening Post. The detective (Olden) is a secondary character in the film in which a henpecked husband (Thompson) tries to tame his wife (Preer) by threatening divorce, claiming not to like her cooking, and arranging a date with another woman (Hyson). The first Shakespeare talkie was produced by two superstars of the silent era who both found the transition to sound to be a career-ending experience. Pickford and Fairbanks never worked together before, and the production, somewhat mirroring the state of their marriage, was plagued by a host of problems - Pickford complained that "Fairbanks read Shakespeare from a blackboard" (quoted in "Pickford–The Woman Who Made Hollywood," Eileen Whitfield, p. 268) and expressed annoyance with his on-set pranks. The film was simultaneously released in both sound and silent versions. As Pickford's second talking feature, it did well at the box office, nearly doubling its negative cost. In the mid-1960's, Matty Kemp, then director of the Pickford Company, decided to reissue the film to coincide with Franco Zeffirelli's screen adaptation of the play (see below). To that end, the original was shortened by five minutes and a new music track and sound effects were added. The reissue opened in November 1966, preceding Zeffirelli's film by five months. (DVD)

An early sound variety revue showcasing the stars of British music hall. One of the running gags involves actor Donald Calthrop being continuously thwarted in his efforts to perform Shakespeare until he finally gets a chance to appear as Petruchio in The Taming of the Shrew, staged as a spoof of the Pickford/Fairbanks movie (see above). Includes extracts from Hamlet and Henry V, and Shakespeare himself (Begg) makes an appearance only to be hit in the face with a custard pie thrown by Anna May Wong's Chinese-speaking Kate. In his 1949 autobiography "Nice Work--The Story of Thirty Years in British Film Production," supervising director Adrian Brunel recalls how the sketch was re-shot by Alfred Hitchcock after executive producer John Maxwell rejected Brunel's own version claiming that it isn't funny (modern sources provide conflicting accounts of Hitchcock's involvement). In the U.S., the film was heavily truncated to about half of its original running time.

In this updating of The Taming of the Shrew into a modern-day musical comedy, songwriter Tom Daly (British music-hall star Stanley Lupino) falls in love with Pamela Berne (American comedienne Thelma Todd), a beautiful, rich and spoiled young woman whose nasty temper strikes fear even in her father (Carew) and brother (Loder). Tom tricks Pamela into marrying him and then proceeds to "tame" her by handcuffing her to himself, arranging to spend their wedding night at a dingy inn, and introducing her to his sinister looking family, in reality a group of actors hired to scare the bride into submission. For its New York opening, the film, which seems "to have sought to outdo Hollywood's smashing of crockery and furniture and general violence" (Mordaunt Hall, The New York Times, May 30, 1934)), was appropriately paired with footage of the Jimmy McLarnin - Barney Ross boxing match.

A heavily truncated modern-dress TV adaptation of The Taming of the Shrew from the Westinghouse sponsored anthology series which tackled five Shakespeare plays during its first four seasons (1948-1951), including two stagings of Julius Caesar.  When he appeared as Petruchio, Charlton Heston was only months away from making his big screen Hollywood debut for producer Hal Wallis, while Lisa Kirk advanced to Katherina from playing Bianca in the original Broadway production of "Kiss Me Kate." A once-married couple, reunited to star in a musical version of Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew, fight their way through the opening night both on and off the stage.  Cole Porter’s musical, which premiered on Broadway in 1948, successfully transposes the play into the modern era while at the same time preserving the original text in its "onstage" portions.  The film adaptation appropriates all the songs from the stage production (with the addition of "From This Moment On," originally written for another Porter musical), but includes numerous alterations to the Broadway version’s often suggestive lyrics - e.g. a reference to the Kinsey Report on sexual behavior in the song "Too Darn Hot" is changed to “the latest report.”  Kiss Me Kate was originally released in both 2-D and 3-D versions, and it was up to the exhibitors to decide which format they would present. The opera based on The Taming of the Shrew by American composer Vittorio Giannini, with a libretto by Giannini and Dorothy Fee, had its premiere in a concert version in 1953 and was first performed by regional companies.  The NBC broadcast had been instrumental in boosting the work’s visibility, further advanced when it was staged by the New York City Opera in 1958.

Broadcast a week after the much-trumpeted U.S. premiere of Olivier's Richard III (see above), the Hallmark sponsored Taming of the Shrew features Maurice Evans in the role he played as a much younger man at the Old Vic (in 1934) and Lilli Palmer in her very first Shakespearean role. The staging is in the style of commedia dell'arte and the adaptation dispenses with the framework featuring drunken tinker Christopher Sly, simplifies the subplot of Bianca and her suitors by dropping Gremio, and eliminates the business of Lucentio's fake father. The broadcast was well received at the time ("delightful fun" - The New York Times, Mar. 25, 1956, "resounding hit" - The Sun, Mar. 20, 1956) and today many consider it the best of Evans' TV Shakespeares.

The first TV adaptation of the stage musical based on The Taming of the Shrew had two major connections to the 1948 Broadway production: it was written by the husband-and-wife team of Sam and Bella Spewack, the authors of the original libretto, and it starred Alfred Drake and Patricia Morison, repeating the roles they had played on stage ten years earlier. The executive producer was Mildred Freed Alberg, who had been instrumental in bringing Maurice Evans' Hamlet (and a host of other literary classics) to the small screen.

A western variation on The Taming of the Shrew with no direct quotes from Shakespeare but with a reworking of several of the play's themes. The feuding couple are a cattle baron (John Wayne) and his estranged wife (O'Hara, whose character is named Katherine), while a subplot involves the rancher's daughter (Powers) and her two competing suitors (Patrick Wayne, Van Dyke). Similar to the 1929 version (see above), the 1967 screen adaptation of The Taming of the Shrew is a celebrity vehicle for a famous Hollywood couple whose much publicized tempestuous off-screen relationship "was pretty good training for this voluptuous romp [...]" (Donald Zec, Daily Mirror, Feb. 28, 1967). Working from a script which applies extensive cuts to the original and inserts many new lines into the text, Franco Zeffirelli (in his feature film debut) creates an exuberant kinetic spectacle with opulent visuals and over-the-top performances. The film was largely financed by its two stars, who got a sizeable return on their investment as Shrew became one of the few commercially successful screen versions of Shakespeare. Abbreviated version of the play consisting of excerpts from Act I Scene II and Act II Scene I. Made for educational use as part of a series intended to provide an introduction to the themes and original staging of selected Shakespeare plays.

An abridgment of Franco Zeffirelli’s The Taming of the Shrew (see above) from a series of six titles originally released as theatrical features by Columbia Pictures and later reedited for educational use to provide an introduction to the “[...] great themes of literature which are, in effect, an expression of the universal nature of man” (Films--A Catalog of Films for Schools, Colleges and Libraries, Learning Corp. of America, 1975, p. 44) (see also entry under Macbeth). Orson Welles’s commentary compares Shakespeare’s comic treatment of the battle of the sexes with a more darker view of the subject expressed by other writers such as Tennessee Williams and Henrik Ibsen. A documentary on the production of The Taming of the Shrew at the Delacorte Theater in New York's Central Park, staged by Wilford Leach in the summer of 1978 for producer Joseph Papp's popular Shakespeare in the Park series. Includes excerpts from the play, interviews with Streep. Juliá and Papp, and comments from members of the audience. Broadcast in the U.K. in May 1979 as part of BBC's Omnibus series, the film was not seen in the U.S. until January 7, 1981, when PBS televised it in the runup to The Shakespeare Plays version (see below). "The Taming of John Cleese," heralded The Observer (June 22, 1980) as the Monty Python star defied expectations of excessive zaniness and produced a performance "at once precise, carefully modulated, and ever-so-slightly insane" (David Sterritt, Christian Science Monitor, Jan. 23, 1981). In a Los Angeles Times interview (Oct. 30, 1980), Cleese indicated that his openly stated dislike of the declaratory "Ian McKellan school of acting" was the reason producer/director Jonathan Miller wanted him for the part of Petruchio: "I know it's traditional and a lot of people like it and Ian gets the drama award for doing it every year in London, but for me it is silly posturing and extremely affected and absolutely pointless because it does not correspond to any human behavior I have ever seen except that of actors playing Shakespeare." The Taming of the Shrew opened the third season of The Shakespeare Plays (for more on the series, see entry under Julius Caesar). (DVD - Ambrose Video)

Episode from the third season of the popular TV series featuring Bruce Willis and Cybill Shepherd as partners in a Los Angeles detective agency. The show's creator and executive producer Glenn Gordon Caron credits Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew, specifically Joseph Papp's 1978 production starring Raúl Juliá and Meryl Streep (see Kiss Me, Petruchio), as the inspiration for the entire series. Atomic Shakespeare has the cast performing an adaptation of the play in a fantasy triggered after a young boy is told by his mother that he cannot watch his favorite TV show (Moonlighting, of course) and instead must study Shakespeare for an upcoming test. The costumes and sets are elaborate and the characters speak in Elizabethan verse incorporating a steady stream of anachronisms and digressions. The play ends with Katharina and Petruchio pronouncing to the camera "We hate iambic pentameter!" (DVD - on Moonlighting--Season Three)

A theatrical feature which updates The Taming of the Shrew into a modern teen comedy by closely following the play's plot while side-stepping its language. Brooding loner Patrick Verona (Ledger), a student at a Seattle high-school, is hired to woo the boy-hating Kat (Stiles) so that another student (Gordon-Levitt) can date her younger sister Bianca (Oleynik). The film's critical reception was mixed, although the young cast received unanimous praise, in particular Julia Stiles, who went on to play Ophelia in Michael Almereyda's Hamlet and the Desdemona-based character in O (see above for both). Ten years after its original release, 10 Things I Hate About You served as the basis for the TV series of the same name broadcast on the ABC Family cable channel. While retaining the four main characters, the series jettisons most of the film’s plot and as such bears no relation to the play. (DVD)

Episode from the first season of the TV sitcom centered on Baltimore-based African-American sportscaster and single father Flex Washington (Alexander) and his teenage daughter Breanna (Pratt). When the latter is chosen to play Kate in her school's production of selected scenes from The Taming of the Shrew, she quickly assumes a "diva" attitude, especially towards her understudy and best friend Spirit (Sicily), and even rewrites the play to give "Big Willy Shakes some flava." Act II Scene I is briefly seen on stage in the episode's finale.

In Arizona in the 1860's, a gang of bank robbers take refuge in a ghost town, the only inhabitants of which are an old prospector (Barton) and his granddaughter (Baxter). "The plot draws from Shakespeare's 'Western,' The Tempest - influenced by early reports from the American colony - where another band with criminal secrets 'come unto these yellow sands' to find only an old man and his lovely daughter" (Scott Simmon, The Invention of the Western Film, p. 268). The film was remade in 1967 in South Africa as The Jackals. (DVD)

After landing on a distant star, the sole inhabitants of which are Dr. Morbius (Pidgeon), his daughter Altaira (Francis) and a robot named Robby, the crew of a space ship led by Commander Adams (Nielsen) is terrorized by an invisible monster created by the Doctor's subconscious. A budget far exceeding the average 1950's science-fiction film, strong Freudian overtones and the pioneering use of electronic music, all contributed to make Forbidden Planet a classic of the genre. At the same time, the film's parallels with The Tempest had been recognized early on and it eventually became a textbook case of popular culture's appropriation and adaptation of Shakespeare. (DVD)

"Few TV productions of Shakespearean drama have been carried out so successfully," wrote Virginia M. Vaughan in the Dec. 1984 issue of Shakespeare on Film Newsletter describing George Schaefer's "forgotten" Tempest, which teamed veteran Evans with two fellow British transplants, Richard Burton, already an established star of stage and screen, and Roddy McDowell, who had played Ariel once before, at the American Shakespeare Festival in Stratford, Connecticut. As an NBC press release pointed out, the broadcast followed on the heels of the discovery of the 350-year-old wreck of the English sailing ship "Sea Venture," the demise of which in a storm near Bermuda is thought to have been the inspiration for the play. (VHS)

An Australian painter (Mason), disenchanted with his success, goes into a self-imposed exile on an island on the Great Barrier Reef only to find that it is already inhabited by an old alcoholic woman (Carr-Glyn) and her teenage grand-daughter (Mirren). After the artist hires the girl to model for him, his renewed desire to paint is gradually intertwined with her sexual awakening. The film is often cited as a variation on The Tempest, especially in the context of director Michael Powell's lengthy and ultimately unsuccessful efforts to adapt the play for the big screen, first in the 1950's with John Gielgud as Prospero and Moira Shearer as Ariel, and then immediately following Age of Consent with the same characters played by James Mason and Mia Farrow. In the first of two programs exploring the work of Peter Brook from CBS’s series Camera Three, theater critic Margaret Croyden introduces footage of a 1968 London performance of his experimental stage version of The Tempest. Includes comments by Brook and rehearsal scenes. The second program, broadcast a week later, featured interviews with actors appearing in the director’s then current New York production of A Midsummer Night’s Dream.

THE TEMPEST (Realist Film Unit, U.K., 1971). Released in the U.S. in 1974 by International Film Bureau as part of The Shakespeare Series. Dir Peter Seabourne. With Mark Kingston (Prospero), Elizabeth Hall (Miranda), Derrick Gilbert (Ferdinand).

1 reel of 1, ca. 13 min, sd, color, 16mm. MacDonald (J. Fred and Leslie W.) Collection. MCD T-7D.

Abbreviated version of the play consisting of excerpts from Act I Scene II and Act III Scene I. Made for educational use as part of a series “designed to give a sense of Shakespeare’s work as theatre” (1974 Supplementary Catalog, International Film Bureau, p. 12), with emphasis “on the dramatic situations, the characters, and the spoken language.” (ibid.)

THE TEMPEST (Kendon Films/Mainline Pictures, U.K., 1979). Released in the U.S. in 1980 by World Northal Corp. Dir & Adapt Derek Jarman. With Heathcote Williams (Prospero), Karl Johnson (Ariel), Toyah Willcox (Miranda), Peter Bull (Alonso), Richard Warwick (Antonio), Elisabeth Welch (Goddess), Jack Birkett (Caliban).

10 reels of 10 on 5, ca. 95 min, sd, color, 35mm. Copyright Collection. CGC 3931-3935.

An unconventional screen adaptation of Shakespeare’s play by British artist and gay rights activist Derek Jarman, whose iconoclastic approach to filmmaking came out of his 1960’s art school days and London’s social and cultural scene of the 1970’s. Rooted both in Jarman’s punk aesthetic and his literary sensibility, the "admirably edited but surprisingly faithful adaptation" (Martyn Auty, Monthly Film Bulletin, Apr. 1980) for the most part avoids the stylistic excesses of the director’s two previous features (Sebastiane and Jubilee). The unorthodox casting includes English poet Heathcote Williams, rock star Toyah Willcox, and American-born, British-based singer Elisabeth Welch, who appears in the film’s campiest scene singing "Stormy Weather" to a group of handsome young sailors. A videorecording from a single camera position of San Francisco Ballet's performance of Michael Smuin's and Paul Chihara's ballet based on Shakespeare's The Tempest. See below for a broadcast version of the same production.

GREAT PERFORMANCES: DANCE IN AMERICA. THE TEMPEST (KQED-TV - WNET-TV/PBS, 3/30/1981). Dir Emile Ardolino. With Evelyn Cisneros (Miranda), Attila Ficzere (Prospero), David McNaughton (Ariel), Tomm Ruud (Ferdinand), Horacio Cifuentes (Caliban), Alexander Filipov (Sebastian).

2 videocassettes of 2, ca. 120 min, sd, color, 3/4 in. Otto Klemperer Archive Collection. VBC 8486-8487.

A performance by the San Francisco Ballet televised live from the War Memorial Opera House, the dance company's home base. Produced in 1980, "The Tempest" was the first full-length American ballet with original choreography and music, the former by Michael Smuin, who a few years earlier staged Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet" (see above), the latter by Japanese American composer Paul Chihara. The broadcast was hosted by Gene Kelly. See above for a non-commercial videorecording of the same production.

Director Paul Mazursky's initial idea to cast Mick Jagger as "an androgynous Ariel" in a film that would have resembled "a Marx brothers musical" (as quoted in Rosenthal, p. 154), eventually became a largely conventional modernization, more in tune with the director's often explored themes of dysfunctional relationships and mid-life marital crises. After attempts to cast Paul Newman fell through, John Cassavetes was selected for the Prospero-like role of a successful New York architect who runs away from his career and marriage to a remote Greek island with his teenage daughter (Ringwald). Ariel becomes Aretha (Sarandon), an American divorcée supporting herself as a singer, and Caliban is Kalibanos (Julia), a lascivious Greek goatherd. Mazursky explained that he "wanted to do a movie that would have some of the free form of Shakespeare's plays, where almost incidentally, you have a little song, a little dance, some low comedy, a little relief" (The New York Times, Aug. 8, 1982). The result is what critic David Sterritt (Christian Science Monitor, Aug. 26, 1982) described as "an audacious hodge-podge," while Cassavetes himself referred to the film as "wonderfully imperfect" (Los Angeles Times, Aug. 12, 1982). John Gielgud's long cherished wish to bring The Tempest to the big screen (he played Prospero on stage four times) finally came to fruition with this amalgam of several art forms which is not so much an adaptation of the play as "a variation in the musical sense, an annotated commentary […], or - quite literally - a reading of it" (Jonathan Romney, Sight & Sound, Sep. 1991). In Peter Greenaway's interpretation, Prospero is a stand-in for Shakespeare himself - as he writes the play's text, he speaks all the parts and narrates the story, punctuated throughout by animated pages from his treasured books. An art school graduate and a keen student of painting and draughtsmanship, Greenaway illuminates the Renaissance setting with an almost curatorial eye, while his musical collaborator Michael Nyman's operatic score encapsulates the play's description of its mysterious locale as an isle of "noyses, Sounds, and sweet aires." The film makes extensive use of computer graphics and early high-definition technology.  (DVD)

An episode from the 1st season of the children's live-action TV series named after its main character, a Jack Russell terrier who imagines himself as the protagonist of various literary classics (see also entries under Henry IV and Romeo and Juliet). Disappointed by being kept on the sidelines during a dress rehearsal for a school production of The Tempest, Wishbone assigns himself the role of Ariel in his own retelling of the play, which preserves Shakespeare's text, albeit heavily truncated.

2 videocassettes of 2, ca. 90 min, sd, color, 3/4 in. Copyright Collection. VBP 6964-6965.

Made-for-TV movie which transposes the play to Mississippi during the Civil War and in the process provides a more historically, geographically and gender specific foundation for the narrative. Gideon Prosper (Fonda) is a widowed plantation owner devoted to the study of black magic, which he masters with the help of Mambo Azaleigh, a female slave (Abernathy). When she is killed by Prosper's unscrupulous brother Anthony (Glover), Prosper escapes into the swamp with his daughter Miranda (Heigl) and Mambo's son Ariel (Perrineau), who is endowed with magical powers. After Ariel and Prosper help the Union Army achieve victory at the Battle of Vicksburg, Prosper returns to the plantation but cannot bring himself to exact revenge on his brother. With the exception of one line at the end of the film, the adaptation stays away from the original language. (VHS)

TIMON OF ATHENS

- segment begins at 45:40; running time of segment: 7 min.

A Canadian TV program showcasing the music of Duke Ellington from a weekly performing arts series which ran from 1960 to 1969. Includes two pieces from Ellington's original score for Michael Langham's 1963 staging of Timon of Athens at the Stratford Ontario Shakespeare Festival. The production numbers, set around a large banquet table, feature Johnny Hodges on alto sax and The Alan Lund Dancers. As he himself points out in the introduction to the set, Ellington was a lifelong admirer of Shakespeare, even recording a Bard-inspired album in 1957 ("Such Sweet Thunder"). Never broadcast in the U.S.

TITUS ANDRONICUS

TITUS (Urania Pictures - NDF International, Italy/U.K., 1999). Released in the U.S. by Fox Searchlight Pictures. Dir & Wrt Julie Taymor. With Anthony Hopkins (Titus Andronicus), Jessica Lange (Tamora), Osheen Jones (Young Lucius), Dario D'Ambrosi (Clown), Raz Degan (Alarbus), Jonathan Rhys Meyers (Chiron), Matthew Rhys (Demetrius), Harry Lennix (Aaron), Alan Cumming (Saturninus).
Stage director Julie Taymor made her big screen debut with this ambitious adaptation of Titus Andronicus which carries over many of the concepts she had developed for her 1994 production of the play for the Theatre for the New Audience. The film's anachronistic melange of the ancient and the modern (chariots and automobiles share the same streets, speeches are delivered through modern public address systems, banners feature colors of Rome's rival soccer teams, etc) serves to underline how Shakespeare's much-maligned original, which Taymor considers "the greatest dissertation on violence ever" (The Observer, Oct. 3, 1999), resonates in an era when audiences "feed daily on tabloid sex scandals, teenage gang rape, high school gun sprees and the private details of a celebrity murder trial… a time when racism, ethnic cleansing and genocide have almost ceased to shock by being so commonplace and seemingly inevitable" (interview with Julie Taymor, Cineaste, 2000, vol. 25, no. 3). Shot on location in Italy and Croatia. (DVD)

TITUS ANDRONICUS (Joe Redner Film & Productions, 1999). Dir & Adapt Christopher Dunne. With Candy K. Sweet (Tamora), Robert Reece (Titus), Alexander Chew (Lucius), Lexton Raleigh (Aaron), Tom Dennis (Demetrius), Levi D. Tinker (Chiron), Richard Porter (Marcus).

Harvard University professor I. A. Richards reads and discusses a scene from Troilus and Cressida, Episode no. 7 in an eight-part TV series the aim of which was to explore "how far TV can be used to allow the poem itself to work undisturbedly on the reader-listener" (NET files) (see also entry under Miscellaneous).

TWELFTH NIGHT

TWELFTH NIGHT (Vitagraph, 1910). Dir Charles Kent. With Florence Turner (Viola), Edith Storey (Sebastian), Julia Swayne Gordon (Olivia), Tefft Johnson (Orsino), Charles Kent (Malvolio).
Vitagraph's next-to-last adaptation of Shakespeare (followed by As You Like It in 1912 - see above), Twelfth Night is "the most carefully produced picture of any of the company's surviving Shakespeare films. Its visually attractive sets are unusually well designed, its action carefully blocked, its frame composition detailed, its individual performances full of pantomimic flair and its cinematography technically astute" (Judith Buchanan, Shakespeare on Silent Film, p. 137). The cast consisted of established members of Vitagraph's stock company, among them Florence Turner, one of motion picture industry's first stars, and Julia Swayne Gordon, who by then had already appeared on screen as Cordelia, Helena, Desdemona and Portia.

THIS IS CHARLES LAUGHTON. TWELFTH NIGHT (Paul Gregory & Associates/Syndicated, 1953).

Charles Laughton reads Act II, Scene IV from Twelfth Night as part of the series which marked the British actor's U.S. TV debut (see also entry under As You Like It). Reissued for educational use by Quality Productions in 1977.

HALLMARK HALL OF FAME. TWELFTH NIGHT (Milberg Productions, in association with NBC Television Network/NBC, 12/15/1957). Dir David Greene. Adapt William Nichols. With Maurice Evans (Malvolio), Rosemary Harris (Viola), Dennis King (Sir Toby Belch), Denholm Elliott (Sebastian), Max Adrian (Sir Andrew Aguecheek), Frances Hyland (Olivia), Howard Morris (Feste).

Maurice Evans recreated one of his best known stage characters, the Cockney-accented Malvolio, for this adaptation of Twelfth Night which frames the play as a dream conjured by Feste the clown. The production suffered a setback when Piper Laurie, cast as Viola, quit a week before the scheduled broadcast complaining that the part "bore little resemblance to either Shakespeare's play or the original TV adaptation from which I had accepted the role." (The New York Times, Dec. 12, 1957). Ironically, it was her replacement, Rosemary Harris, originally hired for the role of Olivia, who was singled out as the best thing about the show.

TWELFTH NIGHT (Associated-Rediffusion/ITV, U.K., 3/18/1959). First U.S. broadcast: 1/31/1964, WNDT, New York City (NET), Festival of the Arts. Dir Roger Jenkins. In early 1967, educational TV station WNDT (today WNET) assembled a repertory company to do three Shakespeare plays, Macbeth, The Winter's Tale, and Twelfth Night, with TV cameras recording every step of the process, from the first rehearsal to the performance of the complete work. Each play was presented in four one-hour rehearsal programs followed by a broadcast of the full-scale production. The company was initially led by British director Barry Boys, who completed Macbeth but was fired before wrapping up The Winter's Tale for running $35,000 over the $168,000 budget allotted to the two productions. In accordance with the series' broadcasting pattern, the performance of Twelfth Night followed on the heels of rehearsals no. 1 to 4 which had been televised during the preceding week. While praising WNDT for devoting a full evening to Shakespeare, critic Jack Gould pointed out that the play "is an ensemble occasion that requires very special staging, and the necessary ingenuity was only intermittently evident. The profusion of close-ups and the restless camera work attending the abundance of exits and entrances were often in conflict with viewer attention." (The New York Times, Jan. 16, 1968)

The final installment of the first season of animated adaptations of Shakespeare's plays was the second in the series (after The Tempest - see above) to utilize stop-motion puppet animation, giving "the action rare enchantment and wit" (Christian Science Monitor, Jan. 6, 1993).  Commissioned for the Welsh TV channel S4C, the film won an award for its Russian director, Maria Muat, at the Minsk International Women's Film Festival.  U.S. broadcast was hosted by Robin Williams. Director of both the Royal Shakespeare Company (1968-1986) and the National Theatre (1997-2003), Trevor Nunn has been a leading figure of British theater for almost four decades, renowned for his ground-breaking staging of Shakespeare, Ibsen, Brecht, Shaw, Chekhov, Dickens, and mega-musicals such as "Cats" and "Les Misérables."  He also directed operas (Mozart's "Idomeneo," and "Cosi Fan Tutte," Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess") and television, beginning with BBC’s 1979 broadcast of Tom Stoppard’s play “Every Good Boy Deserves Favour.”  Twelfth Night, Nunn's third venture into motion pictures (after Hedda in 1976 and Lady Jane in 1986), presents Shakespeare’s popular work as a Chekhovian comedy framed within the lush landscapes and costumes of the 1890’s (the film was shot on location in Cornwall, England).  For Nunn, Twelfth Night's study of gender has a decidedly modern resonance, which determined the film's style: "I felt the urge to make the content of the play seem real, and not pantomimic or stylized, so that the contrary extremes of sexual behavior in the central characters are seen in a believable social context.  The story sets out to provoke both genders in the audience, so it's important that spectators shouldn't be able to get off the hook of the play by dismissing it as an improbable, archaic comedy." LIVE FROM LINCOLN CENTER. TWELFTH NIGHT OR WHAT YOU WILL (Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts/PBS, 8/30/1998).  Dir Kirk Browning.  With Helen Hunt (Viola/Cesario), Kyra Sedgwick (Olivia), Philip Bosco (Malvolio), Paul Rudd (Orsino), David Patrick Kelly (Feste), Brian Murray (Sir Toby Belch), Max Wright (Sir Andrew Aguecheek), Rick Stear (Sebastian).

*3 videocassettes of 3, ca. 180 min, sd, color, 3/4 in.  LC Off-Air Taping Collection.  VBP 1387-1389.

Staged by Nicholas Hytner as part of the Lincoln Center Festival '98 and broadcast live on PBS from the Vivian Beaumont Theater, this production follows in the footsteps of modern film adaptations of Shakespeare by casting well-known Hollywood names in the lead roles: Helen Hunt had just won an Oscar for As Good As It Gets, while Paul Rudd was riding high on the success of the hit comedy The Object of My Affection (also directed by Hytner).  In contrast to the parade of good looking physiques of the four leads and their entourages, Brian Murray, a veteran of the Royal Shakespeare Company in the role of Olivia's parasitic uncle, and Max Wright, as his dim-witted friend, almost walk away with the show. Hytner's watery Illyria comes across as a vaguely Middle-Eastern fairy tale, with the music emphasizing an opium induced otherworldliness - or, as The New York Times (July 17, 1998) put it, "a place, after all, of much mirth and beguiling spectacle - [Illyria] remains an inviting oasis for theatergoers in search of escape from Manhattan in its dog days, and their own midsummer madness." The broadcast was hosted by the late opera diva Beverly Sills.

11 reels of 11 on 6, ca. 105 min, sd, color, 35mm. Copyright Collection. CGD 9630-9635.

A commercially successful update of Twelfth Night into a romantic teen comedy written by the team responsible for another big screen modernization of Shakespeare, the Taming of the Shrew inspired 10 Things I Hate About You (see above). Viola (Bynes) disguises herself as her brother Sebastian (Kirk) so that she can play on the boys' soccer team for Illyria Prep. In the process, she falls in love with her roommate Duke (Tatum), who in turn recruits her to help him hook up with Olivia (Ramsey). Olivia, however, likes Viola, whom she believes to be Sebastian. The role of Malvolio is reduced to a pet tarantula, Sebastian, instead of disappearing in a shipwreck, runs off to London with his rock band, and gender discrimination takes a beating in the big finale on the soccer field. THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA

2 videocassettes of 2, 145 min, ad, color, 3/4 in. LC Off-Air Taping Collection. VBC 8334-8335, Rarely seen, even on stage, The Two Gentlemen of Verona received only three full-length TV treatments to date, in 1963 in West Germany as a made-for-TV movie, twenty years later as part of BBC's The Shakespeare Plays (for more on the series, see entry under Julius Caesar), and in 1995 as a Polish TV production. One of Shakespeare's earliest works, this story of friendship, love and treachery on the court of the Duke of Milan is treated by director Don Taylor in a "straightforward, no-frills" (BFI Screenonline) manner in a subtly stylized Renaissance setting. The score was compiled by Anthony Rooley, Renaissance music expert and director of the Consort of Musicke ensemble, and consists of arrangements of works by Shakespeare's musical contemporaries. With his extensive theatrical background, Edwin Thanhouser was well positioned to tackle the Bard’s work on screen when he organized his film company in 1909.  The Winter’s Tale was the first in what was announced as “a strong series of Shakespearean releases” (Moving Picture World, May 21, 1910), and the first film adaptation of Shakespeare to publicize the names of the actors.  The work won high praise from contemporary reviewers, with Moving Picture World (May 28, 1910) claiming that “we have never seen better acting in any motion picture that has come before our eyes.”  (DVD - on compilation *The Thanhouser Collection. _The Winter’s Tale_ was produced by the BBC as part of a series of ten literary classics, including Ibsen’s “Ghosts,” Tolstoy’s “Anna Karenina” and Emily Bronte’s “Wuthering Heights.”  The cast is headed by Robert Shaw, graduate of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, actor, novelist and playwright, today best remembered as the gritty shark hunter Quint in Jaws, and Rosalie Crutchley, a prolific theater and screen actress who appeared in some of British TV’s earliest adaptations of Shakespeare (as Juliet in 1947 and Goneril in 1948).  As Autolycus, Ron Moody, a stalwart of British musical theater, imbues the Cockney-accented thief with shades of Fagin from the musical “Oliver!,” the role he originated on stage two years earlier and went on to play in Carol Reed’s 1968 film version.

In the second of Eric Rohmer's "Tales of Four Seasons," Félicie (Véry) finds it difficult to commit to the two men in her life as she is haunted by the memory of Charles (Driessche), with whom she had a passionate holiday romance five year ago. They accidentally lost touch, however, and Charles is unaware that Félicie gave birth to their child. When one of her suitors (Furic) takes her to the Gérard Philippe Theater in Paris to see Shakespeare's The Winter's Tale, she is greatly moved by the final scene and reaffirms her belief that Charles will come back to her (which he does shortly thereafter). The connection between the play and the film "is not at the level of character or narrative [...] but at the level of theme, the bittersweet and magical resurrection of relationships between husband and wife, parent and child, that had been thought utterly lost." A little over a year after he starred in George Cukor's screen version of Romeo and Juliet (see above), Leslie Howard appeared as the self-important Shakespearean actor Basil Underwood in the romantic comedy It's Love I'm After. Underwood and his stage partner's (Davis) plans to marry are interrupted when the actor is approached by a star-struck fan (De Havilland) convinced that he is her ideal man, much to the dismay of her own fiancé (Knowles). The film opens with the death scene from Romeo and Juliet, with the two stars sniping at each other between the lines, and includes quotes from As You Like It ("All the world's a stage"), Hamlet, Macbeth, Othello and The Taming of the Shrew. John Barrymore, an ageing actor plagued by tax problems, agrees to participate in a publicity stunt in which he will teach Shakespeare to band leader Kay Kyser. When the stunt balloons into a festival of Shakespeare plays starring the two, Barrymore conceives several schemes to sabotage Kyser's participation. Eventually, however, it is he himself who is booed off the stage, making room for Kyser's band and their swing rendition of the Bard in the number "Romeo Smith and Juliet Jones." The numerous Shakespearean citations include Barrymore, who died five months after the film's release, delivering Hamlet's "To be or not to be" soliloquy. (VHS)

Educational film which looks at how Shakespeare's understanding of people carries over to the modern times and quotes a number of his plays to point out the expressions and phrases we still use today.  Includes footage of Kenilworth Castle, Stratford-upon-Avon, London, the Forest of Arden, Windsor Castle, and the cliffs of Dover, as well as brief dramatizations of scenes from Romeo and Juliet, Macbeth, The Taming of the Shrew, The Merchant of Venice, and Hamlet.  Not to be confused with the 1987 short of the same name (see below), which, while billed as the "Second Edition" of the 1951 film, has a completely different script with new footage, sound, music and narration.

An animated short which describes the Globe Theatre and its staging conventions based primarily on the scholarship of John Cranford Adams.  The film uses a one-inch scale model of the playhouse and a set of scale figures representing actors, the movement of which was achieved with pairs of magnets (one in the base of the figure and another underneath the stage).  The last few scenes from Macbeth are given as an example of how the dialogue, the logical sequence of events, and the corresponding movement from one stage to another enabled the audience to follow the play's action.  Also includes brief excerpts from Twelfth Night, Julius Caesar, and Hamlet.

In the concluding program of the first series of TV lectures on Shakespeare (for more on the series, see entry under Macbeth), Dr. Frank C. Baxter "sums up the reasons for the greatness of Shakespeare's reputation as an author, including his creation of three-dimensional characters, his ability as a humorist, and his great and universal themes." (NET files). A few weeks after its finale, the series won two Emmys, for best public affairs program and most outstanding male performer.

The story of the first Stratford Shakespearean Festival told mostly through recreations of key events related to its founding, from the submission of a proposal to the city council by local journalist Tom Patterson (Jan. 21, 1952) to the inaugural performance (July 13, 1953). The re-enactments were necessitated by the fact that filming started only a couple of months prior to the opening. Also, with Artistic Director Tyrone Guthrie prohibiting the recording of rehearsals and performances, these had to be restaged for the cameras as well. The two plays featured are All's Well that Ends Well and Richard III. (DVD)

In the second program of the third series of Dr. Frank C. Baxter's lectures on Shakespeare (for more on the series, see entry under Macbeth), "a history of Western drama from the classic Greek to the English 'morality' play is presented as a forerunner to the Elizabethan drama" (NET files), and the development of public theater is traced to the "resurrection of classic drama in English universities so that by the time Shakespeare came to London in the late 1580's, the theater was ready for him." This episode from the long running variety show (later renamed The Ed Sullivan Show) was broadcast from the stage of the American Shakespeare Festival Theatre in Stratford, Connecticut, and features segments from the company's then current productions of The Tempest and Julius Caesar. The former is represented by Act II, Scene II and the opening of Act V, Scene I, and the latter by the scene of Caesar's assassination and Mark Antony's "Friends, Romans, countrymen" speech. The show returns to The Tempest in its finale with Raymond Massey delivering Prospero's words from Act IV, Scene I ("Our revels now are ended"). The Shakespeare segments are separated by unrelated musical and comedy numbers, including Bill Haley & His Comets performing "Rock Around the Clock".

A big screen biography of Edwin Booth (Burton), one of the foremost American actors of the 19th century renowned for his Shakespearean roles. The film opens in 1848 as young Edwin accompanies his alcoholic father, the famous English actor Junius Brutus Booth (Massey), on his American tour, and ends in 1895 with Booth appearing as Hamlet in front of an angry mob two months after the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln by his younger brother, actor John Wilkes Booth (Derek). Among the many quotations from Shakespeare, both on stage and off, are King Lear (Massey), Richard III (Massey, Burton), The Taming of the Shrew (Derek), Romeo and Juliet (Burton and McNamara, the latter as Edwin's wife Mary Devlin), and Hamlet (Burton). First-time director Philip Dunne was assisted in the staging of the Shakespearean scenes by noted theater actress and producer Eva Le Gallienne.

Based on material compiled by Shakespearean scholar Alfred Harbage and adapted by theater critic Walter Kerr, the half-hour dramatization paints a picture of the beliefs and customs that would have influenced a boy growing up in a 16th century English village. This was one of the final episodes of the Omnibus series to be funded by the Ford Foundation - the next season will be produced by the newly formed Robert Saudek Associates and broadcast on NBC.

Walter Kerr, drama critic of The New York Herald Tribune, discusses how the historical transformation of the physical space of the stage has dictated changes in acting and writing for the theater. Illustrated with segments from plays ranging from Sophocles to Molière, including Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet and Othello, some staged in contrasting classic and modern styles. The duel scene from Romeo and Juliet is first shown as it would have been staged in Elizabethan theater, then repeated in a box set of a present-day living room. Also, Romeo's stage entrance in the balcony scene is replayed according to the "real-time" demands of modern theater.

Feature film about a group of actors travelling through India shortly after it had achieved independence and staging performances of Shakespeare's plays as the audiences are turning away from Western classics to products of the indigenous culture, namely locally made motion pictures. The story was inspired by the experiences of Geoffrey Kendal, who had been the actor-manager of an English repertory company (billed as "Shakespeariana") touring India following World War II. The film was made on a shoestring budget, with money mostly originating from the sale of worldwide distribution rights to The Householder, James Ivory's first feature as director, to Columbia Pictures. Kendal himself was cast in the lead, along with his wife Laura Liddel and their two daughters Jennifer and Felicity. In keeping with the family-like nature of the project, the role of Indian playboy Sanju went to Shashi Kapoor, Jennifer Kendal's real-life husband. Once the final cut was ready, Ivory took it to Satyajit Ray and asked him to compose the musical score, which contributes greatly to the film's dreamlike quality, as in Ray's own work. Shakespeare Wallah had its world premiere at the 1965 Berlin Film Festival, where Madhur Jaffrey, in the role of film star Manjula, won the Silver Bear for Best Actress. Plays featured in the film are Antony and Cleopatra, Hamlet, Romeo and Juliet, and Twelfth Night. (DVD)

Emmy Award winning TV adaptation of John Gielgud's one-man show consisting of readings of excerpts from eighteen of Shakespeare's plays and fourteen of his sonnets, grouped into four segments, Youth, Adulthood, Maturity, and Death. The show, first performed in the U.K. in 1957, toured the U.S. during the 1958-59 theatrical season. Filmed in June 1965 in New York City, the TV version was produced by Daniel Melnick and David Susskind, with the National Organization of Florists as the sponsor of the broadcast. "In a medium where the English language is nightly subjected to so much agonizing abuse, the readings of Sir John were the proverbial music to the ear. Appearing in a business suit and with no stage trappings, he wove together the meaning and substance of Shakespearean characters both young and old and seasoned his interpretations with marginal notes of engaging brevity." "Designed to show how the physical features of the Elizabethan stage influenced the work of Shakespeare.  The duties of the bookholder, the props and costumes, actors in the 'tiring room', boys playing women's parts - all these aspects are dealt with.  Extracts from Shakespeare's plays follow, showing how he used the features of the stage to represent balconies, city walls, town gates.  The film then proceeds to illustrate such dramatic techniques as the aside, the soliloquy, problems of entrances and exits and the manner in which Shakespeare rounded off a performance."

An aging actor (Price) systematically murders London’s leading theater critics by disposing of each in a manner modeled on one of Shakespeare’s plays. The victims are played by some of British cinema’s top character actors, including Michael Hordern, a pre-eminent Shakespearean himself (both with the Stratford Royal Shakespeare Company and the Old Vic), as the critic who is hacked to death by a group of squatters (Julius Caesar), and the pink-suited Robert Morley, choked with a pie made from his beloved poodles (Titus Andronicus). Other models for the carnage are Troilus and Cressida, Cymbeline, The Merchant of Venice, Richard III, Othello, Henry VI Part 1, and King Lear. In 2005, the film was adapted into a stage production at London’s National Theatre with Jim Broadbent in the lead.

First performed in the U.S. in the Spring of 1981, Ian McKellen's one-man show was described by the actor as "me doing a number of speeches from familiar and not so familiar Shakespeare plays, and talking about them and talking about Shakespeare. And stories about actors and about plays […] It's informal. It's me chatting away" (New York Times, Mar. 11, 1981). In other words, "Imagine yourself at a party where somebody spots Ian McKellen and asks him to put on an impromptu show for the guests. You make a circle around him, and he begins with anecdotes about his own experience acting Shakespeare, stories about other actors' tribulations with the Bard, tales about Shakespeare the man" (Arthur Unger, Christian Science Monitor, Apr 23, 1982). When he suddenly loses his job in advertising, Bill Rago (DeVito) is forced to accept a temporary teaching position at an army training center.  Without any previous teaching experience, he arbitrarily picks Shakespeare as the topic for his class of barely literate soldiers.  In response to his lecture on Hamlet, the group comes up with a "To Be or Not To Be" rap number and later takes a trip to Stratford, Ontario, to attend a performance of Henry V.  In the end, Rago's students successfully navigate Shakespeare's language and demonstrate the value of his words to their skeptical drill sergeant (Hines).  (DVD)

American professor (Malkovich) arrives with his French wife (Deneuve) at a Portuguese monastery to prove his theory that William Shakespeare was a Spanish Jew. The Shakespeare-related elements, although setting the plot into motion, remain in the background while the Faustian relationship between the visitors and the convent's sinister caretaker (Cintra) takes center stage. The film was not based on a finished novel but rather on a summary of a work-in-progress (eventually published under the title "As Terras do Risco"/Lands of Risk) provided to Manoel de Oliveira by author Agustina Bessa-Luís, whose works the director had adapted for the big screen on two previous occasions. Episode from the 3rd season of the comedy series based on the British sitcom One Foot in the Grave with Bill Cosby as Hilton Lucas, a former airport worker forced into early retirement, Phylicia Rashad as his wife, and T'Keyah Crystal Keymáh as their only daughter. When Lucas admits that he could never "get" Shakespeare, the Bard himself (Conti) shows up in his kitchen along with Lucas's elementary school teacher (Wilson). While marveling at toasters, light switches, and velcro, Shakespeare instructs his host in the timeless relevance of his plays. Includes citations from Romeo and Juliet, Hamlet, Macbeth and King Lear. In a scene from the latter, Shakespeare himself takes on the role of Lear, Lucas's daughter is Regan, and Goneril is played by Sabrina LeBeauf, an experienced stage actress (including several major Shakespearean roles) best known as Cliff Huxtable's eldest daughter Sondra in The Cosby Show (see entries under Julius Caesar & Macbeth).

A highly successful TV sitcom developed as a spin-off from the equally popular series Cheers, the Seattle-set Frasier features the characters of Dr. Frasier Crane (Grammar), a divorced psychiatrist and host of a talk radio show, his younger brother Niles (Pierce), a fellow psychiatrist with a private practice, their father Martin (Mahoney), a retired police detective, Martin's live-in English caregiver, Daphne (Leeves), and Roz (Gilpin), the producer of Frasier's show. In this episode from the series’ 8th season, the brothers decide to revitalize the career of Shakespearean actor Jackson Hedley (Jacobi, in an Emmy-winning performance), who has been reduced to playing an android in a popular sci-fi TV show. The "man who defined Hamlet" turns out to be a ham, however, and the Cranes find themselves in the position of trying to sabotage the revival of his one-man stage show of Shakespeare soliloquies. Includes quotes from Hamlet, King Lear and Henry V. (DVD - on Frasier–The Complete Eighth Season)

MUCH ADO ABOUT SOMETHING (The Helpful Eye - Chili Films, in association with Australian Broadcasting Corp., Australia, 2001). Dir & Wrt Michael Rubbo. With (scenes from Hamlet) Dean Atkinson (Hamlet), Tony Barry (Gravedigger), Nicholas Cassim (Horatio).
