Changing Strategies of NAWSA and NWP

Suffrage and World War I

Surviving Prison and Protecting Civil Liberties

Changing Strategies of NAWSA and NWP

I have worked all my life for suffrage, and I am determined that I will never again stand up on the street corners of a great city appealing to every Tom, Dick, and Harry for the right of self-government.

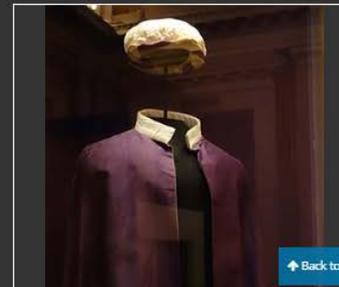

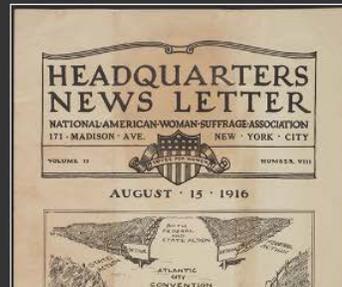

—Harriot Stanton Blatch, 1916

The momentum, which had started to build in 1910-1914, when seven states, all in the West, passed women's suffrage, came to a halt in 1915-1916. Suffragists experienced one demoralizing loss after another in state referendum campaigns across the country. During those two years, only one vote was taken in Congress on the federal amendment, a defeat in the House in January 1915. By the end of 1916, Carrie Chapman Catt, back at the helm of NAWSA, had begun to implement her "winning plan" and predicted that 1917 would be "The Woman's Hour." Alice Paul and the National Woman's Party, disappointed that women voters in the 1916 presidential election had failed to defeat Wilson, began 1917 by introducing the new and dramatic strategy of picketing the White House.

About this Collection

The records of the National American Woman Suffrage Association (NAWSA) span the years from 1839 to 1961 but are most numerous for the period 1890 to 1930. The collection consists of approximately 26,700 items (52,078 images), most of which were digitized from 73 microfilm reels. These records reflect NAWSA's multifaceted history, including the activities of precursor organizations involved in the abolition and women's rights movements, state and federal campaigns for women's suffrage, the ratification of the Nineteenth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, and international women's suffrage organizing.

The NAWSA was formed in 1890 by the merger of two organizations, both of which originated in 1869. After the Civil War, disagreements within the suffrage movement arose over supporting the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution. The National Woman Suffrage Association (NWSA) was formed under the leadership of Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony and supported a federal amendment for women's suffrage. The American Woman Suffrage Association (AWSA),

About this Collection

This collection includes 448 digitized photographs selected from approximately 2,650 print photographs in the Records of the National Woman's Party, a collection of more than 438,000 items, housed in the Manuscript Division of the Library of Congress. The images span from 1875 to 1938 but largely were created in the years between 1913 and 1922. The images depict the tactics used by the militant wing of the suffrage movement in the United States—including picketing, petitioning, pageants, parades and demonstrations, hunger strikes and imprisonment—as well as individual portraits of organization leaders and members. The photographs document the National Woman's Party's push for ratification of the 19th Amendment as well as its later efforts for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Founded in 1913 as the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage (CU), the National Woman's Party (NWP) introduced tactics and

About this Collection

For as long as socially and politically aware citizens have gathered to voice dissent, music has served a paramount role; the women's suffrage movement proves no exception. From local community suffrage meetings, to large-scale city-wide marches, to prison cells -- suffragists consistently unified, rallied, and asserted their unbreakable spirit in song.

Women's Suffrage in Sheet Music includes over 200 pieces of sheet music spanning the years 1838-1923, over half of which highlight women's emerging voices and suffrage efforts; the collection includes published rally songs and songsters written and compiled by notable composers and suffragists, as well as music manuscripts submitted for copyright deposit by everyday citizens. Anti-suffragists raised voices in song as well, and popular music of the era echoed anti-suffrage sentiments of the day with specific

About this Collection

The papers of suffragist, political strategist, and pacifist Carrie Lane Chapman Catt (1859-1947) span the years 1848-1950, with the bulk of the material dating from 1890 to 1920. The collection consists of approximately 9,500 items (11,851 images), most of which were digitized from 18 microfilm reels. Included are diaries, correspondence, speeches and articles, subject files, and miscellaneous items, including photographs and printed matter. The collection reflects Catt's steadfast dedication to two major ideals--the rights of women, particularly the right to vote, and world peace.

Although Catt served as president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association (NAWSA) from 1900 to 1904, during which time she helped found the International Woman Suffrage Association, she is perhaps best remembered for her second stint as NAWSA president, which began in 1915. Within a year of resuming the presidency, Catt had come to accept the criticism of the National Woman's Party (NWP) that NAWSA's state-by-state strategy was taking too long. A brilliant strategist, she unveiled her secret "Winning Plan," a two-pronged attack that called for the careful coordination of state work (which meant reducing resources

Although Catt served as president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association (NAWSA) from 1900 to 1904, during which time she helped found the International Woman Suffrage Association, she is perhaps best remembered for her second stint as NAWSA president, which began in 1915. Within a year of resuming the presidency, Catt had come to accept the criticism of the National Woman's Party (NWP) that NAWSA's state-by-state strategy was taking too long. A brilliant strategist, she unveiled her secret "Winning Plan," a two-pronged attack that called for the careful coordination of state work (which meant reducing resources in Southern states that were hemorrhaging funds but had no chance of succeeding) with an aggressive nonpartisan lobbying effort in Washington for a federal amendment. By the end of 1916, both NAWSA and the NWP were working toward the federal amendment, and it is Catt and Alice Paul of the NWP, as the respective leaders of the two largest national suffrage organizations, who have received most of the credit for securing the passage and ratification of the amendment.

Most of Catt's papers relate to her efforts to secure the ballot for women. General Correspondence and Subject File series in the collection reveal the tactics she employed in achieving this goal, first in New York and then nationally. After the adoption of the Nineteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution in 1920, the focus of the collection shifts to Catt's increasing concern with the settlement of international problems and the establishment of a world peace organization.

A finding aid (PDF and HTML) to the Carrie Chapman Catt Papers is available online with links to the digital content on this site.

The collection is arranged in six series:

Diaries, 1911-1923 (Reels 1-2)

Typescript account of Catt's travels. Includes duplicates. Arranged chronologically. Of particular note are the diaries, with embedded postcards, photographs, and other illustrations, recounting in detail Catt's trip around the world on behalf of woman suffrage in 1911-1912.

General Correspondence, circa 1890-1947 (Reels 2-7)

Letters received and copies of letters sent. Arranged alphabetically. A substantial amount of the correspondence is with prominent leaders of the women's movement, including Grace Abbott, Jane Addams, Viscountess Nancy Witcher Langhorne Astor, Alice Stone Blackwell, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Ida Husted Harper, Mary Garrett Hay, Clara Hyde, Julia Clifford Lathrop, Rosette Suzanne Manus, Katherine Dexter McCormick, Maud Wood Park, Mary Gray Peck, Helen Rogers Reid, Rosa Schneiderman, Berika

There are many ways to transcribe documents, and many crowdsourcing projects ask volunteers to transcribe in different ways. This section explains the By the People transcription conventions. Our primary goals are to improve search functionality within the Library's website, and the accessibility of documents for people who use screen readers or other assistive technology. The Library of Congress website cannot search for formatted text such as superscripts or underlining, so we ask that you not try to capture this kind of information. The following instructions were created with the Library's website search functionality in mind, and with the intention of making these pages a pleasure to hear aloud. It is also our goal to preserve the original spelling, grammar, and punctuation of the documents, in order to honor the original creators' historical reality and stylistic choices. We hope these instructions answer most of the issues you will encounter as you transcribe, but if not please be in contact via the By the People project discussion forum called History Hub or email. History Hub is a separate website requiring its own username and password.

In what order should I transcribe?

Transcribe text in the order it appears on the page. If there is more than one page in an image, transcribe both pages one after the other. You can use two hard returns ("enter" or "return" keys) to divide the two pages, which will make it easier for the next volunteer to review. In some rare cases an author writes across two pages rather than

The Blackwells: An Extraordinary Family

Discover the extraordinary history of one family's commitment to social reform movements such as abolition, women's suffrage, and temperance. Blackwell family members include Lucy Stone and her daughter, Alice Stone Blackwell, who were both prominent in the women's rights and women's suffrage movements.

These papers are part of the "Suffrage: Women Fight for the Vote" topical campaign, which brings together stories from people on the front lines of the largest reform movement in American history. Explore the long struggle for equality through the diaries, letters, and speeches of the men and women who fought for the right to vote and changed political history 100 years ago.

Suffrage: Women Fight for the Vote

The struggle for women's voting rights—considered the largest reform movement in American history—lasted more than seven decades, from 1848 to 1920. Determined women organized, lectured, petitioned, lobbied, paraded, picketed, and went to jail for daring to support suffrage. Explore the papers of leading suffragists such as Susan E. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Mary Church Terrell, Carrie Chapman Catt, Anna E. Dickinson, Lucy Stone, and Alice Stone Blackwell.

The Blackwells: An Extraordinary Family

Nearly two centuries of the Blackwell family's daily lives are documented in correspondence, diaries, speeches, and other papers. Blackwell family members include Lucy Stone (1818-1893); her husband, Henry Browne Blackwell (1825-1909); and their daughter, Alice Stone Blackwell (1857-1950), all of whom were prominent in the women's rights and women's suffrage movements. Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell (1821-1910), the first woman to earn a medical degree in the United States and her adopted daughter, Kitty Barry Blackwell (1848-1936), feature prominently in the papers. Other Blackwell family members are also represented within the collection, including Dr. Emily Blackwell, another pioneering woman doctor, and Antoinette Louisa Brown Blackwell, the first woman ordained as a minister in the Congregational Church. Transcribing these pages will allow you to explore the long struggle for equality through the diaries, letters, and speeches of the men and women who fought for equal rights.
