

SCENE IN A NEW HAMPSHIRE COURT.—GENERAL PIERCE EXAMINING A WITNESS.

Pierce (to the Witness) You are sworn to tell the truth, Sir, and how dare you say you carried that bureau out of the house, without assistance, when you know it takes three men to lift it?
Witness (Wal, General. I did carry that bureau without help, and I did'nt fasint either, no you did, before that battle, in Mexico.
 (Laughter in the court. Pierce sits down in confusion.)

Pub. at the office of Yankee Notion's 58 Nassau St. N.Y.

SCENE IN A NEW HAMPSHIRE VILLAGE.—PIERCE THE GOOD SAMARITAN

Pierce (to ragged boy) Hallo, boy, what are you crying about?
Boy them three boys is a eating sticks of candy, and I've no money to buy any. Hee! hee!
Pierce I s'pose that's a hard case. See, boy, you're a stranger to me, but I have a benevolent heart and cannot bear to see any one in distress without helping them. So, here's a cent for you, buy a stick of candy, and remember to vote for Pierce, if ever he is nominated for President.

L. W. Young Lith. 58 Nassau St. N.Y.