

A figure of the whole world, wherein are set forth the two essentiall parts before mentioned, that is to say, the cleuen heavens and the foure E'ements.

CHAP. IIII.

A demonstration to proue the pluralitie of the heavens.

Ow is it to be proued that there is such multiplici-tie of heavens, sith to the eye it seemeth one whole bodie?

If there were not diuers heavens and diuers
motions, there should neither be generation nor corruption of any thing; for all things then should be as one
